The signal at the Light-House was thrown out again on Saturday; but the wind has hitherto prevented the arrival of any more vessels. The Admiral has a signal now flying at his maintop-mast head. I wish it was in my power to construe it.

Agreeable to your Excellency's desire, as fast as I can find trustworthy persons, I shall give them directions to make diligent search after such characters as you have described, and, upon good ground of suspicion, to apprehend and carry them to Head-Quarters, or bring them to me for further examination, as may be most convenient.

Eleven o'clock.—This moment an explanation of the above signal occurs. Part of the fleet are come to sail. I shall proceed journalwise to inform your Excellency of their movements, till the bearer, who is gone to see Colonel Tupper, returns.

One o'clock.—They are still coming to sail; near, or quite fifty sail, are got out to sea—about half of them brigs, schooners, and sloops, one or two frigates, and the remainder transport-ships. Their course shaped for Cape-Cod. May not this division be bound for Martha's Vineyard, and the Islands in that Sound, to procure fresh provision for the fleet, which is to rendezvous at Halifax, and from thence to proceed to Quebeck?

Three o'clock.—My servant, who was directed to take an account of the number that have sailed, informs me there are in all fifty-two. One transport-brig is just arrived. I expected Mr. Ward would return with Colonel Tupper, and have dined with me. From them I hoped to have gained further intelligence, but am disappointed. I hear the Colonel is preparing a formidable fire-raft, which I wish may effectually operate, but fear a single one will avail little.

Your Excellency's tender concern for the restoration of my health (which, thanks to the Father of Mercies, is much mended) lays me under a fresh obligation to subscribe myself, with cordial gratitude and esteem, your Excellency's obliged and faithful humble servant,

JOSIAH QUINCY.

To General Washington.

P. S. Five o'clock.—The Admiral has just now hoisted another signal—a pendant under his flag. Two more ships are under sail, going out of the harbour.

Seven o'clock.—Mr. Ward and Colonel Tupper are just arrived. They are of opinion that the ships which sailed to-day have carried off the Tories, and are bound with them to Lewisburgh.

Tuesday morning.—Mr. Ward's tarrying in town gives me a further opportunity to inform your Excellency that the fleet, consisting of about one hundred sail, (chiefly large ships,) remain as they were last night.

Ten o'clock.—The same signal is now flying at the Admiral's maintop-mast head as was hoisted yesterday morning. Scarce hoisted, before it was lowered again; and in about half an hour, a blue flag is flying, at mizen-top-mast head, and a pendant at his mizen peak.

Eleven o'clock.—The above signals are changed for a red ensign hoisted just under his mizen-yard. A signal is just now hoisted upon the top of the Light-House, for vessels in the offing; and immediately followed by a blue broad pendant from the middle of the Tower. In less than ten minutes, the signal first mentioned, viz: a pendant, is flying from his maintop-mast head.

Twelve o'clock.—A red ensign is now flying at his mizen-top-mast head, a blue ensign at his starboard mizen shrouds, and a pendant thrown out between, by hand, and immediately taken in again.

Two o'clock.—The sixty gun-ship, in King Road, is come to sail, and going down to Nantasket. The Admiral's red ensign is struck. The blue one remains. A large transport-ship and a brig are just arrived within the light.

If the foregoing intelligence, and the mode of it, should prove so agreeable to your Excellency as to desire the continuance of it while the fleet remains, please to let me know your pleasure any time before to-morrow night, until which time I shall continue to note down every remarkable occurrence. Ut suprà, J. Q.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO LANDON CARTER.

Cambridge, March 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have been honoured with your favour of the 20th ultimo; and although I might intrench myself behind the parade of great business, with as much propriety as most men, yet I shall neither avail myself of it, nor be debarred the pleasure of making this address in testimony of your kind remembrance, and the favourable sentiments you are pleased to express of me.

To give you a detail of my distresses, on account of powder, arms, and other articles of almost equal importance in the military arrangement, would afford little amusement to you, and no profit to me. I shall therefore pass them over, and inform you that, having received a small supply of powder, (very inadequate to our wants,) I resolved to take possession of Dorchester-Point, lying east of Boston, looking directly into it, and commanding absolutely the enemy's lines on the Neck. To effect this, (which I knew would force the enemy to an engagement, or make the town too hot for them,) it was necessary, in the first instance, to possess two heights, (those mentioned in General Burgoyne's letter to Lord Stanley in his account of the battle on Bunker's Hill;) which had the entire command of this point. The ground being frozen upwards of two feet deep, and as impenetrable as a rock, nothing could be attempted with earth; we were obliged, therefore, to provide an amazing quantity of chandeliers, fascines, &c., for the work; and on the night of the 4th, after a severe and heavy cannonade and bombardment of the town the three preceding nights, to divert the enemy's attention from our real object, we carried them on under cover of darkness, and took full possession of those heights without the loss of a single man.

Upon their discovering it next morning, great preparations were made for attacking us; but not being ready before the afternoon, and the weather getting very tempestuous, much blood was saved, and a very important blow (to one side or the other) prevented. That this remarkable interposition of Providence is for some wise purpose, I have no doubt; but as the principal design of the manœuvre was to draw the enemy to an engagement under disadvantages; as a premeditated plan was laid for this purpose, and seemed to be succeeding to my utmost wish; and as no men seemed better disposed to make the appeal than ours did upon that occasion, I can scarce forbear lamenting the disappointment. However, the enemy, thinking (as we have since learned) that we had got too formidably posted before the second morning to be much hurt by them, and apprehending great annoyance from our works, resolved upon a precipitate retreat; and accordingly embarked in as much hurry, and as much confusion as ever troops did, the 17th instant, not having got their transports half fitted, and leaving King's property in Boston to the amount, as is supposed, of thirty or forty thousand pounds, in provisions, stores, &c., &c. Many pieces of cannon, some mortars, and a number of shot, shells, &c., &c., are also left; their baggage-wagons, artillery-carts, &c., which they have been eighteen months and more preparing, were destroyed, thrown into the docks, and found drifted on every shore. In short, Dunbar's destruction of stores, after General Braddock's defeat, was but a faint resemblance of what we found here.

The enemy now lie in Nantasket-Road, (about nine miles below Boston;) where, and in King's Road, they have been ever since their embarkation. How to account for their stay there, I know not. The inhabitants of Boston think it is to arrange the lading of the transports, which were thrown in in such disorder as to render it unsafe to put to sea until a new regulation should take place. Others think they mean to pass over the equinoctial gales before they put to sea. But it is a doubt with me whether they may not be waiting an opening (now they have got their whole force collected, no posts to guard, and, as I understand, a reinforcement from the West-Indies) to retrieve the honour of their arms, which seems, in the general opinion of people here, to have undergone some disgrace in this precipitate retreat.

They have left all their works standing on Bunker's Hill, &c.; and very formidable they are. Boston has shared a much better fate than could possibly be expected; the damage done to the houses being nothing equal to report. We are now in full possession of the town, and are fortifying the harbour to prevent a return, if they should incline to it.

As New-York is the most important object they can have in view, on account of its command of Hudson's River, leading into Canada, and separating the Northern and Southern Colonies, it appeared necessary for me to take measures to secure it, and, therefore, I detached six regiments instantly to that place; and, as soon as I see the coast clear, shall follow immediately with the rest of the Army, leaving a few regiments for the security of this Government, and for executing such works as are laid out for the defence of Boston and the harbour.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable Landon Carter, Esq., Virginia.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOSEPH REED.

MY DEAR SIR: Since my last, things remain nearly in statu quo. The enemy have the best knack at puzzling people I ever met with in my life. They have blown up, burnt, and demolished the Castle totally, and are now all in Nantasket-Road. They have been there ever since Wednesday. What they are doing, the Lord knows. Various are the conjectures. The Bostonians think their stay absolutely necessary to fit them for sea, as the vessels, neither in themselves nor their lading, were in any degree fit for a voyage, having been loaded in great haste and much disorder.

der. This opinion is corroborated by a deserter from one of the transports, who says they have yards, booms, and bowsprits yet to fix. Others again think that they have a mind to pass over the equinoctial gale before they put out, not being in the best condition to stand one; others, that they are waiting a reinforcement, which I believe has arrived, as I have had an account of the sailing of fifteen vessels from the West-Indies. But my opinion of the matter is, that they want to retrieve their disgrace before they go off, and I think a favourable opportunity presents itself to them. They have now got their whole force into one collected body, and no posts to guard. We have detached six regiments to New-York, and have many points to look to, and, on Monday next, ten regiments of Militia, which were brought in to serve till the first of April, will be disengaged. From former experience, we have found it as practicable to stop a torrent as these people when their time is up. If this should be the case now, what more favourable opening can the enemy wish for to make a push upon our lines, nay, upon the back of our lines at Roxbury, as they can land two miles from them and pass behind? I am under more apprehension from them now than ever, and am taking every precaution I can to guard against the evil; but we have a kind of people to deal with who will not fear danger till the bayonet is at their breast; and then they are susceptible enough of it. I am fortifying Fort-Hill, in Boston, and demolishing the lines on the Neck there, as they are a defence against the country only, and making such other dispositions as appear necessary for a general defence. I can spare no more men till I see the enemy's back fairly turned, and then I shall hasten towards New-York.

You mention Mr. Webb, in one of your letters, for an assistant. He will be agreeable enough to me, if you think him qualified for the business. What kind of a hand he writes, I know not—I believe but a cramped one; latterly none at all, as he has either the gout or rheumatism, or both. He is a man fond of company and gayety, and is of a tender constitution. Whether, therefore, such a person would answer your purpose so well as a plodding, methodical person, whose sole business should be to arrange his papers in such order as to produce any one at any instant it is called for, and capable at the same time of composing a letter, is what you have to consider. I can only add, that I have no one in view myself, and wish you success in your choice; being, with great truth and sincerity, dear sir, your affectionate servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Joseph Reed, Esq.

P. S. I have taken occasion to hint to a certain gentleman in this camp, without introducing names, my apprehensions of his being concerned in trade. He protests most solemnly that he is not, directly nor indirectly.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO COLONEL WENTWORTH.

Cambridge, March 25, 1776.

SIR: Captain Frazier delivered me your favour of the 21st instant. I have laid it and the Captain's petition before his Excellency, who has no objection to the gentlemen belonging to the Susanna seeking an opportunity to return home, which he will give them liberty to do, upon their giving their parole not to act inimical to America during the present contest.

The Captain sets forth, that he has been plundered of his private property to the amount of sixty-three pounds thirteen shillings and three pence sterling.

This is a circumstance which gives great dissatisfaction to the General. It has been his positive orders to the commanders of those armed vessels to guard against this so ignominious behaviour of the people on board their vessels. The only remedy at present that I can think of is, to get the sufferers' attestation of their loss. Let them be paid. The Captains must find out who the plunderers were; and, besides such punishment as is due for their crimes, the sum paid must be deducted from their share of the prize. If they cannot fix upon the defaulters, it must become a charge against the one-third given to the captors by the Continent.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To Colonel Joshua Wentworth, Portsmouth.

DAVID WOODWARD TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Hanover, March 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed is a copy of our proceedings, which, we hope, will be approved. We have seen a resolve of the Congress relative to such cases, but imagined the necessity that immediate measures should be taken to suppress such a disorder justified our proceeding as we have done. We could wish to have our duty in that and other cases more particularly stated, that we may not be exposed to exceed our bounds. As there is a prospect of further discoveries of the like kind in these parts, and as persons not disposed to good order, taking advantage of our broken state, have already begun to commit outrages on the property of others, which, if passed unnoticed, and no measures are directed for redress, will be made use of as precedents for other high-handed iniquity, and the person and property of no one be secure.

We are, gentlemen, with much respect, your most obedient and humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

DAVID WOODWARD, Chairman.

To the Committee of Safety of New-Hampshire.

Colony of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, Grafton County, ss.

At a meeting of the Committee of Safety for the Town of Hanover, in said County, at the house of John Paine, Innholder in said Hanover, March 23, 1776—

Present: Lieutenant David Woodward, Chairman; Captain Aaron Storrs, Bezaleel Woodward, Esq., Clerk.

Bezaleel Phelps, of Norwich, in the Colony of New-York, Yeoman, was brought before this Committee by virtue of a warrant issued by Bezaleel Woodward and Aaron Storrs, (two of the Committee,) predicated on his having in his custody, and detaining, a certain Note of this Colony, bearing the face of a six-shilling Bill, which is supposed to have been fraudulently altered and increased as to the value or sum therein expressed by said Phelps, as by said warrant more fully may appear.

Respondent pleads Not guilty.

After a full hearing of evidences in said case, said Phelps confessed that he had burnt said bill, being conscious that it was altered; and that, in case he may be excused from penalty for detaining said bill when he knew it was counterfeit, he will disclose to this Committee the author of that and sundry other bills, and discover where some of said bills are.

Whereupon, said proposal is agreed to, only that he pay costs hitherto made in the affair till they can be regularly recovered of some other person. Costs taxed at forty shillings.

Said Phelps then desired Lemuel Paine, of said Hanover, to produce a certain forty-shilling Bill which he received on the evening of the 15th instant of Andrew Wheatly, of Lebanon; which said Paine, on request, accordingly did; which Bill is adjudged by this Committee to have been altered from a three-shilling Bill, and which said Lemuel, on his oath, declares he received of said Wheatly, as aforesaid.

Committee adjourned to to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock.

March 24.—Met according to adjournment.

Present: Lieutenant David Woodward, Chairman; Captain Aaron Storrs, Bezaleel Woodward, Esq., Clerk, Committee of Hanover. John Wheatley, Esq., Major John Slapp, Major John Griswold, Mr. Azariah Bliss, Committee of Lebanon.

First. Charles Hill, of Lebanon, Innholder, is brought before these Committees, for putting off and passing counterfeit money; at which time, Solomon Cushman, of Norwich, produced a forty-shilling Bill of the Colony of New-Hampshire, No. 3260, emitted July 25, 1775, and payable December 20, 1779; which is adjudged by these Committees to have been altered; which Bill said Cushman, on his oath, declared he received of said Charles Hill, in payment for a silk handkerchief; and said Hill is not able to inform us of whom he received it.

Whereupon, it is considered,

And Ordered, That said Hill pay to said Cushman the value of said Bill, viz: forty shillings, and costs. Judgment satisfied.

Second. John Stockbridge, of Hanover, produced to this Committee a ten-shilling and six-pence Bill of the Colony of Connecticut, dated January 2, 1775; payable January 2, 1777; which is adjudged by this Committee to have been altered from a two-shilling and six-pence Bill by some evil-minded person; and the said John, on his oath, declares he received said Bill of Ebenezer Mattoon, of Captain Green's Company, in Colonel Bedel's Regiment, in payment of a debt, some time in the beginning of last week.

It is, therefore, considered,

And Ordered, That the said Mattoon ought, and is hereby ordered, to pay the said John Stockbridge the apparent value of said Bill, viz: ten shillings and six pence, and costs.

N. B. March 29. It appears that said Bill passed through sundry hands, from one Joseph Skinner to said Mattoon.

The Committee then resumed the examination relative to the Bill laid before this Committee yesterday by Lemuel Paine, relative to which Charles Hill, being sworn, testifies: That, being at this house on the evening of the 15th instant, he saw Joseph Skinner, of Captain Green's Company, in Colonel Bedel's Regiment, put a bill into the hand of Andrew Wheatley, of Lebanon, that he might get it changed.

Bezaleel Phelps, before-named, being sworn, testifies: That he saw Andrew Wheatley give a forty-shilling Bill to Lemuel Paine to be changed; and afterwards, as the said Phelps was going to Dr. Eager's with said Skinner, said Skinner told this deponent that it was his Bill with which Wheatley paid the reckoning at said Paine's; and added, "and I made it myself, and I have altered a good many Bills from three shillings to forty shillings, and I have known many more altered, both here and at Cambridge; and a person may make his fortune by it in a little time." He also said that all the money he spent at Cambridge he altered; and further said to said Phelps, that, if he told any body of it, he would kill him. Said Phelps further testifies: That he saw said Skinner cut certain pieces from a certain book or pamphlet, to use in altering Bills; and said Skinner told him he had cut pieces from it before to use for that purpose, and that he would not take a thousand pounds for the book. Phelps described the book, and informed particularly where he had left it, (which, being produced, exhibit strong grounds to apprehend, from its appearance, that it has been abundantly used for that purpose.) Said Phelps further testifies: When said Skinner had some paste to use in altering money, Mrs. Winton, coming into the room, asked what it was for. Dr. Eager replied, to paste books; when he was sundry times in the room whilst Skinner was altering Bills with the paste, both before and after Mrs. Winton asked the question. Said Phelps further testifies: That he saw said Skinner alter a Bill to a forty-shilling, last Sunday; and this deponent observed Dr. Eager to be present part of the time. Asked Skinner whether the Doctor knew of his altering Bills? To which Skinner replied, "Damn him, yes." Said Phelps further testifies: That Dr. Eager, at another time, examined him whether his father could make plates to stamp money; "for, (said he,) if we had plates, we could make money very conveniently at my house, and nobody would mistrust us." Said Eager, at the same time, added, that the reason of his going to Canada last fall was, because he was informed he could there get large quantities of counterfeit paper money; but they lied to him, and he would not be caught again in going to Canada for nothing.

Whereupon, it is considered and adjudged by these Committees that said Joseph Skinner ought to pay to said Lemuel Paine the apparent value of said Bill uttered and put off to said Paine, viz: forty shillings, as appears by the foregoing evidences, and the cost of this examination, taxed as follows, viz:

Time and expenses of three Committee-men from Hanover two days, (and one all night on the service,) at 20s. each, - - - -	£3	0	0
Four Committee-men from Lebanon one and a half day, at 10s. - - - - -	2	0	0
Three copies of the case at large, with the evidences, - - - - -	0	10	0
Entry of the case on record at large, - -	0	10	0
Attendance of two evidences one day each, at 12s.; one evidence two days, at 8s. -	1	0	0
Costs brought on said Phelps in the affair, -	2	0	0

And whereas the said Joseph Skinner is supposed to be guilty of altering said Bill and sundry others; and as he now belongs to Colonel Timothy Bedel's Regiment, in the Northern Department of the Continental Army:

It is Ordered by this Committee, That copies of this examination, signed by the Chairman and Clerk, be delivered to the said Colonel Bedel, (who is now present,) for the purpose, that he may cause the said Joseph Skinner to be apprehended, and that he may be made to pay the above-mentioned damage and costs; and that he may be further examined touching his altering said Bills, and dealt relative thereto, as to law and justice appertains.

And it is further Ordered, That copies of the foregoing procedure, signed by the Chairman and Clerk, be transmitted to the Committee of Safety for this Province, and also to General Washington; and that they write a respectful letter to his Excellency, setting forth the grounds this Committee have to suspect alterations of money in like manner in the Army at Cambridge.

Per order of the Committee:

DAVID WOODWARD, Chairman.

A true copy from the Minutes. Attest:

BEZALEEL WOODWARD, Clerk.

N. B. March 29, 1776.—Notwithstanding the foregoing respecting Dr. Eager, this Committee are fully convinced of his innocence in the matter.

Per order:

BEZALEEL WOODWARD, Clerk.

WESTMORELAND COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, March 26, 1776.

A certain Henry Glass being summoned before the Committee, to answer a complaint preferred against him by Martin Fisher, and appearing to the same; and it having been proved that he declared "the Slaves in the part of the country he lived in, being ill-used, he thought they would be justifiable in burning their Masters' houses over their heads, which would be the least revenge they could take;" and upon being charged by the same Martin Fisher with having broken through the Association, in demanding a higher price for his goods—particularly Coffee and Sugar—than he was allowed to take, and being threatened with a complaint against him for such breach, "he damned the Committee, and declared he did not regard them, and would sell his goods as he pleased, and in their teeth." As this conduct of said Glass happened before the institution of the Court appointed to take cognizance of such matters, the Committee have thought the most proper mode of dealing with him is, to hold him out to the censure of the publick; which they now do.

And Ordered, accordingly, That these proceedings be transmitted to the Printer to be published.

Copy from the Minutes:

JAMES DAVENPORT, Clerk.

GEORGE PLATER TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Sotterly-Hall, March 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honour of yours of the 19th instant, communicating your appointment of me, with Brigadier John Dent, to co-operate with the Commissioners of Virginia in erecting beacons on the shores of Potomack River. It will give me the highest pleasure to be in any manner serviceable to my country; and I only lament that my abilities are not equal to my inclination; but upon this, and, I hope, on every occasion, be assured they shall be exerted; and that I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE PLATER.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DANIEL AND SAMUEL HUGHES.

Annapolis, March 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We received a letter yesterday from Mr. Lux, advising us of your having cast and bored one eighteen-pounder, and that you expected to have four others finished by this time. Our Board have appointed Captain Burgess to prove them, and desire you will forward them to Baltimore as fast as you can get them ready to send off, as they are greatly wanting there.

We are, &c.

To Messrs. Daniel and Samuel Hughes.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL JOSHUA BEALL.

Annapolis, March 26, 1776.

SIR: We send you, enclosed, commissions to fill up Captain Warring's Company, and shall do the same by Captain Richardson's, when you transmit us the name of a proper person for Ensign. We send you also an order on the Treasury for fifty pounds, for which you will hereafter render us accounts. It will serve to pay for wood, candles, expenses, guards, &c.

We apprehend you have not much more than one ton of powder remaining at Bladensburg, part of which will be ordered soon to Piscataway, some part left where it is, and the remainder will be ordered up to our magazine in the neighbourhood of Annapolis, now getting ready. In the mean time, we desire you would keep a guard of six men, to relieve each other, (two only we think sufficient to be on duty,) their pay and rations the same as when in actual service; upon which plan you are to make out the accounts for the attendance of the guard heretofore.

We are, &c.

To Colonel Joshua Beall.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN BURGESS.

Annapolis, March 26, 1776.

SIR: The Council of Safety have appointed you to prove the cannon to be supplied this Province by Messrs. Daniel and Samuel Hughes, and request you will immediately repair, for that purpose, to their works at Antietam. We enclose you an order on the Committee of Observation for the Middle District of Frederick County for what powder will be wanting, and will defray any expenses you may necessarily incur on that service, as well as satisfy you for your trouble. We are, &c.

To Captain Burgess.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

Annapolis, March 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We are not as yet fully determined as to the schooner of Mr. Lux, fitted out for a tender. We would wish her to be in such a situation as to act, in case of danger, upon short notice; but we would not have men enlisted, or provisions purchased for her, till further orders from this Board, or the Convention. We are informed, from divers persons of credit, and, amongst others, from Captain Nicholson himself, that she is a dull sailer. If so, and we can get a better, we must remove the guns, &c., on board the tender hereafter to be purchased, and make the best of the schooner. We would not have her go any distance, if she is likely to be instrumental in losing us a number of brave men and all her stores. We have sent an express with order to Captain Burgess to try Hughes's eighteen-pounders, and request you will order bullets to be cast, as soon as you know the proper size.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Baltimore County.

R. ALEXANDER AND T. JOHNSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, March 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosed contains a state of the powder and arms we have sent from hence. Willing & Morris still assure us they daily expect an arrival of powder to enable them to furnish us with the quantity they contracted for. They were but partly interested in the saltpetre which arrived, and had not the management of it; nor was it in their power to procure any of it to be manufactured for us, the Congress having, immediately on the arrival of the saltpetre, taken up all for the use of the powder-mills. If you think it necessary, we have no doubt but that we can borrow a ton of powder more, as it begins now to come in from the mills. We should be inclined to borrow and forward it, but that we think the additional expense and risk cannot be justified but by necessity. We should have a return of the muskets furnished the Hornet and Wasp, with the powder; but the Congress have it not in their power. Mr. Rittenhouse has been pressed to get the plates done. He has been lately chosen into the Assembly, which has been sitting a good while past. He promises to let us have plates to begin (enough for one sheet) next week; the paper was to be finished about this time. Enclosed you have the pay in the marine service, and for three Independent companies. You will be pleased to attend to the memorandum at bottom.

There is no getting camp-kettles or canteens on any terms, or, at least, on such terms as you could submit to. Instead of canteens, the Congress has been obliged to substitute little kegs. There is no arrival here of any tin. The price of duck, and, indeed, of every kind of linen, exceeds here what it does with you. Anything of the kind cannot be got at scarce any price; nor could it when T. J. got to Philadelphia; wherefore no attempt was made to get knapsacks and haversacks. Proper materials may arrive in Potomack, or from Vanbibber, time enough, we hope. What was sent down of Vanbibber's cargo will answer for these purposes, and for tents. The duck is too heavy for any use about our troops. We have sold the Holland duck at eight pounds ten shillings, and the Russia duck at seven pounds ten shillings a piece. The sale was to the Congress for the use of the frigates, and to the Virginians for their armed vessels.

Immediately on T. J.'s coming to Philadelphia, he and R. A. mentioned the Defence to the Marine Committee, either to sell or have insured. They seemed not very fond of taking her off our hands. Before the matter was totally given up Captain Squire's expedition was defeated. T. J. confirms our opinion, that if any depredations should take place after we had parted from the vessel, it would be imputed to the sale of her; and there is no idea of Congress taking her off our hands, but on subjecting her to the uncontrolled orders of the Congress. We have, therefore, thought it best to let this matter rest till the Convention. Mr. R. A. has received of the Congress eight thousand two hundred and fifty pounds, to exchange for gold and silver; of which, on C. S.'s order, he let him have one hundred and five. The rest Mr. Buchanan comes down with. The change for the money T. J. brought up, and for Major Jenifer's half-Joes is put up separately. Would it not be well that some person in Baltimore Town should be specially appointed to take charge and keep accounts of all things sent there for the publick use.

We congratulate you on the evacuation of Boston. We have not yet received any account of the course the fairies went. Some think they are destined for New-York; others for the southward; but most for Halifax.

We are, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient servants,

R. ALEXANDER,
THOMAS JOHNSON.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

ELBRIDGE GERRY TO JAMES WARREN.

Philadelphia, March 26, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: Two days ago the agreeable news of the evacuation of Boston reached this place, on which give me leave to congratulate you. What an occurrence is this to be known in Europe! How are Parliamentary pretensions to be reconciled? Eight or ten thousand British Troops, it has been said, are sufficient to overrun America; and yet that number of their veterans, posted in Boston, (a peninsula fortified by nature, defended by works the product of two years' industry, surrounded by navigable waters, supported by ships-of-war, and commanded by their best Generals,) are driven off by about one-thirtieth of the power of America.

Surely the invincible veterans laboured under some great disadvantage from want of provisions or military stores, which the Americans were amply provided with! Directly the reverse. They had provisions enough, ammunition, muskets, and accoutrements for every man, and a piece of ordnance for every fifteen; while the Americans were almost destitute of all these, and after twelve months' collection, had only a sufficiency of powder to tune their cannon for six or eight days. I am at a loss to know how Great Britain will reconcile all this to her military glory. Her conquests in America, I am certain, will never do it. Congress have voted thanks to the General, and all the officers and soldiers of the Army, and ordered a medal of gold, with a suitable device, to be presented to the former. I hope, however, that this success will not abate your exertions to obtain, by your own manufactures, sufficient supplies of military articles; for on these, and the discipline of your Militia, depend your liberty.

You are desirous of knowing what capital measures are proposed in Congress. I refer you to Colonel Orne for what is done concerning privateering, and I hope soon that all your ports will be open, and a free trade be allowed with all nations. This will not, in itself, satisfy you; and I hope nothing will, short of a determination of America to hold her rank in the creation, and give law to herself. I doubt not this will soon take place; and am sure New-England will not be satisfied with less, since not only the Government, but the people of Great Britain, are corrupt, and destitute of publick virtue.

I sincerely wish you would originate instructions, expressed with decency and firmness—your own style—and give your sentiments as a Court in favour of independency. I am certain it would turn many doubtful minds, and produce a reversal of the contrary instructions adopted by some Assemblies. Some timid minds are terrified at the word Independence. If you think caution in this respect good policy, change the name.

America has gone such lengths she cannot recede; and I am convinced that a few weeks, or months at farthest, will convince her of the fact; but the fruit must have time to ripen in some of the other Colonies. In New-England, the hot-bed of sedition, (as North has impudently called Boston;) it has already come to maturity. Would it not be good policy for the New-England Governments to think of the matter, and adopt similar measures? Perhaps a circular letter, and the publication of your instructions, would accomplish much. Is it not curious that the British Ministry should know so little of our feelings or character, that, after seizing our property, burning our towns, and destroying their inhabitants, they should make an act to interdict our trade, and suppose that Towns, Counties, and Colonies will bury in oblivion all former abuses, and subscribe themselves slaves, in order to be rescued from the severities of this commercial tyranny? This is an instance of the wisdom and policy of the British Ministry! Have they not yet ascertained that we know our rights, or, at least, that we think we know them? Have they not learned that we can defend them, too?

I remain your friend,

E. GERRY.

To James Warren, President of the Provincial Congress at Watertown.

PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

March 26, 1776. }

Whereas the Continental Congress did lately Resolve, "that if any person shall be so lost to all virtue and regard for this country as to refuse to receive the Bills of Credit emitted by the authority of Congress, or should obstruct or discourage the currency thereof, and be convicted by the Committee of the City, County, or District, where he should reside, such person should be deemed, published, and treated as an enemy of this country, and be precluded from all trade or intercourse with the inhabitants of these Colonies;" and whereas Benjamin Sharpless, of this city, being charged with a breach of this Resolve, in refusing to receive the above Bills of Credit in payment, appeared before the Committee for the City and Liberties, acknowledged the truth of the charge, and alleged in his defence scruples of conscience thereupon, as being money emitted for the purpose of war:

The Committee, pursuant to the trust reposed in them, proceeded to consider the charge and defence; and were of opinion that, if such allegation was true, yet, as the Congress have made no exception, and as such conduct tends to subvert the most essential rights and liberties of their fellow-citizens, and, by destroying the means of defence, to expose their lives and properties to unavoidable ruin, it ought not to be admitted. But it appearing, by his own acknowledgment, that he has heretofore received, and does continue to receive, Bills of Credit emitted in this and the neighbouring Provinces, though frequently issued for the purposes of war; therefore, such objection is not well founded, nor the present pretence consistent with his former conduct. The Committee, therefore, (the party having declared he did not mean to appeal to any other Board,) do unanimously hold up to the world the said Benjamin Sharpless as an enemy to his country, and precluded from all trade or intercourse with the inhabitants of these Colonies.

Ordered, That the above be published.

Committee-Chamber, March 26, 1776.

Whereas it is represented to this Committee that some avaricious and designing persons are endeavouring, by various designs, to elude the late Resolutions of this Committee touching the prices of Sugar, Coffee, Rum, Molasses, Pepper, &c.: in order, therefore, that suitable measures may be immediately taken with such persons, the Committee will sit on the 29th instant, at six o'clock in the evening, at the Philosophical-Hall, in Second-street, in order to receive any complaints that may be made on that head. And they do request all persons who have any knowledge of such practices either to attend the Committee personally, or acquaint them by letter who the offenders are, and the circumstances of such offence, so far as they have come to their knowledge.

By order of the Committee of Inspection and Observation of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia:

NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Safety, March 26, 1776.

The Committee of Safety considering the critical situation of the City and Province of New-York, represented in the Letters from Brigadier-Generals Thompson and Lord Stirling, and the recommendation of the Continental Congress to this Committee on that subject,

Do Order and Resolve, That three Battalions of Militia be drafted out of the Militia of this Province, in the manner following, viz:

From Hunterdon County, four hundred and forty men; and from Burlington County, two hundred and twenty men; who are to join and form one Battalion.

From Somerset, two hundred and twenty men; from Sussex, two hundred and twenty men; and from Morris, two hundred and twenty men; who are to form another Battalion.

From Middlesex, one hundred men; from Monmouth, one hundred and forty men; from Essex, two hundred and twenty men; and from Bergen, two hundred men; which are likewise to join and form another Battalion.

The whole to march to the City of New-York with the greatest expedition, under the command of the Brigadier-Generals Dickerson and Livingston, and such Field-Officers, Captains, and Subalterns, as are necessary to command the said Battalions.

Resolved, That, in order to facilitate the service, twelve Wagons be furnished to the Generals to carry the baggage of the several Battalions.

Whereas, from the scarcity of Arms, the drafts may not all be properly provided with the same,

Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Companies of Militia to lend their Arms to such as may want them; and if a sufficient number cannot be obtained in a voluntary manner, the several Captains are hereby empowered to impress them, so as to completely equip such as are going upon the present important service; the Arms so lent or impressed, to be appraised by indifferent persons; if lost or damaged in action or real service, the value to be paid to the owner by the Province; if lost or injured by negligence, the occupier to make good the damages.

Resolved, That the Generals may draw on the Treasury of the Provincial Congress of New-Jersey for the sum of one thousand Pounds, if so much be necessary for the subsistence of the Troops on their march to the City of New-York.

By order of the Committee:

SAMUEL TUCKER, President.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

In Committee of Safety, New-York, March 26, 1776.

SIR: In the month of February last, the Provincial Congress received, amongst other things, resolutions of the honourable Continental Congress, dated the 17th, under the hands of the President and Secretary, "that the sum of thirty-five thousand Dollars be advanced to the Convention or Committee of Safety of New-York, for the support of the Troops employed for the defence of that Colony;" "that it be recommended to the Convention or Committee of Safety of New-York to contract with proper persons for supplying the said Troops with the Rations allowed by Congress, and Fuel and other necessaries, on the most reasonable terms in their power."

To prevent trouble, we enclose an exact copy of the said two resolutions, marked No. 1.

The Provincial Congress appointed a Committee to receive proposals of contracts for supplying the said troops, which Committee caused the rations and other necessaries to be supplied, to be published in the New-York newspapers; and, agreeable to their advertisement, received all proposals offered for that purpose, sealed up to prevent collusions as far as possible.

After every care and precaution taken, the Provincial Congress, on the 15th of March, accepted of the proposals of Mr. Abraham Livingston for supplying the said troops—his being the most reasonable that were offered; and on the 16th the contract was perfected and executed by five gentlemen, from different Counties, on behalf of the Provincial Congress, pursuant to the resolution above-mentioned, and by Mr. Abraham Livingston.

We enclose you a copy of the Contract, (No. 2,) and therefore need not repeat its contents.

Mr. Livingston has by bond given sufficient sureties, in the sum of thirty thousand pounds, to perform his contract; and the Provincial Congress have agreed to advance him five thousand pounds, and to pay him five thousand pounds at the expiration of every month, if the support of the troops by him supplied shall amount to that sum.

In pursuance of those agreements, Mr. Livingston has purchased provisions to a very large amount. The Provincial Congress were induced to make the said contract, not only because it was the most reasonable terms then in their power, but, considering the risk and expense of transportation, should any force obstruct the navigation between this city and King's County, or between the city and the Highlands, because the contract would be highly advantageous to the Continent.

Yesterday we saw a resolution of Congress, "That Carpenter Wharton, Commissary, be continued, agreeable to his contract, to supply with rations the Pennsylvania Battalions serving in New-York," and were favoured with a letter from Mr. Duane, recommending him as contractor for the regiments raised in the Colony, on the same terms he is allowed for the Pennsylvania Battalions. We are sorry that it is now out of our power to contract with that gentleman, even should he be willing to supply the troops here on the same terms he does the others.

The Provincial Congress of New-York were not only directed "to contract for the troops employed for the defence of that Colony," but the method directed appeared the most eligible, as the larger the contract offered, the more reasonable terms were to be expected, and could be afforded.

Should Congress determine to supersede what has been done in this Colony, as far forth as it relates to the Pennsylvania Battalions, we will endeavour to make the best terms we can with Mr. Livingston as to that part of his contract, and are inclined to believe he will not take any unreasonable advantages of the gentlemen bound to him in the contract, or of the publick.

Whatever further directions Congress may think proper in their wisdom to give in the premises, we would wish to receive with all convenient speed.

We have the honour to be, most respectfully, sir, your most obedient humble servants.

By order:

WILLIAM PAULDING, Chairman.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President, &c.

In Congress, February 17, 1776.

Resolved, That the sum of thirty-five thousand Dollars be advanced to the Convention or Committee of Safety of New-York, for the support of the Troops employed in the defence of that Colony, the said Convention or Committee of Safety to be accountable for the expenditure thereof; and that an order be drawn on the Treasurer for the above sum, in favour of the Delegates of that Colony, who are directed to forward the same with all convenient speed.

That it be recommended to the Convention or Committee of Safety of New-York to contract with proper persons for supplying the said Troops with the Rations allowed by Congress, and Fuel and other necessaries, on the most reasonable terms in their power.

Articles of Agreement indented and made this sixteenth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, between Abraham Livingston, of the City of New-York, Merchant, of the one part; and Nathaniel Woodhull, Isaac Roosevelt, Abraham Yates, Jun., Morris Graham, and William Paulding, and the survivor or survivors of them, on behalf of the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York, pursuant to a Resolution of the Continental Congress of the seventeenth day of February last past, of the other part, as follows, to wit:

The said Abraham Livingston doth hereby covenant, promise, and agree, to and with the said parties of the second part, and the survivor and survivors of them, that he, the said Abraham Livingston, shall and will furnish and supply such troops as are or shall be employed for the defence of this Colony in the City and County of New-York, King's County, and at the fortifications now erecting in the Highlands, for the term of six months from the date hereof, with good and wholesome provisions, and with soap and candles, agreeable to the rations or quantities allowed by the Continental Congress, at ten pence half-penny, New-York currency, per ration per man; each ration to consist of the following kinds and quantities of provisions, to wit: one pound of beef, or three-quarters of a pound of pork, or one pound of salt-fish, per day; one pound of bread or flour per day; three pints of peas or beans per week, or vegetables equivalent, at one dollar per bushel for peas or beans; one pint of milk per man per day, or at the rate of one seventy-second of a dollar; one quart of spruce beer or cider per man per day, or nine gallons of molasses for a hundred men per week; half a pint of rice or one pint of Indian meal per man per week; three pounds of candles to one hundred men per week for guards; and twenty-four pounds of soft or eight pounds of hard soap per hundred men per week. the charge and expense of such second carriage or transportation shall be paid by the parties of the second part, or the survivor or survivors of them. And the said Abraham Livingston doth further covenant, promise, and agree, to and with the said parties of the second part, to furnish the troops at each of the aforesaid places with fire-wood, at the rate of twenty shillings, New-York currency, per cord; and straw, at the rate of thirty shillings for every hundred sheafs, including cartage, provided he, the said Abraham Livingston, is put to no more than one cartage to either of the said places. And the said parties of the second part, and the survivor or survivors of them, do hereby promise and agree to and with the said Abraham Livingston, that, if it should so happen that any such provisions, wood, or straw, for the purposes aforesaid, should be taken or destroyed any otherwise than by the carelessness or negligence of the said Abraham Livingston, or his agent or agents, that then, and in that case, the loss that shall or may thereupon accrue shall be sustained by the said parties of the second part, and the survivor or survivors of them.

In witness whereof, the parties to these presents have hereunto interchangeably set their hands and seals the day and year first above written.

ISAAC SEARS TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

New-York, March 26, 1776.

SIR: By order of Major-General Lee, I was sent to Long-Island on an expedition with a Captain's company. Enclosed is the General's instructions for that purpose, whereby an expense has accrued; and I am informed that the Committee of Safety has refused paying that expense; and if they will not pay the billeting, it must be laid before the Continental Congress. But I cannot suppose, when your honourable Board reconsiders the matter, they will hesitate paying the expense, as it must at last be a Continental charge.

I am your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
ISAAC SEARS.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Albany, March 26, 1776.

SIR: General Wooster has recommended the bearer (Major Zedtwitz) to me in such terms, that I should not do him justice were I not to introduce him to you. He carries down a number of prisoners to New-Brunswick, with a recommendation to the Committee of that place to dispose of them agreeable to the orders of Congress.

I am, sir, most respectfully and most truly, your very obedient and humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO THE CONGRESS.

Montreal, March 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer, Major Zedtwitz, in the unfortunate attempt upon Quebeck, fell down a rock, which has brought on a disorder I fear he will never recover from. He is a brave deserving officer, and as such I beg leave to recommend him to your notice.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To the Honourable Continental Congress.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM BRIGADIER-GENERAL ARNOLD, DATED HOLLAND-HOUSE, MARCH 26 AND 28, 1776.

You doubtless expect news from me, but I can write you very little. I expected before this to have had a reinforcement of three or four thousand men, but have not received one thousand. We have been some time busy in collecting materials for batteries—one, of four guns, on Point-Levi, I expect will be opened in two or three days, which will command the shipping and great part of the town; and one on the Heights of Abraham of eight guns, one howitzer and two mortars; which I hope will have the desired effect; in case they fail, we have ladders, &c., for a storm. The frigate in the harbour is bending her sails, I am apprehensive with intention to give us the slip as soon as the ice will permit; to prevent which, we have one gondola, with a twelve-pounder mounted, and are preparing another of the same strength, which I am in hopes will command the river. We labour under almost as many difficulties as the Israelites did of old, obliged to make brick without straw. However, we hope matters will take a more favourable turn. The season remains very severe here. We have near five feet snow on the ground, and in most places sufficiently hard to bear a man and horse, though under the snow the frost is entirely out of the ground. We have four hundred sick and wounded in the hospitals. Captain Schillenger, of Long-Island, and Mr. Seaban, of Massachusetts, died here a few days since; the latter was the first volunteer who arrived here after our repulse, with a company. I am so far recovered of my wound, that two days since I rode fourteen miles on horseback, and walked five more, reconnoitring, which fatigued me so much I have hardly been able to walk since.

March 28, 1776.—Three days since I had advice that a party of sixty men from Quebeck were landed at St. Pierre's, ten leagues down the river, and that they had seized a convoy of provisions coming to the camp, with two Commissaries. I immediately sent Major Dubois, with eighty men, in pursuit of them, who came up with a party of fifty-odd, attacked and killed two, wounded two others, and took thirty-eight prisoners, (most of them French.) who are just arrived here. Major Dubois wrote that he had intelligence of two hundred and fifty men being in arms below. Colonel Nicholson has joined him with seventy men, and are gone in pursuit of the enemy, and will, I make no doubt, give a good account of them. The inhabitants are generally in our favour, and many of them have taken up arms for us, or rather, for themselves.

WINTHROP SARGENT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Gloucester, March 26, 1776.

SIR: When I wrote you last, I was in hopes of saving the largest part of Captain Watt's cargo; but the storm coming on directly after the ship was on fire, the casks were stove against the rocks as soon as they struck the shore. There was not one cask saved after I wrote to your Excellency. Below, you have an account of what is saved. Some of the casks, which I thought was porter, is vinegar and crout. Should be glad to know whether I must libel what is saved.

Last night at sundown, the fleet, (about seventy sail,) passed our Cape, steering about east by south, distant about six leagues.

I remain, your Excellency's very humble servant,
WINTHROP SARGENT, Agent.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Nineteen barrels of porter; 6 hogsheads of porter; 17 quarter casks of porter—total 42. 9 hogsheads of vinegar; 2 barrels of crout; 2 cables; 3 anchors; 1 hawser; 2 iron hulks; 3 copper hulks; sails and running rigging; 2 boats; sundry blocks; 3 hogsheads.

JOHN THOMAS BOUCHER TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, March 27, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: Since receiving the enclosed, have been in company with Colonel George Mason, of Virginia, and Mr. Dalton. At their request, do now solicit your permission to quit the service of this Province, and enter into that of Virginia, which will be much more beneficial to me.

Your compliance will much oblige, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN THOMAS BOUCHER.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL MAGRUDER.

Annapolis, March 27, 1776.

SIR: The privates of the company of Militia lately commanded by Captain Richard Brooke, have petitioned our Board to commission Nathaniel Pigman as their Captain; Benjamin Gaither, First Lieutenant; and Samuel Riggs, Second Lieutenant. But as we have invariably promoted those who were first elected by the people, in the order they stood under that choice, we cannot prefer either Mr. Benjamin Gaither or Mr. Riggs to William Gaither, who was Ensign to the company, unless there should appear substantial objections against his being advanced to the First Lieutenantancy. We desire, therefore, you will inform us whether you apprehend William Gaither would be an improper person to fill that station, and whether the others would answer for Second Lieutenant and Ensign. Or if you think there are gentlemen in that company more deserving preferment, we should be glad you would mention them to us.

We are, &c.

To Colonel Zadock Magruder.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JOHN YOAST.

Annapolis, March 27, 1776.

SIR: The Council of Safety desire you will be as expeditious as you possibly can in supplying the muskets, &c., you engaged to make for the Province; and inform us whether you have any now completed, as we are in very great want of them, and will send for them as soon as you have a number ready. We are, &c.

To Mr. John Yoast.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO LIEUTENANT BOUCHER.

Annapolis, March 27, 1776.

SIR: We cannot oppose the preferment of a gentleman who has manifested a laudable zeal for his country; and, therefore, accept of your resignation. This we do with the less reluctance, as your station may still afford you an opportunity of giving assistance to our Province.

We thank you for the services you have rendered us, and wish you success in the command of the Potomack Fleet.

We are, &c.

To Lieutenant John Thomas Boucher.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CHARLES CARROLL.

Annapolis, March 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We send you, enclosed, a letter to the Committee of Observation for Baltimore County. If you approve, seal it and send it to them. Since writing, we have seen Mr. Lux, and have had some conversation with him about the Committee's detaining the two vessels belonging to Hugh Young—one intended to bring us arms and ammunition, the other salt. Young tells us that the first has been unloaded, and is kept with intention to sink as a hulk; and that the other is employed in bringing in ship-timber for the frigate now building—no consent of his, and contrary to express order of the Council of Safety of the 20th instant. We wish to have this affair cleared up to our satisfaction. Mr. Lux knows nothing of the matter. We request that you would converse with some of the Committee, and let us know how everything has been conducted.

T. Smyth is going to the Eastern-Shore on Friday or Saturday. The meeting of the adjourned Provincial Court next week, and a day appointed for hearing the Elkridge Petition, prevents our coming to Baltimore. We wish to have both yourself and Colonel Rumsey. Without you, there will be no meeting of the Council of Safety on Monday. Pray send an express to Rumsey, to let him know our situation. J. Tilghman goes off to the Eastern-Shore on Monday or Tuesday.

We are, &c.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. V.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.—LETTER IV.

The authors—or (if I must say) author of what is called Common Sense, has certainly had fair play. Full time has been allowed him by the sale of his pamphlet to reap the fruits of his labours, and gratify that avidity with which many are apt to devour doctrines that are out of the common way—bold, marvellous, and flattering. What was intended as a compliment to the publick—to give them time to gaze with their own eyes, and reason with their own faculties, upon this extraordinary appearance—the author's vanity has construed wholly in his own favour. He has called repeatedly for answers, and announced his second edition to the world in the following strain of self-adulation: "That, as no answer hath yet appeared, it is now presumed that none will;" and, therefore, as may be fairly implied, that he is unanswerable. Why, then, when his challenge is accepted, will not he and his seconds fight upon fair terms? Why will they seek to draw the attention of the publick from things to men, refusing that quarter to others which the author of Common Sense craves for himself? "Who the author of this publication is, (says he,) is wholly unnecessary to the publick, as the object of attention is the doctrine itself, and not the man!" Can this sentence be reconciled to all the pother made about Cato—who and what he is? or does it not rather betray some symptoms of fear and cowardice, to beset him at the threshold, and seek to stop him in his march to the field? What, although he attempts to walk forth humbly with his staff in his hand, and has been somewhat late in filling his scrip with stones to meet this Goliath, should he therefore be tauntingly defied? If what is called Common Sense be really common sense, it is invulnerable, and every attack upon it will but add to the author's triumph. If it should be proved, in any instances, to be nonsense, millions will be interested in the discovery; and to them I appeal.

Once more I repeat the design of these letters, in which I conceive a question to be involved of the greatest importance that ever came before us—a question not yet decided, and which ought, therefore, to be fully discussed. Opprobrious names can prove nothing here, except that they who use them have nothing better to say, and are afraid of their cause. It is probable that some may see their interest upon one side of the question, and some upon the other; but that the great body of the people can have any interest separate from their country, or (when fairly understood) pursue any other, is not to be imagined. If Cato may be believed, he can conscientiously class himself with this great body, and can assure his readers that the guesses hitherto made concerning him are rather unlucky.

Great pains have been taken to engage him in a contest with our Committee; but, as nothing has been quoted from him which concerns that body in general, he leaves his letters to answer for themselves; and if his comments on the circular letter to the County Committees should appear to the publick not to be well warranted, he will submit to their judgment. But he finds it would be endless to answer all the silly queries and daily scribble of his opponents; and has learned better than to be drawn from his main object by indulging them in this way. It would be too great a trespass upon the reader's patience. He has viewed the ground on which he stands, and is not afraid to tread it in the sight of the most vigilant son of liberty; making that free use of the press which is promised to him, without the least violation of any resolve of this Continent hitherto made.

One side of a great question has been held up to us. We are told that it can never be our interest to have any future connection with Great Britain, and are pressed immediately to declare our total separation; for now is the time, and the time has found us. Could it be expected that all America would instantly take a leap in the dark? or that any who had not a predilection for the doctrine, or were capable of reasoning upon it, would swallow it in the gross, without wishing to hear the arguments on the other side? I am sure this is the wish of multitudes of good men—particularly of those who may be principally concerned in deciding the question, and whose earnest desire it is not only to know the sense of individuals, but the clear sense of their country upon it; without which, they could not think themselves at liberty to give their decision.

Upon this ground, then, I proceed, and shall rest the cause with my adversaries on the present general defence, which (although I am sorry it was necessary) I have reason to think will be more acceptable to the publick than the misspending time in private altercation. Those who oppose me may enjoy, for a while, (perhaps unnoticed,) all the triumph of the answers they may give; and if it is found at last, as has been already hinted, that I have said nothing to the purpose, their side of the question will only be strengthened.

In my remarks upon the pamphlet before me, I shall first consider those arguments on which the author appears to lay his chief stress; and these are collected under four heads, in his conclusion:

"It is the custom of nations, when any two are at war, for some other Powers, not engaged in the quarrel, to step in as mediators, and bring about the preliminaries of peace. But while America calls herself a subject of Great Britain, no Power, however well disposed she may be, can offer her mediation."

Is this common sense or common nonsense? Surely peace with Great Britain cannot be the object of this writer, after the horrible character he has given us of the people of that country, and telling us that reconciliation with them would be ruin. The latter part of the paragraph seems to cast some light upon the former, although it contradicts it; for these mediators are not to interfere for making up the quarrel, but to widen it, by supporting us in a declaration that we are not subjects of Great Britain. A new sort of business, truly, for mediators!

But this leads us directly to the main inquiry, What foreign Powers are able to give us this support? Whether they can be persuaded to engage with us? What will be their terms? Is an alliance with them safe; or is it to be preferred to an honourable and firm renewal of that ancient connection under which we have so long flourished?

These questions cannot but employ the most serious thoughts of men whose all is at stake in the resolution of them; and they ought to be answered to the general satisfaction, before we are launched out into a tempestuous ocean, of which we know not the other shore. That a continuance of mutual violence and hate may at last force us upon such an ocean is not altogether improbable; and it is possible we may gain some port of safety, although in a shattered condition. Not a word shall be drawn from me to discredit our own strength or resources: although the accounts given of them by the author of Common Sense appear incredible to some, I will even go beyond him in expressing my good opinion of our situation. He thinks foreign assistance necessary to us. I think we should but be injured by it. We are able to defend our own rights, and to frustrate the attempt of any nation upon earth to govern us by force. For my part, I would risk my all in resisting every attempt of this kind at every hazard.

But let us see what assistance he offers us: and we find France and Spain held out for that purpose, although not as mediators to "strengthen the connection between Great Britain and America," but wholly to dissolve it.

As to Spain, it is well known that the Government of her own unwieldy Colonies is already a weight which she can hardly bear; and some profound politicians have thought that, from the first, she has rather been weakened than strengthened by them; and that all her returns of gold and silver from America are but a poor compensation for the lives and cost with which they are purchased. It may well be questioned, then, (supposing Spain were able to assist us in erecting an independent empire in America.) whether her jealousy would permit her to risk the possibility of our seducing her own American subjects into an alliance with us, for the purpose of a future revolt from herself. But our author mentions France, as well as Spain, and thus proposes that both branches of the Bourbon family, so long the terror of Protestants and freemen, should now join as their protectors. By what means, or at what price, is this marvellous revolution in the system of politics, religion, and liberty, to be accomplished? How are these two Powers to divide these Colonies between them? Is their guardianship to be joint or separate? Under whose wing is Pennsylvania to fall—that of the most Catholic, or most Christian King?

I confess that those questions stagger me; and, till answered to satisfaction, cannot but give every good man the most painful apprehensions concerning the future fate of his country. To be told by the author of Common Sense that all this is mere prejudice; that we must divest ourselves of every opinion in which we have been educated, in order to digest his pure doctrine, and throw down what our fathers and we have been building up for ages, to make room for his visionary fabrick; I say, to be told this, is only insult instead of argument, and can be tolerated by none but those who are so far inflamed or interested, that separation from Great Britain, at any risk, is their choice, rather than reconciliation, upon whatever terms.

This, I much fear, is the temper of those who are constantly dimming in our ears the necessity of an immediate Declaration of Independence, for the sake of procuring foreign assistance, especially that of France. Their real desire is, to shut the door against all further reconciliation, by this precipitate step. The matter of foreign assistance is a mere decoy. Can we imagine that, if France thought it her interest to quarrel with Great Britain for any benefits to be derived from us, her delicacy would stand in her way? Was she ever restricted by such delicacy in any of the former civil wars of her neighbours, especially those of Great Britain? But the truth is, that, in the present ruinous state of her finances, and feeble condition of her fleets, she will scarce think it prudent (for any prospects we can yield her) to rush into a new and expensive war, when so ill recruited, after the blood and treasure which she lavished so ineffectually in the last.

Would it be wise, then, to risk a refusal from her, or to mix our affairs with those of any foreign Power whatever in this contest with Great Britain? No; I conceive this would only protract our wars, increase our dangers, weaken our force, and probably end in our ruin. And of all nations in the world, France is the last from which we should seek assistance, even if it were necessary. What kind of assistance do we expect from her? Gold and silver she can but ill afford to give us; her men we have no occasion for; and, in a word, until she has a fleet able to contend with that of England, she can do us no essential service. The want of such a fleet has been the great bar to her numerous projects for universal empire. Can any Protestant—can you, my countrymen, ever wish to see her possessed of such a fleet, assist her in attaining it, or willingly give her footing in America? Would she then be contented to be the humble ally of these Colonies; or would she not, in her own right, resume Canada, which, according to the limits she formerly claimed, is larger than all our Provinces together? Could we hinder her from introducing what multitudes of her people she might think proper into that country, where they have already a great body of their friends to receive them? In that case, we should soon be left without room for the increasing number of our posterity; hemmed in upon the sea-shore; and, with armies behind us, and fleets before us, be either crushed to pieces, obliged to submit to the absolute dominion of France, or to throw ourselves back upon the protection of Great Britain.

This consideration is truly alarming; and France has never shown herself so worthy of confidence among the nations of Europe, as to induce us to run such risks, by throwing ourselves precipitately into her arms. She is so notorious to the whole world for her disregard of the most sacred treaties, that Gallica fides, or French faith, is become as proverbial now as Punica fides, or Carthaginian faith, of old. It could scarce have been imagined that the author of Common Sense, after telling us that "the blood of the slain, the weeping voice of nature, cries, 'tis time to part"—eternally to part—from the limited monarchy of Great Britain, (whatever future terms might be offered us,) would so soon have recommended to us a new alliance with the arbitrary monarchs of France and Spain. Bloody massacres, the revocation of sacred edicts, and the most unrelenting persecutions, have certainly taught American Protestants (and especially our German brethren) what sort of faith we are to expect from Popish Princes, and from nations who are strangers to liberty themselves, and envy the enjoyment of it to others.

In short, I am not able, with all the pains I have taken, to understand what is meant by a Declaration of Independence; unless it is to be drawn up in the form of a solemn abjuration of Great Britain, as a nation with which we can never more be connected. And this seems the doctrine of the author of Common Sense. But I believe he has made but a few converts to this part of his scheme; for who knows to what vicissitudes of fortune we may yet be subjected?

We have already declared ourselves independent, as to all useful purposes, by resisting our oppressors upon our own foundation. And while we keep upon this ground, without connecting ourselves with any foreign nations, to involve us in fresh difficulties, and endanger our liberties still further, we are able, in our own element, (upon the shore,) to continue this resistance; and it is our duty to continue it, till Great Britain is convinced (as she must soon be) of her fatal policy, and open her arms to reconciliation, upon the permanent and sure footing of mutual interest and safety.

Upon such a footing, we may again be happy. Our trade will be revived. Our husbandmen, our mechanics, our artificers, will flourish. Our language, our laws, and manners, being the same with those of the nation with which we are again to be connected, that connection will be natural; and we shall the more easily guard against future innovations. Pennsylvania has much to lose in this contest, and much to hope from a proper settlement of it. We have long flourished under our Charter Government. What may be the consequences of another form we cannot pronounce with certainty; but this we know, that it is a road we have not travelled, and may be worse than it is described.

CATO.

NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Trenton, March 27, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to the resolution of Congress of the 15th instant, and in pursuance of the requisitions of Generals Thompson and Lord Stirling, of the 23d, the Committee of Safety have ordered three Battalions of the Militia of this Province to march to New-York, for the defence of that city and parts adjacent, as you will see by their letter sent herewith; which troops, it is expected, are to be paid by the Continent. I have prevailed with the Committee to send by express, and must beg that your answer may be sent immediately, that we may have it in our power either to stop the march of the Militia or expedite it, as may be most agreeable to Congress. It is certainly best to save all the expense in our power, but not to retard a necessary service.

We have ordered the removal of the prisoners to Mount Holly; and this day received an answer from the Committee of that place, advising they are preparing for the reception of the officers, but cannot prepare places for the soldiers in less than a fortnight.

I cannot help mentioning some expressions in Lord Stirling's letter of the 23d: "But, for God's sake, don't suffer any delay in your directions for the march of the Militia from the interior Counties." Pray despatch your answer, as our Committee proposes to adjourn for a week.

I have the honour to be, your most obedient humble servant,

SAMUEL TUCKER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

In Committee of Safety, Trenton, New-Jersey, }
March 27, 1776. }

SIR: The Committee of Safety of this Province, being sincerely desirous to give every aid in their power for the protection and defence of the United Colonies, have, in pursuance of your recommendation of the 15th instant, and the application of Brigadier-Generals Thompson and Lord Stirling, resolved and ordered that three Battalions of Militia, to consist of six hundred and sixty men each, to be drafted out of the Counties of Essex, Morris, Sussex, Monmouth, Somerset, Bergen, Middlesex, Hunterdon, and Burlington, and immediately marched to New-York, under the command of the Brigadier-Generals Dickerson and Livingston, there to continue for one month, unless sooner discharged by the commanding officer of the Continental Troops at that station. General Dickerson has issued his orders to the respective officers, and the Militia are on their march for New-York. To facilitate this service, the Committee have appointed a Commissary and Quartermaster, and directed the Treasurers of the Provincial Congress to pay the sum of fifteen hundred pounds on the orders of the Generals and Commissary, for the subsistence of the troops on their march; in confidence that whatever sum is advanced on this occasion, will be reimbursed from the Continental Treasury.

As we have reason to believe the enemy will take every opportunity of distressing the inhabitants, by parties from their cutters and armed vessels, the Committee have ordered four companies, to consist of seventy-five men each, to be raised at the expense of the Province, and stationed in Middlesex and Monmouth Counties.

The Committee hope their proceedings, on this occasion, will meet with the approbation of the honourable Continental Congress.

By order of the Committee:

SAMUEL TUCKER, President.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

DOCTOR FRANKLIN TO LORD STIRLING.

Brunswick, March 27, 1776.

MY DEAR LORD: I received your obliging letter some days since at Philadelphia; but our departure from thence being uncertain, I could not till now acquaint your Lordship when we expected to be at New-York. We move but slowly, and think we shall scarce reach farther than Newark to-morrow, so that we cannot have the pleasure of seeing you before Friday. Being myself, from long absence, as much a stranger in New-York as the other gentlemen, we join in requesting you would be so good as to cause lodgings to be provided for us, and a sloop engaged to carry us to Albany. There are five of us, and we purpose staying at New-York two nights at least.

With great and sincere esteem and respect, I have the honour to be, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient and most humble servant,

B. FRANKLIN.

To the Honourable the Earl of Stirling.

LORD STIRLING TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, March 27, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: When your letter of the 19th arrived at this place, I was viewing some grounds on Statensland, and the most exposed parts in New-Jersey. It of course went into the hands of Brigadier-General Thompson, who writes to your Excellency by this conveyance. I sincerely congratulate you on the sudden change of the scene at your late station. The evacuation of Boston is an event that must surprise all the world; and yet I believe your late manœuvres had put General Howe under a necessity of taking this very extraordinary step. The hurry and precipitation in which they have embarked, will prevent their making any immediate attempt to land where they can meet with opposition. However, every measure has been taken here, as if we had been sure of their immediate approach; and I have the satisfaction to think that, for the time and numbers, a very great deal has been done; and as the troops are now coming in from the east and west, I hope we shall soon be able to put things in such a state as will prevent the enemy from getting any foothold in this part of the world.

Be pleased to present my best respects to Mrs. Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Custis; and am, with the highest regard and esteem, your most obedient humble servant,

STIRLING.

To General Washington.

COW-NECK (QUEEN'S COUNTY, NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee for the District of Cow-Neck and Great-Neck, in Queen's County, held at Cow-Neck, the 27th of March, 1776:

Whereas Israel Rogers, one of the disarmed in this District, being since charged with counteracting the measures carrying on for the preservation of American liberty: On examination, the complaint appeared well founded; it was, therefore, the opinion of this Committee, that the said Israel Rogers be held in bond for his good behaviour. But on resistance of this order, it became the part of expediency to reprobate this vile man as an enemy to his country, and unworthy of the least protection; and do hereby strictly enjoin all manner of persons in this District, immediately to break off every kind of civil, mechanical, and commercial intercourse with this deluded and obstinate person, as they will answer the contrary at their peril.

By order: BENJAMIN SANDS, Chairman.

GILBERT LIVINGSTON TO THE NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fort Montgomery, March 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed I send muster-rolls of part of Captain Billings's and Swartwout's Companies, taken at their particular request, on being ordered to this post. The Captains not choosing to march their men till they were mustered, a difficulty arose, as the Mustermaster (Colonel Swartwout) was at New-York. To give the gentlemen satisfaction, as far as I was able, I took the enclosed muster-rolls from necessity, as the only expedient that then presented. Only parts of companies were ordered down—thinking it better to have them down in detached parties, as fast as they could be enlisted, than to have many idle till the companies were completed. Captain Billings, who carries this, will inform you of the state of things at this post, the soldiery having scarcely one camp necessary but what we have lent them.

I am, gentlemen, with much respect, your very humble servant,

GILBERT LIVINGSTON.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO LORD STIRLING.

Albany, Monday, March 27, 1776.

MY DEAR LORD: The expense of transporting the prisoners and their baggage is so exceedingly high, that I have ventured to send such as have families down Hudson's River, on their way to New-Brunswick. Lieutenant Bleecker will show your Lordship his orders, and receive yours for his conduct on his arrival at New-York.

A Captain Dundee has behaved in a very cavalier manner, and refused giving his parole. I shall lodge him in Kingston Jail. Some others also hesitated to do it, but afterwards applied for leave; but as I had understood that they conceived they might, without censure, break parole given to people whom they consider as Rebels, I told them, in plain terms, that if any one attempted to escape who was under that honorary engagement, and I could retake him, I would punish the injury done to society by immediately hanging the faithless wretch.

I am, my dear Lord, your Lordship's most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Right Honourable the Earl of Stirling.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, March 27, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 21st I had the honour to receive yesterday by Mr. Bennett. General Washington's success, which I learned with the most feeling satisfaction, whilst it reflects so much honour on him and the troops under his command, I think cannot fail of the most salutary consequences. It will give Europe a just idea of our martial abilities, and they will respect a people who are determined to enjoy their liberties, and so capable of defending them. Our Indian allies, too, will be confirmed in their peaceable disposition towards us; and such of them as are wavering will become steady. But yet I have no hopes the Ministry will recede from their diabolical plan. They seem to be seized with an infatuation, that leads them on to the ruin of Old England, which, I think, must inevitably happen whenever we are driven to the necessity of declaring ourselves an Independent State.

I shall order old gun-barrels and locks, at any of the posts above, to be sent down here and forwarded to Connecticut. We shall certainly not do justice to those unhappy men who have fallen into the hands of our brutal enemy, and are treated without any respect to the laws of humanity and decorum, if we do not retaliate. A Captain Dundee, who is lately arrived prisoner from Canada, behaved in a very outré manner, and refused giving his parole. I have ordered him into close confinement, and shall send him to Ulster County Jail; and have declared to the others, that if any attempted to escape who had given their parole, I would hang them; which I am fully resolved to do, and thereby resent the injuries which such wretches would do to mankind in general.

That Heaven may continue to smile propitiously on our honest endeavours; that it may be pleased to inspire us with a grateful sense of its mercies; that it may give us so to use its blessings as that we may look up with a confident hope for the continuance of the Divine favour on us and our posterity, is my sincere prayer.

I am, most truly and sincerely, with great regard, your Honour's most obedient servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, March 27, 1776.

I thank you, my dear General, for your favour of the 19th instant, which I had the honour to receive yesterday. I most sincerely congratulate you on the success of your operations. Forcing a formidable and well appointed Army, commanded by Generals of reputation, and secured with the best of works to seek elbow-room, malgré-eux, by a precipitate retreat, whilst it reflects the highest honour on you, cannot fail of the most salutary effects with the Powers of Europe, out of which I except devoted England, whose Prince and Ministry seem unalterably bent on the destruction of their country and themselves.

Enclose you a letter from General Arnold, which I opened by mistake, and read to within a few lines of its conclusion, before I discovered my error. I hope you will pardon my carelessness, for I assure you it was owing to nothing else.

The north end of Lake Champlain is open, and I hope a few warm days will open the remainder of that, and also Lake George. We have here now about six hundred men, who will move as soon as there is a prospect of conveying them across the lakes.

The cannon from New-York are arrived, and are on their way to Fort George. I fear they will not reach it in less than ten days from this, if so soon, as I cannot procure cattle sufficient to move them at once from Half-Moon, (to which place they are gone by water,) owing to the incredible scarcity of forage.

On the 22d instant, one hundred new batteaus were finished at Fort George, as far as they can be without pitch and oakum, which is not yet arrived from New-York. Thirty-five, however, are completely finished. I am of opinion that a much greater number are necessary to pour troops into Canada, in case it should be found necessary; but Congress have stinted me to the number I have built.

The powder (only eight tons) arrived here last week, and will be sent on with the first troops.

Congress have ordered me to remain here until further orders; so that I shall not have the pleasure of saluting you on your arrival at New-York, although I may soon after, if it be agreeable to your Excellency.

The officers, (prisoners,) that came a few days ago from Canada, refused to give their parole; and one of them, a Captain Dundee, was very cavalier with me. I have ordered him into close custody. The others have since given their parole; but as some of them had dropped expressions, as if they should not consider a breach of it criminal, I convened them all, and informed them that if any of them attempted an escape after having given their parole, and I could lay hands on them, I should resent the injury done to mankind in general by hanging such faithless wretches.

The Cayugas, (one of the Six Nations,) have expressed much resentment that Colonel Johnson's war belt was delivered up to us. Altercation ran very high between them and the Oneida Nation. Your success will, I hope, quiet the minds of all, and restore tranquillity amongst them. I shall immediately transmit an account of it to the whole of the Six Nations.

General Wooster is distressed beyond conception for hard money; and whatever your Excellency can send will be most heartily welcome.

May Heaven guard and guide your steps, and may your every future movement be fraught with happiness and honour, is the sincere wish of, dear General, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

To the Committee of Safety and Protection for the County of ALBANY.

The Petition of the Committee and Militia Officers of King's District, in conjunction with some of the Committee of the east part of Claverack District, as also of the east part of Manor Rensselaer, humbly sheweth :

That your Petitioners live in that part of the County of Albany that borders on the Massachusetts line, and that the good people inhabiting said part of the County have vigorously exerted themselves, since hostilities have been committed in our land, in defending their country against the British Troops; and that there did go into actual service, the last year, many companies of men from said part of the County, and some of them yet remain in service.

That this part of said County yet manifests a freedom to adventure their lives and fortunes in the general cause of our distressed land; and have made application to us, (the Committee and Militia Officers before-said,) that we would use our influence that they might be embodied and officered as a Battalion in the Continental Army, to go to the defence of the country wherever wanted, &c.; on which your Petitioners did meet on the 25th day of March instant, to take into consideration the aforesaid application; and, on inquiry, it did appear to your Petitioners that there might be raised a Battalion for the Continental service, of friendly and well-disposed men in the parts before-mentioned, if officered from those parts; and as your Petitioners understand that the Battalion ordered to be raised by the Province are officered, and, consequently, that your Petitioners, as a matter of right, want to be heard in the honourable Continental Congress, therefore, your Petitioners humbly pray that your Board would please to give them your assistance in recommending your Petitioners' aforesaid matter to the said honourable Continental Congress, or any other body that has a right to answer the prayer of your Petitioners, if the same shall seem just and meet for the good of the Continent, and the same appear just to your Board; and as your Petitioners are bound in duty, to pray.

Signed in the name and by order of the aforesaid Committees of Militia Officers.

Dated King's District, March 27, 1776.

Your Petitioners further pray, that, if you see fit, in your wisdom, to answer said prayer, the following men might be appointed to fill the places of the Field-Officers, namely: Asa Waterman, Colonel; George White, Lieutenant-Colonel; Joel Pratt, Major; and that this Committee, with the said Field-Officers, under your inspection, might be allowed to nominate the other officers for said Battalion.

In Committee, MARCH 29, 1776: Resolved, That the prayer thereof cannot be granted.

A true copy from the Minutes:

MAT. VISSCHER, Secretary.

To the Hon. Moses Gill, Esq.

P. S. Please make my compliments to John Pitts, Esq. I hope I shall be remembered. If any imperfection is in the letter and statement enclosed, I hope you will be so kind as to make my excuse, as I assure you it was not for want of respect.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: Above is a true state of the North-Battery in Boston, which I had the honour to command until I was obliged to escape from said town. I thought it my duty to acquaint your Honours of its situation. There remain a fine stone foundation in front and on two sides, a large house and a good magazine. I have at all times exerted myself for the good of the cause, and stand ready, on every occasion, to do all in my power for the service of the Continent in general, and this Colony in particular.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

NAT. BARBER.

To the Honourable Council of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, March 27, 1776.

SIR: I take the earliest opportunity to acquaint you that the men-of-war and transports with the Ministerial Troops, sailed this afternoon from Nantasket Harbour.

In consequence of this movement, I have ordered a brigade to march to-morrow morning for New-York, and shall follow with the remainder of the Army as soon as I can receive certain information of the fleet being clear off the coast, and that we are in no further danger of their returning to attack us at a disadvantage. I shall leave a few regiments at Boston, to protect the Continental stores, and to assist in fortifying the town and harbour agreeable to the directions that may be given by the General Assembly of this Colony.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, sir, your obedient humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To His Honour Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island.

[Same to Governour Trumbull, of Connecticut; to Lord Stirling, and to Brigadier-General William Thompson, New-York.]

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Received April 6. Referred to Committee of the Whole House.]

Cambridge, March 27, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 11th instant by Saturday night's post, and must beg pardon for not acknowledging it in my last of the 24th. The hurry I was then in occasioned the neglect, and I hope will apologize for it.

I now beg leave to inform you that I just received intelligence that the whole of the Ministerial Fleet, besides three or four ships, got under way this evening at Nantasket-Road, and were standing out for sea; in consequence of which, I shall detach a brigade of six regiments immediately from hence for New-York, under the command of Brigadier-General Sullivan, (Brigadier-General Heath having gone with the first,) which will be succeeded by another in a day or two, and directly after I shall forward the remainder of the Army, except four or five regiments, which will be left for taking care of the barracks and publick stores, and fortifying the town, and erecting such works for its defence as the honourable General Court may think necessary, and follow myself.

Apprehending that General Thomas will stand in need of some Artillerists in Canada, I have ordered two companies of the train to march immediately, and two mortars, with a quantity of shells and shot to be sent him. He set out on the 21st instant.

Enclosed you have a copy of the return of ordnance stores left in Boston by the enemy. In it are not included the cannon left at the Castle, amounting to one hundred and thirty-five pieces, as reported, all of which, except a very few, they have destroyed and rendered useless by breaking off the trunnions and spiking up.

I beg leave to transmit you the copy of a petition from the inhabitants of Nova-Scotia, brought me by Jonathan Eddy, Esq., mentioned therein, who is now here with an Acadian. From this it appears they are in a distressed situation; and from Mr. Eddy's account, are exceedingly apprehensive that they will be reduced to the disagreeable alternative of taking up arms and joining our enemies, or to flee their country, unless they can be protected against their insults and oppressions. He says that their Committees think many salutary and valuable consequences would be derived from five or six hundred men being sent there, as it would not only quiet the minds of the people from the anxiety and uneasiness they are now filled with, and enable them to take a part in behalf of the Colonies, but be the means of preventing the Indians (of which there are a good many) from taking the side of Government, and the Ministerial Troops from getting such supplies of provisions from thence as they have done. How far these good purposes would be answered if such a force was sent as they ask for, is impossible to determine in the present uncertain state of things. For if the Army from Boston is going to Halifax, as reported by them before their departure, that, or a much more considerable force, would be of no avail. If not, and they possess the friendly disposition to our cause suggested in the petition and declared by Mr. Eddy, it might be of great service, unless another body of troops should be sent thither by the Administration, too powerful for them to oppose. It being a matter of some importance, I judged it prudent to lay it before Congress for their consideration; and requesting their direction upon the subject, shall only add, if they determine to adopt it, that they will prescribe the number to be sent, and whether it is to be from the regiments which will be left here. I shall wait their decision, and whatever it is, will endeavour to have it carried into execution.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the greatest regard, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

- Cambridge, March 22, 1776.
- To His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esquire, Generalissimo of the Army of the twelve United Colonies of AMERICA.
- May it please your Excellency:
- The liberty we take in addressing a person of so exalted a rank will, we presume, be fully pardoned, when you per-
- ceive the occasion of it. The inhabitants of Nova-Scotia, and, in particular, those of the County of Cumberland, have been under the greatest anxiety and apprehensions, ever since the great contest subsisting between Great Britain and the American Colonies. Our situation has been such, that we have not had it in our power to do anything in conjunction with the other Colonies. The form of Government we are under, and the manner of executing its authority, has been such, that we are rather to be looked upon as slaves than freemen.
- With anxious desires have we been waiting for the success of your righteous cause, and that you would cast an eye of pity towards this forlorn part. We have, indeed, nothing to recommend us but misery and impending destruction and devastation. We trust our manner of proceedings will have the desired effect on you, as well as the others who are the instruments of supporting the liberty of mankind.
- We have been harassed much, occasioned by different proceedings of Government; threatened are we, because we have such sentiments concerning the cause contended for by our brethren on the Continent. News have been received that Troops will soon be sent among us. This, in a manner, has roused many who were invisioned in lethargy; and Committees have been appointed from the different towns (including the Acadians) to fall upon some method for safety.
- There are a number among us (vainly called Government men) who are continually prying into our proceedings, and, with accumulated tales, give information to the Government at Halifax. Liable, therefore, are we to be cut in pieces, having no expectation of succour but what comes through your Excellency.
- We agreed in our Committees that nothing should be done publicly, as it might aggravate the others to fall upon us sooner than they intended; further, as we could not tell the intention of the honourable Continental Congress concerning us.
- Therefore, as individuals who belong to the aforesaid Committee, we recommend Jonathan Eddy, Esq., to your Excellency, who will acquaint you with our situation; and we pray with ardency that your Excellency will please to relieve us, so that we may be able to give our sentiments publicly, and join with our little strength, in conjunction with the other Colonies, in preventing the ensigns of slavery from being set up in any part of this great empire. We further pray your Excellency will keep this our request as a secret at present.
- We do separately and jointly pray for the success of your arms, and that you may be victorious, and vanquish all your enemies.
- We are, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most devoted and very humble servants,

The Wagonmasters and Company of Carpenters in Boston, to receive and obey all such orders and directions as Brigadier-General Greene shall think proper to give. The Hospital and Regimental Surgeons to examine carefully the state of their sick, and whenever they discover the smallest symptom of the small-pox, they are without delay to send the patient to the Small-Pox Hospital in Cambridge.

The Colonels, or commanding officers of the Regiments of Militia, are desired to make up their pay abstracts to the 1st of April. They will be allowed pay until they get home, estimating every twenty miles they have to travel as one day's pay. They will be allowed also one penny a mile in lieu of rations for their expenses in return. The pay of the Militia is to commence from the day the men marched from their respective towns, in the same manner as the last were paid. If more than this is expected, a separate account must be exhibited by each Regiment; as the General does not think himself authorized to pay them otherwise in behalf of the Continent than as above, and agreeable to former practice; nor did he conceive that pay could possibly be demanded by Militia whilst they remained at home, about their private concerns, until a Company could be completed. The penny per mile is to be allowed for their coming to camp, if it has not been already paid. As there can be no correcting of Militia accounts without great difficulty, after they are once passed and paid, the General desires that the Colonels, or commanding officers of those Regiments, will be particularly careful in seeing they are exactly stated. To this end, the Captain, or commanding officer, of each Company, is to exhibit to the Colonel, or officer commanding the Regiment he belongs to, his pay-roll, agreeable to the foregoing directions, upon oath, which rolls are to accompany the pay abstracts as vouchers to it.

Upon an alarm, Reed's, Nixon's, and Poor's Regiments, are to repair to Bunker's Hill; Varnum's and Hitchcock's, to man the Fort upon Prospect-Hill; Little's to repair to Cobble-Hill; Arnold's and Robinson's Regiments to Lechmere's Point; and Smith's Regiment is to parade at the White-House Guard, and there wait for orders. Phinny's and Arnold's are positively ordered to send immediately to the Continental store for new clothing.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GENERAL HOWE.

Whitehall, March 28, 1776.

SIR: There being no ship-of-war in immediate readiness to sail for North-America, I have thought fit to despatch one of his Majesty's armed packets with this letter, that you may be informed as early as possible of the additional force you are to expect from hence, and of the present state of our preparations.

The enclosed treaties will inform you of the number of foreign auxiliary troops engaged to serve in North-America; of which number twelve thousand two hundred men, being the whole body of Hessians, are intended to serve in the Army under your command, and the Brunswickers, Waldeckers, and the Regiment of the hereditary Prince of Hesse, together with the nine British Battalions and the whole of Lieutenant-Colonel Maclean's corps, are to serve in Canada under General Carleton.

The transports for the First Division of Hessians, amounting to eight thousand two hundred men, are already completed for embarkation. A detachment of guards, consisting of one thousand and ninety-eight men, formed into a distinct corps, is on its march to Portsmouth; and I am not without hope that the First Division of Hessians may arrive at Spit-head in time, so that the whole may proceed to North-America together.

It appears to me, as far as I stand informed at present, that this body of troops should proceed to Rhode-Island; and I shall take the King's pleasure for the necessary instructions accordingly, in confidence that, if you approve of that destination, they will find upon their arrival there such orders from you as will determine their future proceedings; or, otherwise, that a proper number of cruisers will be stationed upon the coast to watch the arrival of the fleet, and to proceed with it to such other place as you shall appoint.

The difficulties in procuring transports have been very great, and it is impossible as yet to form a guess when a sufficient number will be ready to receive the Second Division of the Hessians; but I trust it will not be long first, and that the corps of Highlanders, consisting of the Forty-Second and Seventy-First Regiments, making together three thousand four hundred and sixty-six men, which are nearly, if not entirely, completed, will embark by the Clyde, the 20th of next month at farthest.

The delays and disappointments which have attended the armament sent out to the Southern Colonies, have been greater than could have been expected; and as the fleet did not leave Cork before the 12th of last month, and afterwards met with very tempestuous weather, in which many ships were separated, and put back in distress, there is but little hope that any of the objects of that expedition can be obtained; and, therefore, I received the King's command to despatch a vessel after the fleet, with a letter to Major-General Clinton, of which I enclose you a copy, and also of the instructions sent, at the same time, by the Admiralty to Sir Peter Parker.

The effect of these orders will probably be, that the whole, or at least the greatest part of that armament, will join you as early as the troops can arrive from hence; so that you may be able to open the campaign in the month of May or beginning of June.

Our recruiting for some time went on very slowly, and the men raised in Ireland will be of little use to you. Since the parties have been removed to England, we have had better success, and the recruits raised may make soldiers. They will be sent over to you by different ships as opportunities offer, or whenever a number is collected sufficient to be the object of a separate embarkation; but there is no prospect that we shall be able to procure in time for this campaign all that are necessary to complete the augmentation.

I observe that, in your disposition of the battalions under your command, you include the Sixth Regiment, at St. Vincent's, and therefore it was the King's intention to give you that regiment complete, by turning over to it the effective men of the Forty-Eighth; but the slow progress made in forming the additional Battalions and Companies of the Royal Americans, has made it impossible to take both the Sixth and Forty-Eighth from the ceded Islands for the present; and, therefore, all that we can do is, to give you the Sixth Regiment in its present state; and you will therefore send for it when you can spare transports for that purpose; and as there are many recruits already raised for that corps, they will be sent immediately to you, by which means that battalion will be tolerably complete.

With regard to the service on the side of Canada, and the operations of the force to be employed there, (of the extent of which you are already informed,) it will depend upon the situation of affairs in that Province. But if the Rebels shall, in consequence of their repulse and defeat on the 31st of December, have given up all thoughts of conquest on that side, which is most probably the case, there is good ground to hope that the Army will be able to advance into the other Colonies by the passage of the lakes, and accordingly, every proper preparation has been made here that can give facility to such a plan.

As far as I can judge of what is likely to be the general plan of operations in North-America, and, indeed, in all events, the securing the affection and assistance of our old friends and allies, the Indians of the Six Nations, is a consideration of no small importance; and I hope Colonel Guy Johnson, who is now here, and is preparing to return by the first ship, will be found useful. The King has been pleased to give him the same commission and appointments as were given to Sir William Johnson in 1756; and he is in all respects made subject to your direction and control. You will therefore employ him in such manner, and give him such instructions, as you shall think necessary and proper.

I have already acquainted you, in my letter of the 1st of February, of his Majesty's intention to give higher rank to his General Officers serving in North-America, and enclosed I send you a list of the commissions which have been signed by his Majesty for that purpose, with the date of each commission respectively.

You will observe that the rank given by these commissions is confined to America only; but it is hoped that this arrangement will have the effect to prevent any embarrassment or inconvenience which might otherwise arise from the General Officers of the foreign troops claiming the command in consequence of their superior rank.

In your letters of the 16th and 22d of January, (Nos. 7 and 8,) you express a wish to receive instructions concerning the corps under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Maclean and Gorham. I have, therefore, made inquiry into that matter, and find that his Majesty's pleasure was signified by my predecessor in office to the Commander-in-Chief, authorizing him to raise such corps, and to grant commissions for that purpose; but the officers were not to be entitled to half-pay, or to have any other rank than what was allotted to the like corps in the last war.

With regard to the bounty-money and pay of these Provincial levies, I apprehend that the Commander-in-Chief must supply the sums necessary for that purpose; but the proper steps have been taken for supplying them here with clothing, arms, and accoutrements, and also with tents and other camp necessities. These are the regulations which were thought fit with respect to those corps, and they will equally apply to the Nova-Scotia Regiment, or any other Provincial corps which may be raised in America for his Majesty's service in the present rebellion.

I must not conclude this letter without congratulating you upon the appointment of Lord Howe to be the Naval Commander-in-Chief in North-America. The choice his Majesty has been pleased to make of so able and experienced an officer, has given universal satisfaction, and will, I am persuaded, have the most happy consequences.

I am, &c.

GEORGE GERMAINE.

To General Howe.

P. S. You will observe that, in speaking of the force to be employed in Canada, I have mentioned only nine British Battalions, in which I have not included Lord Cornwallis's Regiment, which I acquainted you in my letter of the 1st of February was to be sent to Quebeck as soon as it returned from the expedition to the Southward.

TO THE PEOPLE OF ENGLAND.

London, March 28, 1776.

The doctrine of recurring to the first principles on calamitous occasions not possible to be provided against by the positive laws of the State, was, till the Revolution, the theme of logical disputes, and the portion of abstract opinion. But at that glorious era in the history of the world, as well as of this country, it remained no longer a problem of the schools; it became law; and when the Crown pressed King William's brows, Monarchy and the rights of mankind were, for the first time in human annals, made consonant and compatible—prerogative and private rights, obedience and resistance, so wisely blended together, that no man who has ever since that day dared to violate its purity, but must answer for a crime against nature at the bar of God.

This palladium, purified from the rubbish, washed from the blood of five hundred years, placed by a kind of miracle in your hands, and your right to preserve it made the tenure of the Royal authority itself, you suffered, in thirty years afterwards, without murmuring, to be removed from amongst you, though the pretext for doing it only added insult to injury; and, couched as it was under Parliamentary language, was a gross and impudent affront to the nation.

As I address myself to the whole body of the people, rich and poor, many of whose situations set them aloof from a knowledge of our history and Constitution, I assert, that that Parliament, which continued itself from three years to seven, was guilty of a notorious breach of publick trust; and that the King, when he confirmed the act, broke his coronation oath of Government according to law. From that period we are to date that omnipotence of Parliament, which is now shaking the empire to the centre, in less than ninety years from the birth of the Constitution. By suffering that stroke of Parliamentary magick to pass unpunished, the allegiance of the Commons was annihilated and dissolved; since at any time, by submission to the two other estates, they might, from peaceable and undisputed precedent, renew their lease, and usurp your elective rights.

This opus magnum, this grand elixir of life, being thus discovered, the terrors of retribution are taken away. As long, indeed, as your corruption makes a vacancy, like the surrender of a copyhold estate, to be granted back on a fine, or, rather, as a reserved rent on a freehold, they will submit to betray you under the humble title of servants; but should you ever recover your senses, they would immediately have recourse to the old experiment to evade your resentment. Even now were you to call aloud to Parliament to restore the honour, the peace, and commerce of the nation, and declare you would no longer support the expenses of a ruinous and iniquitous war, you would soon be told that the Constitution knows no other power than the King, Lords, and Commons; that the power of the last, when delegated, cannot be dictated to, or recalled; a proclamation of rebellion would be issued; the Militia would be embodied into a standing Army; and you would be taxed to the teeth to defray the charges of your own subjection.

Make the case of America your own, then, before it is too late. The same scenes are preparing for Ireland, and you must drink the dregs of both the cups. If you suffer an infringement of the rights of the remotest verge of the empire, it will soon run, like electricity, to the centre. Strip off the bark from the hardy oak, and the heart will soon follow in decay. Rouse yourselves from the sleep in which the opiate of influence has hushed the British dragon till his head be cut off. Try the experiment of sending your instructions to the Commons, to put an end to the war; and if my prophecy be fulfilled in their reception, you already know the legal powers of redress with which you are invested by the Constitution.

AMERICUS.

ROBERT TREAT PAINE TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, March 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress, taking into consideration the urgent importance to the safety, freedom, and wealth of the United Colonies, that the manufacture of saltpetre and gunpowder should be established in all of them, in addition to their former resolves on that subject, have passed those herewith enclosed, and appointed the Committee therein mentioned. In pursuance of this trust, the Committee transmit you the resolves; and, being deeply impressed with their importance to our common cause, think themselves in duty bound to urge upon you the immediate and vigorous execution of them.

The erection of publick works (as mentioned in the resolves) will be the first step to promote this useful business. If prosecuted with skill and diligence, it will ensure the making saltpetre in large quantities, and will also afford the best method for suitable persons to learn the process; and from thence be sent abroad to teach those who have not an opportunity of learning from these publick works; for it is thought an object of the greatest concern that private families should be induced to make it. The inconsiderable expense attending the making it in families, when the method is once understood, and the quantities that each family may make, should remove all objections to their putting it into immediate practice.

When we consider the great consumption of saltpetre, used as medicine, in preserving meat, and in gunpowder, even in times of peace, it should seem a sufficient inducement to private families to learn and practise this art; but most of all, when so large quantities are wanted for our necessary defence, and when it will, in a great measure, supply the want of salt, which the rage of our enemies may render scarce, it should not reasonably be supposed that any true American will neglect it.

As there can be no doubt but that every Colony may produce saltpetre enough, at least, for their own consumption, it is necessary that powder-mills be erected, and skilful persons provided to manufacture gunpowder, and proper regulations established for preventing their explosion.

It is supposed that sulphur may be found in many Colonies, and it is necessary that it should be collected. Trials may be made at places supposed to contain it, at no great expense.

It must afford great pleasure to find that some Colonies have already, in a measure, anticipated the design of these resolves; from the good effects of which, it is clearly evinced that we can never want the most abundant supply of ammunition from our own manufactures, but through inattention and neglect.

We doubt not you will consider these proceedings as designed to promote the best welfare of the Colonies, and that you will, as soon as may be, and from time to time, inform the Congress of the state of these manufactures in your Colony; of the quantity of saltpetre already made; the preparation for, and prospects of, increasing it; what quantities of gunpowder are already made; and the state of your powder-mills; and also, what discovery is made of sulphur mines, and the progress in working them.

Supposing the most approved method of making saltpetre may not have reached you, we have enclosed such as experience in some Colonies has recommended.

The laying together suitable composts, either in fences or beds, in order to collect nitrous matter, seems necessary to be immediately attended to, as the earth from under old buildings may soon be exhausted.

It is hoped this effort of the Congress will have the desired effect; without which, we have reason to fear it will, ere long, be said of us, that we are become slaves because we were not industrious enough to be free.

By order of the Committee, I subscribe myself your obedient, humble servant,

ROBERT TREAT PAINE.

To the Honourable the Convention or Council of Safety of the Colony of New-York.

P. S. I take the liberty herewith to send an extract from Dr. Brownrigg's Treatise of making Salt. The climate is so suitable, and there are so many places on our sea-coasts where neither men-of-war nor cutters can come, where salt may be made in plenty, that it is hoped some persons of judgment and application will immediately undertake it.

The extract was made for the sake of those who are unacquainted with the original, to which recourse may easily be had by those who are disposed to manufacture white salt.

Any account of your success in these undertakings must give great pleasure to all lovers of America. R. T. P.

TO CATO.

Philadelphia, March 28, 1776.

To be nobly wrong is more manly than to be meanly right. Only let the error be disinterested—let it wear not the mask, but the mark of principle, and it is pardonable. It is on this large and liberal ground that we distinguish between men and their tenets, and generously preserve our friendship for the one, while we combat with every prejudice of the other. But let not Cato take this compliment to himself. He stands excluded from the benefit of the distinction—he deserves it not; and if the sincerity of disdain can add a cubit to the stature of my sentiments, it shall not be wanting.

It is indifferent to me who the writer of Cato's letters are, and sufficient for me to know that they are gorged with absurdity, confusion, contradiction, and the most notorious and wilful falsehoods. Let Cato and his faction be against Independence, and welcome; their consequence will not now turn the scale; but let them have regard to justice, and pay some attention to the plain doctrine of reason. Where these are wanting, the sacred cause of truth applauds our anger, and dignifies it with the name of virtue.

Four letters have already appeared under the specious name of Cato. What pretensions the writer of them can have to the signature, the publick will best determine; while, on my own part, I prophetically content myself with contemplating the similarity of their exits. The first of those letters promised a second, the second a third, the third a fourth; the fourth has since made its appearance, and still the writer keeps wide of the question. Why doth he thus loiter in the suburbs of the dispute? Why hath he not shown us what the numerous blessings of reconciliation are, and proved them practicable? But he cunningly avoids the point. He cannot but discover the rock he is driving on. The fate of the Roman Cato is before his eyes; and that the publick may be prepared for his funeral, and for his funeral oration, I will venture to predict the time and the manner of his exit. The moment he explains his terms of reconciliation, the typographical Cato dies. If they be calculated to please the Cabinet, they will not go down with the Colonies; and if they be suited to the Colonies, they will be rejected by the Cabinet. The line of no-variation is yet unfound; and, like the Philosopher's stone, doth not exist. "I am bold," says Cato, "to declare, and yet hope to make it evident to every honest man, that the true interest of America lies in reconciliation with Great Britain on constitutional principles."

This is a curious way of lumping the business, indeed! And Cato may as well attempt to catch lions in a mousetrap, as to hope to allure the publick with such general and unexplained expressions. It is now a mere bugbear to talk of reconciliation on constitutional principles, unless the terms of the first be produced, and the sense of the other be defined; and unless he does this, he does nothing.

To follow Cato through every absurdity and falsehood in the compass of a letter* is impossible; neither is it now necessary. Cassandra (and I thank him) hath saved me much trouble; there is a spirit in his remarks which honesty only can inspire, and a uniformity in the conduct of his letter which the want of principle never can arrive at. Mark that, Cato.

One observation, which I cannot help making on Cato's letters, is, that they are addressed "To the People of Pennsylvania" only. In almost any other writer this might have passed unnoticed; but we know it hath mischief in its meaning. The particular circumstance of a Convention is undoubtedly Provincial, but the great business of the day is Continental; and he who dares to endeavour to withdraw this Province from the glorious Union, by which all are supported, deserves the reprobation of all men. It is the true interest of the whole to go hand in hand; and dismal, in every instance, would be the fate of that Colony which should retreat from the protection of the rest.

The first of Cato's letters is insipid in its style, language, and substance; crowded with personal and private inuendoes, and directly levelled against "the majesty of the people of Pennsylvania." The Committee could only call, propose, or recommend a Convention; but, like all other publick measures, it still rested with the people at large whether they would approve it or not; and Cato's reasoning on the right or wrong of that choice is contemptible; because, if the body of the people had thought, or should still think, that the Assembly, or any of their Delegates in Congress, by sitting under the embarrassment of oaths, and entangled with Government and Governours, are not so perfectly free as they ought to be, they undoubtedly had, and still have, both the right and the power to place even the whole authority of the Assembly in any body of men they please; and whoever is hardy enough to say to the contrary is an enemy to mankind. The Constitution of Pennsylvania nia hath been twice changed through the cunning of former Proprietors; surely the people, whose right, power, and property is greater than that of any single man, may make such alterations in their mode of Government as the change of times and things require. Cato is exceedingly fond of impressing us with the importance of our "chartered Constitution." Alas! we are not now, sir, to be led away by the jingle of a phrase. Had we framed our conduct by the contents of the present Charters, we had, ere now, been in a state of helpless misery. That very Assembly you mention hath broken it, and been obliged to break it, in almost every instance of their proceedings. Hold it up to the publick, and it is transparent with holes—pierced with as many deadly wounds as the body of Macleod. Disturb not its remains, Cato, nor dishonour it with another funeral oration.

There is nothing in Cato's first letter worthy of notice but the following insinuating falsehood: "Grievous as the least restraint on the Press must always be, to a people entitled to freedom, it must be the more so, when it is not only unwarranted by those to whom they have committed the care of their liberties, but cannot be warranted by them, consistent with liberty itself."

The rude and unscholastical confusion of persons in the above paragraph, though it throws an obscurity on the meaning, still leaves it discoverable. Who, sir, hath laid any restraint on the liberty of the Press? I know of no instance in which the Press hath been even the object of notice, in this Province, except on account of the Tory letter from Kent County, which was published last spring in the Pennsylvania Ledger, and which it was the duty of every good man to detect, because the honesty of the Press is as great an object to society as the freedom of it. If this is the restraint you complain of, we know your true character at once; and that it is so, appears evident from the expression which immediately follows the above quotation: Your words are, "Nevertheless, we readily submitted to it, while the least colourable pretence could be offered for requiring such a submission." Who submitted, Cato?—we Whigs, or we Tories? Until you clear up this, sir, you must content yourself with being ranked among the rankest of the writing Tories; because no other body of men can have any pretence to complain of want of freedom of the Press. It is not your throwing out, now and then, a little popular phrase, which can protect you from suspicion; they are only the gildings under which the poison is conveyed, and without which you dared not to renew your attempts on the virtue of the people.

Cato's second letter, or the greatest part thereof, is taken up with the reverence due from us to the persons and authority of the Commissioners; whom Cato vainly and ridiculously styles "Ambassadors coming to negotiate a peace." How came Cato not to be let a little better into the secret? The act of Parliament which describes the powers of these men, hath been in this city upwards of a month, and in the hands, too, of Cato's friends. No, sir, they are not the ambassadors of peace, but the distributors of pardons, mischief, and insult. Cato discovers a gross ignorance of the British Constitution, in supposing that these men can be empowered to act as Ambassadors. To prevent his future errors, I will set him right. The present war differs from every other in this instance, viz: that it is not carried on under the prerogative of the Crown, as other wars have always been, but under the authority of the whole Legislative power united; and as the barriers which stand in the way of a negotiation are not Proclamations, but Acts of Parliament; it evidently follows, that were even the King of England here in person, he could not ratify the terms or conditions of a reconciliation; because, in the single character of King, he could not stipulate for the repeal of any acts of Parliament; neither can the Parliament stipulate for him. There is no body of men more jealous of their privileges than the Commons; because they sell them. Mark that, Cato.

I have not the least doubt upon me but that their business (exclusive of granting us pardons) is downright bribery and corruption. It is the machine by which they effect all their plans. We ought to view them as enemies of a most dangerous species; and he who means not to be corrupted by them, will enter his protest in time. Are they not the very men who are paid for voting in every measure against us? and ought we not to suspect their designs? Can we view the barbarians as friends? Would it be prudent to trust the viper in our very bosoms? Or to suffer them to ramble at large among us, while such doubtful characters as Cato have a being upon the Continent? Yet let their persons be safe from injury and outrage—but trust them not. Our business with them is short and explicit, viz: we are desirous of peace, gentlemen; we are ready to ratify the terms, and will virtuously fulfil the conditions thereof; but we should deserve all and every misery which tyranny can inflict, were we, after suffering such a repetition of savage barbarities, to come under your Government again.

Cato, by way of stealing into credit, says, that "the contest we are engaged in is founded on the most noble and virtuous principles which can animate the mind of man. We are contending (says he) against an arbitrary Ministry, for the rights of Englishmen." No, Cato, we are now contending against an arbitrary King, to get clear of his tyranny. While the dispute rested in words only, it might be called "contending with the Ministry;" but since it is broken out into open war, it is high time to have done with such silly and water-gruel definitions. But it suits not Cato to speak the truth. It is his interest to dress up the sceptered savage in the mildest colours. Cato's patent for a large tract of land is yet unsigned. Alas, poor Cato!

Cato proceeds very importantly to tell us, "that the eyes of all Europe are upon us." This stale and hackneyed phrase hath had a regular descent from many of the King's speeches down to several of the speeches in Parliament; from thence it took a turn among the little wits and bucks of St. James's; till, after suffering all the torture of senseless repetition, and being reduced to a state of vagrancy, it was charitably picked up to embellish the second letter of Cato. It is truly of the bugbear kind; contains no meaning, and the very using it discovers a barrenness of invention. It signifies nothing to tell us "that the eyes of all Europe are upon us," unless he had likewise told us what they are looking at us for; which, as he hath not done, I will: They are looking at us, Cato, in hopes of seeing a final separation between Britain and the Colonies, that they (the lookers on) may partake of a free and uninterrupted trade with the whole Continent of America. Cato! thou reasonest wrong.

For the present, sir, farewell. I have seen thy soliloquy, and despise it. Remember, thou hast thrown me the glove, Cato, and either thee or I must tire. I fear not the field of fair debate; but thou hast stepped aside, and made it personal. Thou hast tauntingly called on me by name. And if I cease to hunt thee from every lane and lurking hole of mischief, and bring thee not a trembling culprit before the publick bar, then brand me with reproach, by naming me in the list of your confederates.

THE FORESTER.

GERMANTOWN (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Germantown, March 28, 1776.

Whereas complaints have been made to this Committee, that divers persons of this Township, retailers of Salt, and other articles, are inclined to take advantage of our distressed situation, by holding some articles at an exorbitant price, especially that most necessary article of Salt, notwithstanding the reasonable regulations so lately made by the Committee of the City of Philadelphia, who have found the scarcity of many articles to be artificial, and therefore have rated them accordingly, viz: Lisbon Salt, at four shillings per single bushel, or greater quantity, and Liverpool blond Salt at five shillings per bushel:

Resolved, therefore, That the venders of Salt within this Township ought to advance only three pence per bushel on the above prices, to defray the carriage thereof. And as many poor people are under a necessity of buying their Salt by small quantities, in such cases, we recommend it to be sold at the rate of nine pence per half-peck.

Should this Committee receive any more such disagreeable complaints for the future, the persons occasioning the same need not be surprised to see their names published to their distressed country.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO MR. DEWEES.

Philadelphia, March 28, 1776.

SIR: I have it in command from the Congress to desire you immediately to confine, in separate apartments, Mr. Connolly, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Kirkland, who were some time past committed to your custody by order of Congress; and I am further to direct that you suffer no person whatever to visit or converse with either of the above-named persons, without an order from me in writing.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Mr. Deweese, Keeper of the Philadelphia Prison.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, March 28, 1776.

SIR: Your two letters of the 27th being received by express, were communicated to Congress; and I have their orders to inform you, that the Congress see no reason to change their requisition of the 15th.

I have it, therefore, in command, to request you to exert your utmost endeavours in expediting the march of the troops to New-York, agreeable to the requisition of the commanding officer. I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Samuel Tucker, Esq., and Gentlemen of the Committee of Safety of New-Jersey, at Trenton.

NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

In Committee of Safety, New-Jersey, March 28, 1776.

SIR: Major Dunn, the bearer hereof, has represented to this Committee that on the return of Colonel Heard from Philadelphia, where he had been in order to lay the accounts of his expenditures to Long-Island before the honourable Congress, and reporting that the detachment of Militia under his command in that service were only allowed for their subsistence while on that expedition, it caused a general dissatisfaction among them, alleging they thought it but reasonable they should receive the same pay while on the service of the Continental Congress, as other troops employed by them. This Committee taking the said representation into consideration, and finding that Colonel Heard received express order from Congress immediately to march the Minute-men under his command, and transmit an account of his expenditures, while on that service, to Congress; also a letter from your honourable body, of the 25th of October last, directed to our Provincial Congress, wherein you say that "where they (Minute-men) are taken into Continental service, they will be entitled to the same pay as the other Continental troops;" and as these men, on account of the inclemency of the season, were obliged to pass through much fatigue and hardship, and many of them chiefly dependant on their daily labour for support, we cannot forbear humbly hoping that the honourable Congress will reconsider their case, and grant them redress.

I am, sir, your humble servant.

By order of the Committee of Safety of New-Jersey:

HENDRICK FISHER, Vice-President.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

WILLIAM BURNET TO LORD STIRLING.

Newark, March 28, 1776.

I have the pleasure to acquaint you, my Lord, that John Young, the Professor, who made his escape from the guard here, was taken up at Elizabethtown this morning, and is now in jail there. I am going down there to examine him immediately, in hopes to find who has harboured him here, and by what means he made his escape. Perhaps it will be best to keep him here a few days: something important may be discovered. However, we want your orders. The Committee is adjourned to Tuesday next, when the guard are to be tried for their negligence. If you think proper for him to be detained until that time, we will have them face to face.

I am, my Lord, with much respect, your most obedient humble servant,

WILLIAM BURNET.

To Lord Stirling.

JOHN HARING TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Orangetown, March 28, 1776.

SIR: Colonel Lent was with me the evening before last, and appeared to be much out of humor on account of the late behaviour of part of his regiment. He says that his orders have been treated with contempt, and himself slandered, by those from whom he expected assistance.

The Colonel has, for a number of years last past, been a Militia officer, and I believe we never had one who was more punctual in obeying and performing the orders of his superiors; and he consequently expected that those under his command should also obey him; but by experience he finds that he cannot get the orders of Congress, which from time to time I send, properly expedited, and he is apprehensive that, if he continues in office any longer, he will be censured by his superiors as well as blamed by his inferiors.

The Orangetown Regiment is chiefly composed of such as know but little of the English language, and nothing of military affairs; wherefore I must impute their backwardness and delays to ignorance, and ill-founded jealousies of being imposed upon by their commanders, and not to disaffection.

The commission of the Colonel, together with his resignation, you have enclosed. He brought the commission to me, and would not be prevailed upon to take it home again; so that I thought it my duty to send it to you by the first opportunity.

The command of the above-said Regiment now devolves upon Lieutenant-Colonel Blauvelt. I am fearful that Lent's resignation will be followed by others; but I shall do all that is in my power to prevent it.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HARING.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

RESIGNATION OF COLONEL ABRAHAM LENT.

To all to whom these presents shall come or may concern:

Whereas I, the subscriber, have some time since been commissioned by the honourable Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York to be Colonel of the Regiment of Militia-foot in Orangetown; and whereas I have been much blamed and slandered by some officers and others in said Regiment, for giving orders in pursuance of a late resolve and order of said Congress; I have thought proper to resign my said commission, and accordingly do resign the same, choosing rather to serve as a private than command people who are prejudiced against me.

Given under my hand, the 26th day of March, Anno Domini 1776.

ABRAHAM LENT.

In Provincial Congress for the Colony of New-York, }
the 22d day of December, 1775. }

To ABRAHAM LENT, of ORANGETOWN, in ORANGE County, Esq., greeting:

By virtue of the authority reposed in us, we do hereby nominate, authorize, constitute, and appoint the said Abraham Lent, Esq., to be Colonel of the First Regiment of the Militia of Foot of Orangetown and Precinct of Orange, in Orange County, in the Colony of New-York; hereby requiring you, before you enter into the exercise of your said office, to make in writing, and subscribe in presence of the Chairman of the Committee of the City, Town, District, or Precinct wherein you reside, the Declaration appointed and directed by the eleventh section of the seventh Resolve, contained in the Rules and Orders for regulating the Militia of the Colony of New-York, recommended by this Congress on the 22d day of August, 1775, and authorizing you fully to execute all the powers belonging to your said office by virtue of the said Rules and Orders, and the said Declaration. And we do hereby require all persons under your command to pay due obedience to you, according to the said Rules and Orders, and such further rules and orders as shall be made and recommended for the Militia of this Colony, by the present, or any future Continental Congress or Provincial Congress of this Colony.

By order. JOHN HARING, President pro tem.

Attest: JOHN MCKESSON, Secretary.

COLONEL SMITH TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Suffolk County, March 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Committee of Safety have appointed an Adjutant in the Minute service in this County; and he being unwilling to act in that department, and as it is absolutely necessary that such an officer should be immediately appointed, I take the liberty of recommending Mr. Ephraim Marvin as an Adjutant, and should be exceeding glad to have his commission forwarded to me by the first opportunity.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

JOSIAH SMITH,

Colonel of Minute Battalion, Suffolk County.

To the Committee of Safety now sitting at New-York.

HENRY WISNER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Goshen, March 28, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Some days ago my son received a letter from you, desiring him to inform you of what quantity of powder we had then made, what quantity we could make per week, and what quantity of materials we had by us; but as we had at that time but just begun, we could only have given a partial answer, and therefore omitted giving an answer until we had made further trial. And to which I now have to inform you that we had made, before the 12th of this instant, only two hundred weight. The first week after that time we made eight hundred weight; the second week we made eleven hundred weight; and I believe this week we shall make twelve hundred weight; so that, I believe, by Saturday night we shall have some better than three thousand weight. We have tried the quality of it by shooting with a gun. Several of our gunners have tried it, and all say it is of the best quality.

As to materials, we have saltpetre enough to work about two weeks only. We have had a promise of ten tons to be sent from Philadelphia, which was sent as far as Bordentown several months ago, and was to have been sent forward to our works. I wrote twice to the Congress about it, though the last letter they cannot have received. I hope they will soon send it.

As to sulphur, I cannot say what quantity we have. It is part of it at New-Windsor. I wish more might be had. I believe we have not got much.

I have made application to the Committee of our County for liberty to build a mill in our County, on the encouragement given by your honourable Board. I believe I shall succeed. If so, I make no doubt but will build one to make a ton a week, and more if necessary. Shall be glad of your assistance in procuring materials.

I wish you would direct what we shall do with the powder, as fast as it is fit for being sent off. As powder is an article that will take a considerable time to dry, especially at this time of the year, so that we shall have in the drying house at least two thousand weight all the time—in that case, query: Whether there will not be danger of some Tory setting fire to it in the night, by firing the house? If so, query: Whether it would not be right to keep a guard? And if so, as the powder all belongs to the publick, query: Whether the expense ought not to be borne by the publick? I should be glad of an answer by the first opportunity.

I am, with the greatest regard and esteem, your assured friend and humble servant,

HENRY WISNER.

To the President of the Provincial Congress, or Chairman of the Committee of Safety, at New-York.

P. S. If you should think proper to order a guard, I believe four men would be sufficient for that purpose. I hope you will excuse this scrawl. I should have copied it, but have only three half sheets more of paper, and do not know where to get the next.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO LORD STIRLING.

Albany, March 28, 1776.

MY DEAR LORD: General Washington has favoured me with an account of General Howe's precipitate retreat from Boston; but as he had not left Nantasket-Road on the 19th, I hope the troops at New-York will be considerably reinforced before he can get there, should that be the place of his destination. I am exceedingly happy that the fortifications are advancing with so much rapidity; and I trust, should Mr. Howe make an attempt to possess himself of the city, that he will meet with a repulse.

The cannon and shot arrived here last Friday, and left this on Monday morning. I am this moment going to mount my horse to forward them from Half-Moon, where they are detained for want of cattle to transport them to Fort George. The incredible scarcity of forage creates great distress in moving any military stores.

I am, my dear Lord, your Lordship's most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Right Honourable the Earl of Stirling.

MARCHING ORDERS TO CAPTAIN EBENEZER STEVENS, OF THE ARTILLERY.

Camp at Cambridge, March 28, 1776.

Instructions for Captain EBENEZER STEVENS, commanding two Companies of the Regiment of Artillery, on a march to QUEBECK.

You (with the Companies under your command) are to make the most expeditious marches into Canada; there to join the Army under Major-General Thomas, in order to conquer, and entirely subdue, the enemies of liberty and America in that Province.

Your route will be through Number Four, in the Province of New-Hampshire, to Crown-Point, where you will draw what provisions you will think necessary for your further progress.

It is a matter of great importance that the mortars, shells, &c., which you have in charge, should reach the Camp before Quebeck. If, therefore, any of the teams should fail, you must procure fresh ones from the country people, and give an order for the pay on the Quartermaster-General, or his assistant up that way, or to this Camp, whichever shall be most agreeable.

You are to take particular care that your men are well covered in the night, and likewise that they observe the strictest discipline.

HENRY KNOX, Col. Regiment of Artillery.

ABRAHAM LIVINGSTON TO JOHN MCKESSON.

Thursday, four o'clock P. M., March 28, 1776.

SIR: Will you do me the favour to ask the Committee of Safety for a certificate for my drovers to go into Connecticut for fresh beef? If a number of troops come here, I readily foresee a scarcity of that article, which is a very essential one indeed, and cannot be had without a certificate. If a permit were given me to procure provisions where they could be purchased, it would save a vast deal of trouble; and in that case I would get a number copied, and you and Mr. Benson can sign them at leisure. But as I have three drovers on the borders of Connecticut, and are returned this day for want of credentials, I must request it as a particular favour that you would facilitate my getting a certificate. I would apply in person, but am really ashamed, I have teased them so much lately.

Your humble servant,

ABRAHAM LIVINGSTON.

To Mr. John McKesson.

P. S. You will oblige me by sending my contract with the bearer.

EDWARD GAITHER, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Elkridge, March 29, 1776.

I also beg leave, gentlemen, to inform you that I look on the above gentlemen to be very proper persons.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

EDWARD GAITHER, JUN.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JOHN HANSON AND OTHERS.

[No. 95.]

Annapolis, March 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Our regular troops are not yet provided with arms, but might be in a very short time, if we could have a supply of gun-locks from you. We desire, therefore, to be informed in what forwardness you have got your manufactory, and when you expect to furnish us with some.

We are, &c.

To John Hanson, Charles Beatty, and James Johnson.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL JOSHUA BEALL. [No. 96.]

Annapolis, March 29, 1776.

SIR: The Council of Safety desire you will immediately examine into the quality of the powder now under your charge, and give them a particular account of the quantities of cannon and fine. We are, &c.

To Colonel Joshua Beall.

CAPTAIN MACPHERSON TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, March 29, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: I have already taken the liberty of pointing out my opinion of the many advantages which would arise to North-America by employing row-galleys, viz: The many superior advantages they have in calms and little winds, the great advantage they have in being able to take shelter from a superior force (in case of necessity) at all times upon the coast of North-America, as they draw less water than vessels of the usual construction, and as I am persuaded I can construct them to sail much faster than any vessels in Great Britain, at least before the wind. These, with other considerations, led me to undertake to capture or destroy every British ship-of-war on the coast of North-America, with twelve row-galleys only; which command was promised to me by the Honourable Messrs. Hopkins, Randolph, and John Rutledge. I sincerely believe, had I been expeditiously furnished with those vessels, there would have been few British ships-of-war now on the coast of America to molest our trade. I am still ready to undertake the same charge, and will risk my life and every farthing I possess on earth on my success.

Or, if more agreeable to the honourable Congress, I will fit out two galleys at my own expense, the honourable Congress furnishing me with timber, guns, powder, &c., for which I will pay before my departure, and will risk my reputation that I will take or destroy an English man-of-war in a very little time. If I do not succeed, I do not wish to be reimbursed one penny. If I do, I should be glad the honourable Congress would grant me a commission for such a command, bearing date from the time that command was promised me, and that they would pay to my officers and men the full value of the first man-of-war I should take, or the estimated value of the first man-of-war I should destroy. I am little concerned about any mercenary reward to myself. I should ill merit the confidence of the honourable Continental Congress did I doubt their honour. Twelve row-galleys will not cost near as much money as the four frigates now building here.

I hope the honourable Congress will not be offended by my begging they will be expeditious in fixing the matter with me.

I am, honourable gentlemen, with sincere esteem for your august body, your most obedient, most devoted, very humble servant,

JOHN MACPHERSON.

To the Honourable Continental Congress.

PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

Philadelphia, March 29, 1776. }

Resolved, That William Sitgreaves and Peter Ozeas have, knowingly, counteracted the Resolution of this Committee, of the 6th instant, regulating the prices of several articles of Merchandise; and that they be published in the papers, agreeable to said Resolve, and that they be made acquainted with the determination of this Committee herein.

April 2, 1776.

William Sitgreaves and Peter Ozeas, having presented to this Committee the following papers, as acknowledgments of their having infringed the rules laid down by this body for regulating the prices of several articles of goods, and desired them, if they thought it necessary to lay their cases before the publick, to suffer their declarations to accompany them; the Committee, therefore, in discharge of the duty they owe to the publick, and in order to show to the world their resolutions to support their limitations, which they are of opinion are founded on just, generous principles, do think it highly proper to publish the several papers voluntarily signed and handed to them by the said William Sitgreaves and Peter Ozeas, and at the same time resolve that they esteem those papers as acknowledgments satisfactory to this Committee.

Extract from the Minutes:

SAMUEL C. MORRIS, Secretary.

To the Committee of Inspection and Observation of the City and Liberties of PHILADELPHIA.

Philadelphia, April 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am very sorry that I have exceeded the limits prescribed by you for the price of coffee. Had I apprehended that advancing one penny per pound more than you had fixed would have been considered as injurious to the publick welfare, I should not have demanded it. As I have thereby given offence, I take this method of acknowledging my error, and to declare that, for the future, I will avoid every occasion of uneasiness to my fellow-citizens. Should you think it necessary to publish what has past on this subject, I request you will, at the same time, let this acknowledgment accompany it, and you will thereby oblige, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM SITGREAVES.

To the Committee of Inspection and Observation of the City and Liberties of PHILADELPHIA.

Philadelphia, April 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The mistake which I have committed, in having bought and sold two barrels of coffee at a price higher than that limited by you, has given me extreme pain. Had I adverted to the fatal consequences of such conduct, the regard I have for the publick welfare, and the interest I have taken in the present struggle for liberty, would have wholly prevented my having any share in so destructive a measure. I now, voluntarily, offer to the publick, through this Committee, my sincere acknowledgment for this error, and declare the utmost readiness to acquiesce in any measure which may assure the publick of my exact conformity, in future, to such regulations as this Committee may judge to be for the publick benefit; being fully satisfied of their unbiased attention to the publick good. If this Committee should judge it necessary to publish my case to the world, I shall hold myself extremely obliged if they shall judge it proper to suffer this declaration and acknowledgment to appear at the same time, and order it accordingly.

PETER OZEAS.

WILLIAM ELDER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Upper Barracks, March 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We are sorry to give you this trouble, but being in some measure led to imagine you have forgotten us, by our long confinement without having any hearing, and being fully conscious of not having acted in any shape inimical to the interests of the country, therefore should esteem it as a particular favour if you will be kind enough to order us before you, as we make no doubt we shall give every satisfaction that you will desire with respect to our conduct.

We remain, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servants,

WILLIAM ELDER,
JOSEPH WOOLCOMBE,
WILLIAM McDERMOTT.

MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

To His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the United American Colonies.

May it please your Excellency:

When the liberties of America were attacked by the violent hand of oppression; when Troops, hostile to the rights of humanity, invaded this Colony, seized our capital, and spread havock and destruction around it; when our virtuous sons were murdered, and our houses destroyed by the Troops of Britain; the inhabitants of this and the other American Colonies, impelled by self-preservation and the love of freedom, forgetting their domestick concerns, determined resolutely and unitedly to oppose the sons of tyranny.

Convinced of the vast importance of having a gentleman of great military accomplishments, to discipline, lead, and conduct the forces of the Colonies, it gave us the greatest satisfaction to hear that the honourable Congress of the United Colonies had made choice of a gentleman thus qualified, who, leaving the pleasures of domestick and rural life, was ready to undertake the arduous task. And your nobly declining to accept the pecuniary emoluments annexed to this high office, fully evinced to us that a warm regard to the sacred rights of humanity, and sincere love to your country, solely influenced you in the acceptance of this important trust.

From your acknowledged abilities as a soldier, and your virtues in publick and private life, we had the most pleasing hopes; but the fortitude and equanimity so conspicuous in your conduct; the wisdom of your councils; the mild, yet strict government of the Army; your attention to the civil Constitution of this Colony; the regard you have at all times shown for the lives and health of those under your command; the fatigues you have with cheerfulness endured; the regard you have shown for the preservation of our Metropolis; and the great address with which our military operations have been conducted, have exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and demand the warmest returns of gratitude.

The Supreme Ruler of the Universe having smiled on our arms, and crowned your labours with remarkable success, we are now, without that effusion of blood we so much wished to avoid, again in the quiet possession of our capital. The wisdom and prudence of those movements which have obliged the enemy to abandon our Metropolis will ever be remembered by the inhabitants of this Colony.

May you still go on, approved by Heaven, revered by all good men, and dreaded by those tyrants who claim their fellow-men as their property. May the United Colonies be defended from slavery by your victorious arms. May they still see their enemies flying before you. And (the deliverance of your country being effected) may you, in retirement, enjoy that peace and satisfaction of mind, which always attends the good and great. And may future generations, in the peaceful enjoyment of that freedom, the exercise of which your sword shall have established, raise the richest and most lasting monuments to the name of Washington.

His Excellency's Answer.

To the Honourable Council and Representatives of the Province of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

GENTLEMEN: I return you my most sincere and hearty thanks for your polite Address; and feel myself called upon, by every principle of gratitude, to acknowledge the honour you have done me in this testimonial of your approbation of my appointment to the exalted station I now fill; and, what is more pleasing, of my conduct in discharging its important duties.

When the Councils of the British nation had formed a plan for enslaving America, and depriving her sons of their most sacred and invaluable privileges, against the clearest remonstrances of the Constitution, of justice, and of truth; and to execute their schemes, had appealed to the sword; I esteemed it my duty to take a part in the contest, and more especially, when called thereto by the unsolicited suffrages of the Representatives of a free People; wishing for no other reward than that arising from a conscientious discharge of the important trust, and that my services might contribute to the establishment of freedom and peace, upon a permanent foundation, and merit the applause of my countrymen, and every virtuous citizen.

Your professions of my attention to the civil Constitution of this Colony, whilst acting in the line of my department, also demand my grateful thanks. A regard to every Provincial institution, where not incompatible with the common interest, I hold a principle of duty and of policy, and shall ever form a part of my conduct. Had I not learned this before, the happy experience of the advantages resulting from a friendly intercourse with your honourable body, their ready and willing concurrence to aid and to counsel whenever called upon in cases of difficulty and emergency, would have taught me the useful lesson.

That the Metropolis of your Colony is now relieved from the cruel and oppressive invasion of those who were sent to erect the standard of lawless domination, and to trample on the rights of humanity, and is again open and free for its rightful possessors, must give pleasure to every virtuous and sympathetick heart; and being effected without the blood of our soldiers and fellow-citizens, must be ascribed to the interposition of that Providence which has manifestly appeared in our behalf, through the whole of this important struggle, as well as to the measures pursued for bringing about the happy event.

May that Being, who is powerful to save, and in whose hands is the fate of nations, look down with an eye of tender pity and compassion upon the whole of the United Colonies; may He continue to smile upon their councils and arms, and crown them with success whilst employed in the cause of virtue and of mankind; may this distressed Colony and its capital, and every part of this widely extended Continent, through His divine favour, be restored to more than their former lustre and once happy state; and have peace, liberty, and safety, secured upon a solid, permanent, and lasting foundation.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

INSTRUCTIONS AND ORDERS TO MAJOR-GENERAL PUTNAM.

As there are the best reasons to believe that the enemy's Fleet and Army, which left Nantasket-Road last Wednesday evening, are bound to New-York, to endeavour to possess that important post, and, if possible, secure the communication by Hudson's River to Canada; it must be our care to prevent them from accomplishing their designs. To that end I have detached Brigadier-General Heath, with the whole body of Riflemen, and five battalions of the Continental Army, by the way of Norwich, in Connecticut, to New-York. These, by an express arrived yesterday from General Heath, I have reason to believe are in New-York. Six more battalions, under General Sullivan, march this morning, by the same route; and will, I hope, arrive there in eight or ten days at farthest. The rest of the Army will immediately follow in divisions, leaving only a convenient space between each division, to prevent confusion and want of accommodation upon their march.

You will, no doubt, make the best despatch in getting to New-York. Upon your arrival there, you will assume the command, and immediately proceed in continuing to execute the plan proposed by Major-General Lee for fortifying that city, and securing the passes of the East and North Rivers. If, upon consultation with the Brigadier-Generals and Engineers, any alteration in that plan is thought necessary, you are at liberty to make it; cautiously avoiding to break in too much upon his main design, unless where it may be apparently necessary so to do, and that by the general voice and opinion of the gentlemen above-mentioned.

You will meet the Quartermaster-General, Colonel Mifflin, and the Commissary-General, at New-York. As they are both men of excellent talents in their different departments, you will do well to give them all the authority and assistance they require; and should a council of war be necessary, it is my direction they assist at it.

Your long service and experience will, better than any particular directions at this distance, point out to you the works most proper to be first raised; and your perseverance, activity, and zeal, will lead you, without my recommending it, to exert every nerve to disappoint the enemy's designs.

Devoutly praying that the Power which has hitherto sustained the American arms may continue to bless them with His divine protection, I bid you farewell.

Given at Head-Quarters, in Cambridge, this 29th day of March, 1776.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

NATHANIEL SMITH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, March 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When I had the honour of seeing you last in Annapolis, you desired I would commit to writing what would be necessary to have done about the Fort (that the Committee refused to do)—a Magazine, Hospital, and Laboratory; which, in my opinion, no Fort or Garrison ought to be without. Those would not cost more than three hundred pounds. The Hospital sufficient to hold fifty sick or wounded men; the Magazine to hold ammunition for a month's siege; the Laboratory sufficient for ten or twelve men to work in—making cartridges, &c.

I was mentioning a seine for catching fish; but, if it cannot be allowed without deducting any part of the soldiers' rations, would not desire it, as their allowance is full small for a hearty man to subsist on.

I understand there has been application to you for Captain of the Fort, or Fort-Majors. I do not know that there would be any necessity for such an officer at this time, but hope, gentlemen, you will not put another over me, unless you think him more fit to fill the station; and, in that case, shall submit with pleasure.

I am, gentlemen, your most obliged, humble servant,
NATHANIEL SMITH.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAINS KENT AND HENRY.

[No. 97.]

Annapolis, March 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We send this by express, with three hundred pounds to defray the expenses of your march to your respective Counties, as well as others you may necessarily have incurred in the service; and hope it will be found adequate to the purposes for which it is designed. If, however, it should not, you shall be immediately reimbursed any money you may be obliged to expend. We sent to Philadelphia, upon the receipt of your letter of the 28th of February, for the Continental regulations relative to wages and victualing, and desired our Deputies, if an opportunity should offer, to convey them directly to you; which, we apprehend, has been done, as they have not been transmitted to us; but, lest they should not have sent them, we will endeavour to inform ourselves of the pay, and lodge an account of it for you with the Treasurer of the Eastern-Shore.

We are much obliged to the people of Accomack and Northampton Counties for the civilities you have experienced from them, and the pains taken by their Committees to render your time as easy and agreeable as circumstances would admit of; and we request you will make our grateful acknowledgments to them for their favours.

We wish you a happy return; and are your most, &c.
To Captains Kent and Henry.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CHARLES COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 98.]

Annapolis, March 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When we requested your Committee to furnish Calvert County with one barrel of powder, we had not any fund so convenient, or yet so well supplied, as that in Charles. Your intention of complying with the order, at a time when you apprehended it could not be well spared, is in confirmation of all your other actions hitherto manifested in promoting the general welfare.

We have wrote to Colonel Joshua Beall to inform us how much musket powder is at Bladensburg. As soon as we are informed thereof, a due proportion shall be sent to Charles County. One ton of bullets from Frederick we expect is, by this time, with you; part of which you will spare to St. Mary's and Calvert, should those Counties be in want. Port-Tobacco is the place appointed for part of Captain Beall's Company to be stationed at; and we request that you will assist him in providing proper houses and firewood for his men, as well as supplying them with provisions and other necessities till they are furnished by the contractor, which, we imagine, will be in a few days.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Charles County.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.—LETTER V.

In my fourth letter, some notice was taken of the dangerous proposition held up to us by the author of Common Sense, for having recourse to foreign assistance, and mixing the virtuous cause of these Colonies with the ambitious views of France and Spain, even allowing that they are either able, or that we could make it their interest, to enter into a war with Great Britain and her allies on our account. His tory will scarce give us an example of any people that ever recurred to an expedient of this kind without having their allies, at last, for their masters. The fatal consequences of hasty resolutions, in great questions, might be well illustrated by the conduct of the foolish Danes, who, to avenge themselves of their nobility, in one dreadful moment made an irretrievable surrender of their own liberty, and that of their posterity, into the hands of a tyrant. And had I been disposed to work upon the passions, rather than address the reason of my readers, the mention which was made in my last of the arbitrary Governments of France and Spain, their bloody massacres and unrelenting persecutions, gave me an opportunity of entering into descriptions which would have "harrowed up the very souls" of Protestants and Freemen.

The Administration of Great Britain itself, daring as they seem to be, have not yet dared to recur to the desperate measure of calling in foreign aid. But some of our best friends intimate that an example of this kind, on either side, would justify the like conduct on the other. A great majority of the patriotick Freeholders of the County of Berks, in England, nobly supporting our cause before the Throne, compliment us upon this—that we have not thrown ourselves into the arms of other Powers, and that "our Petitions have yet appeared before no Throne but that of Britain." "Let not England (say they) set an example, which is but too easily copied, by drawing into a free country the insidious and mercenary aid of foreign forces, trained to the support of barbarous despotism. The moment that a great army of such, or of any foreigners, shall enter your territories, the liberties of your people are at an end. Strenuous as we are for the honour of our country, we cannot be forgetful of its peace and concord. It is therefore we abhor the idea of encouraging foreigners to make a prey of this nation and its dependencies, under the miserable and uncovered pretext of discountenancing faction and sedition among ourselves."

It is but too reasonable, then, to conclude, that whichever side—Great Britain or America—shall first call in foreign assistance, will but force the other into the same desperate measure. In either case, this devoted land would become one field of blood and carnage for a length of years; which, at last, it is to be apprehended, would only be dreadfully closed in our perpetual subjection and slavery to the victorious side, whether allies or foes! It is, indeed, impossible to describe the miseries of that country which is once made the seat of foreign wars. Torn in pieces by contending armies, subjected to the alternate ravages and oppressions of rival powers, the merchant, the farmer, the peasant, has nothing to call his own. Even the wife of his bosom, and the daughter of his affection, are not safe from the unholy violence of mercenary soldiers, rioting through every corner of a land not their own, insolent in victory, and barbarous in defeat.

Although we now sadly bleed under the cruel hand of an unjust Administration, who have kindled up a most unnatural war among brethren in their own land, yet (God be thanked) that war hath not reached, and, I trust, will never be able to reach, much farther than our sea-shores. A nation cannot long continue totally blind to all its most essential interests. Our own vigour and virtue have already gone a great way to convince our oppressors of the inanity, as well as the impracticability, of their schemes to govern a great and distant country by force. Perseverance, on our side, will speedily accomplish the rest. Our friends in Britain, unbought by us, and uncorrupted by our foes, are yet of more worth to us than whole nations of foreigners drawn in to our assistance by mercenary or interested views. If, by no precipitate or unnecessary measures, we forfeit the esteem of the former, and make them also enemies, we shall prevail by our united strength. The devices of those who, for ambitious purposes, strive to divide a house against itself, will be finally confounded, and the whole family of Britons, on both sides of the Atlantick, may yet be bound together by fresh ties of mutual love and interest for many generations.

But, (I repeat it once more,) by the former measure of calling in foreigners to decide our quarrels, we shall bleed, not in a few parts only, but at every pore; and the present generation will not, probably, see the end of the contest. Would to Heaven that they who press such a measure, as preferable to reconciliation with our ancient friends, upon whatever terms, could but behold the face of Poland, and visit the scenes of havock and desolation which mark the late footsteps of contending foreign powers in that country, or read the accounts of the like scenes in many parts of Germany. They would not then continue to urge such a measure till they could clearly prove that the last necessity was come.

Let it not be said that I am here drawing a horrible picture to strengthen this country into an absolute submission to Great Britain. No. I persevere in my belief, that, on our present plan of resistance, Britain can never force us, either into submission or reconciliation, but upon such terms as the united wisdom of the Colonies shall deem safe and honourable. But, upon the other plan, it is much to be feared that submission, as well as ruin, might be our lot. And were I disposed to give bad names to any persons who may, perhaps, be honestly inquiring after our true interest in this contest, they who advise such a plan, and not Cato, might be called inimical to these Colonies. Nor let it be said that the wished-for assistance is not that of armies, but of fleets for trade, and commercial protection. Even supposing that to be the case, will the fleets of any power, who can look those of Britain in the face, be content just to take a peep at our fruitful shores, give us their protection when called upon, and then return quietly home? But the author of Common Sense (and it is him I am now answering) makes no such distinction; and speaks of the "assistance of France and Spain" generally—and that for the purposes of a total separation from Great Britain. His words are these:

"It is unreasonable to suppose that France or Spain will give us any kind of assistance, if we mean only to make use of that assistance for the purpose of repairing the breach, and strengthening the connection between Britain and America."

That the assistance here meant, is not confined to mere naval assistance, in the idea of some who are great advocates for this author's pamphlet, might have been easily gathered from their expressions, when we received the late accounts of the arrival of unusual numbers of troops in the neighbouring French West-Indies.

But this only alarmed others the more; and I am well persuaded that this writer's idea is not yet adopted by many persons of much consideration in this country, much less by any publick bodies. I consider it only as thrown out to collect the sentiments of America upon it, although I cannot but think it a dangerous, as well as unseasonable question at this time, and could have been content that it had not been brought before the publick. But, since it hath been made a question, it ought now to be fairly discussed; for whatever we have left worthy of our attention as freemen, is all involved in this stake; and when important questions are put upon the footing that, if they are not answered, they are to be taken for granted, it becomes absolutely necessary to examine them.

For my part, the more I consider the matter, (and I have long considered it impartially,) the more I am persuaded that our political salvation can only be worked out by our own united virtue, and upon our own foundation. When it shall clearly appear that we can no longer stand upon this ground; when we shall be generally convinced, by better arguments than declamation, and the abuse of things venerable and ancient, that future connection with Great Britain is neither possible nor safe; then we shall be fully united and prepared, at every risk, to pursue whatever measures the sense of the community, fairly collected, shall think necessary to adopt. But even then, before we launch forth, many domestic concerns are to be adjusted.

Under what form of Government are we to confederate? How much of our ancient Constitutions is to be preserved? Who is to settle our clashing Territorial claims? In what cases are the jurisdiction and expenses of these Colonies to be joint or separate? On what terms are we to engage foreign alliances, and yet to secure our liberties in connection with them? Are the Colonies to vote equally in determining these grand concerns? or is a new representation to be formed in proportion to numbers and consequence?

I might propose more questions of this kind; and when the necessity comes, they will rise thick enough upon us, and we must then encounter them all, for the sake of American liberty, which I would never desert but with my life. But I am sure that the author of Common Sense, who labours to prove that the necessity is already come, offers nothing on this head that can give much satisfaction to the publick in general. Trusting, however, that, in the preceding part of his work, he has levelled the English Constitution to the dust, together with all our American Constitutions, which are formed on similar models, and that he has thereby led us past the Rubicon, he may flatter himself that we will the more readily follow his future direction, and adopt what plans he may offer. But I choose to examine for myself; and having despatched his main argument for Independence, which he founds on the necessity of foreign assistance, I proceed to consider some other parts of his work.

His first sections, on the origin of Government and Monarchy, appear to be the strangest medley of inconsistencies and contradictions which were, perhaps, ever offered to the common sense of any people, and calculated only to mislead those superficial readers, who are content to believe as they go, without comparing one part of a writer's doctrine with another.

"Society," says he, "is produced by our wants, and Government by our wickedness: the former promotes our happiness positively, by uniting our affections; the latter negatively, by restraining our vices. Government, like dress, is the badge of lost innocence; the palaces of Kings are built on the ruins of the bowers of Paradise."

If the author meant only by this to tell us that if all men were perfectly virtuous, and followed the pure dictates of right reason, human Governments would have been unnecessary, then I could subscribe to his doctrine, and might have paid him a compliment for clothing an old truth in a spruce metaphor. But if he meant to prove that Monarchies were any more founded on the ruins of Paradise than Republicks, he ought, in consistency with himself, to have shown us that, after Adam was expelled from Paradise, he and his descendants, as soon as they were "four or five" strong, and "able to raise a tolerable dwelling in the wilderness," were found erecting some sort of palace for him as their King; and that, after this example, all future Governments were kingly in the first ages. But our author shows us no such thing. On the contrary, when he speaks of the manner of "peopling the world," and frames a Government out of the state of nature, the first idea he presents us with is, that of a pure Republick.

"Some convenient tree," says he, "affords a State-House, under the branches of which the whole Colony may assemble to deliberate on publick matters." They proceed, as their numbers increase, to improve this Constitution, and devise checks that "the elected may not form to themselves an interest separate from the electors." On these checks ("not on the unmeaning name of King) depend the strength of Government and happiness of the governed."

How can this be reconciled to what follows? The author has told us that all Government "being at best but a necessary evil, promotes happiness only negatively, by restraining (viz: checking) our vices;" and, in erecting his early Republick, he contrives his checks accordingly; but (risum teneatis!) directly forgets himself, and says that no "power which needs checking can be from God." Thus, by his own argument, God has as little to do with the powers of Government in the Republican, as mixed forms. But further, lest his readers should also forget themselves, and be carried away by his first assertion, that "the palaces of Kings were built on the ruins of Paradise," he takes care to tell us, and backs it with the authority of "Scripture chronology, that, in the early ages of the world, there were no Kings;" that the Devil himself, in those ancient times, was but a dull fellow; and that, although "Government by Kings was his most prosperous invention for the promotion of idolatry," he was a long while in hammering it out; which is but a poor compliment to Satan's cunning. For being a King himself from the beginning, he might have hit upon it sooner. But I leave our author to make his own apology to his infernal majesty, if he be of his councils, for I have no business to interfere between them.

It is sufficient to show what use he makes of his common sense, at the very outset, in refuting his own first doctrine, and proving to demonstration that, instead of palaces for Kings, State-Houses for whole Colonies were built on the ruins of Paradise; nay more, that these ruins, in the case of the Jews, were near three thousand years tossed up and down into various forms, before they were converted into Royal edifices! That I have not misrepresented our author in this argument, his own words will show: "Near three thousand years passed away, from the Mosaick account of the creation, till the Jews, under a national delusion, requested a King. Till then, their form of Government (except in extraordinary cases, where the Almighty interposed) was a kind of Republick," &c.

He proceeds, in the next place, to persuade us that he is as well acquainted with the secrets of Heaven as the devils of Hell, concerning the origin of kingly Government; and that the Almighty consented at last to this "most prosperous invention of Satan," in mere wrath and vengeance against the Jews, as a greater punishment for their ingratitude than could have been inflicted upon them by any other human form of Government. There never was a greater perversion of Scripture than our author has been guilty of in his endeavours to establish this part of his argument, as every man of common understanding, who has his Bible in his hand, may easily perceive.

The bounds prescribed for this letter will not suffer me, at present, to point out his misrepresentations, and to show how he sets himself up, not only against the plain letter of Scripture, but the universal sense of wise and holy men of every age. It is not consistent with my principles to say one word in favour of the divine right of Kings, nor do I believe a word of what others have said in its favour. As little do I believe what has been said concerning the divine right of Republicks, or any other human forms of Government. But the question is, whether God hath particularly reprobated any of them. For my part, as the author has set me the example of examining Scripture on this head, I cannot find any modern Kings particularly rejected by Heaven but Monsieur, the King of France. It is in the thirty-fifth chapter of Ezekiel; and I am sure our author, who is so deeply versed in Scripture, could not have overlooked it, if it had not been for the treaty which he proposes with this King. The reader will readily allow that the application is much more natural than that which the author has made of the 8th chapter of the First Book of Samuel.

"Son of man, set thy face against Mountseir, (Heb. Mounseir, or Monseur;) and prophesy against it, (Heb. him;) and say unto him, thus saith the Lord God: Behold, O Mountseir (or Mounsier) I am against thee, because thou hast had a perpetual hatred, and hast shed the blood of the children of Israel [that is, the French Protestants] by the force of the sword: therefore, as I live, saith the Lord God, I will prepare thee unto blood, and blood shall pursue thee: sith thou hast not hated blood, even blood shall pursue thee. Thus will I make Mountseir (or Monsieur) most desolate, because thou hast said these two nations, and these two countries [here Britain and America are clearly pointed out] shall be mine, and we will possess it; whereas the Lord was there:"—as much as to say, You shall not have these two countries, Monsieur; the Lord intends them for his own use; they shall be free, Protestant countries.

The reader may peruse and apply the remainder of the chapter, which he may do as well as the author of Common Sense; and some may say, perhaps, as well as

YORK COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

Hanover Town, Heidlebergh Township, }
March 30, 1776. }

Whereas information has been given unto us, the subscribers, Members of the General Committee for York County, that a certain Robert Owings, of Heidlebergh Township aforesaid, had, on the 15th day of this instant, in an open and publick manner, taken the liberty to speak in an unbecoming manner against the measures now pursuing for the maintaining our invaluable rights and privileges; and, being called before us, was duly convicted thereof by sufficient testimony. Whereupon he, the said Robert Owings, expressing his hearty and unfeigned sorrow for his said conduct, agreed further to signify his entire disapprobation thereof, by signing the underwritten declaration, which was voted satisfactory.

RICHARD McALLISTER,
HENRY SLAGLE,
CHARLES GALWICK,
JOSEPH JEFFERIS,

Whereas I, the subscriber, having, in an unguarded hour, been induced to degrade and speak disrespectfully of the persons and proceedings of the Committees and other bodies of men unto whom the management of our publick affairs are committed, for the endeavouring to support and maintain our invaluable rights and privileges as freemen, especially by disrespectfully degrading by words, in a most atrocious and insolent manner, the proceedings of the Committees in general, as well as of the honourable the Continental Congress; for all which I am most heartily and unfeignedly sorry; and, craving forgiveness of my country, am in hopes, by my future good conduct, to be again received into the friendship of my neighbours and fellow-citizens. And to manifest that I am a friend to the liberties of my country, I do hereby consent and agree voluntarily to sign the articles of Association recommended by the honourable the Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania for our mutual defence. And, further, I desire that this, my declaration, be made publick.

ROBERT OWINGS.

RECANTATION OF PETER LOUDERBACK.

In Committee, Piles-Grove, Salem County, }
March 30, 1776. }

I, Peter Louderback, having, by divers expressions, shown myself to my countrymen inimical to the present cause of America, by abusing the magistrates in civil power, and calling the persons fighting in the present glorious struggle a set of rascally Rebels, and that the Congress would be all hung; all which unguarded expressions I am heartily sorry for, and do beg pardon of my injured countrymen; promising, for the future, to conduct myself in a more respectable manner, and to do everything in my power to forward the cause of liberty against the present vile Administration.

PETER LOUDERBACK.

GENERAL THOMPSON TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, March 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As a number of troops are arrived, and more are hourly expected, who must be quartered in the city; and as I understand that many of the inhabitants who have quitted the town have left part of their furniture in their houses, I must request that you will give such directions as you may judge best for securing the property of those people whose houses are, or shall be, occupied as barracks for the troops. And you will much oblige, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

WILLIAM THOMPSON.

To the Committee of Safety, New-York.

CAPTAIN GRENNELL TO THOMAS TREDWELL.

SIR: Was this day informed by Mr. Hobart that Mr. Crane is appointed Captain-Lieutenant of the company designed for me. It becomes incumbent on me to inform the Committee of Safety with my determination respecting the appointment, which I thought I had done already by my letter to General Woodhull; but as that was not read in Congress, must again say, that I am so bound in the nomination I gave the Congress, (and that more especially to Mr. Stoddard, wherein he was named for Captain-Lieutenant,) that I cannot in honour be released; therefore must repeat, that I cannot serve, and resign a commission that I confess gave me pleasure, in the hopes of being serviceable to my country in a way that best suited my genius. But, however, doubt not some better man will easily be found to supply my place.

It may be asked why I refused serving. The case was this: I was desired to look out and nominate proper men for officers, which I understood was a privilege given Captain Lamb also; and concluded from thence that the Congress meant to confirm the nomination, otherwise I should not have put any gentlemen to the pain or suspense or of being so publicly rejected, and thereby have avoided the situation I am now in; in consequence of which, I gave Mr. Stoddard the fullest assurances that he would be confirmed, and pledged my commission to him for the certainty, otherwise he would not have left Captain Billings, with whom he was engaged as a First Lieutenant, and at the time about marching from New-York to the northward, and was to commission his officers at General Schuyler's; which opportunity Stoddard has now lost.

The chance of raising a company here for that service being now over, I have turned my attention another way, and perhaps may be as serviceable to my country as a private as I would have been in commission. Please to acquaint the respectable the Committee of Safety with my determination; and though am not in office, my sentiments of the cause are not changed, in which I hope to live and die; being, with regard, sir, your humble servant,

JOHN GRENNELL.

To Mr. Thomas Tredwell, New-York.

TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY, NEW-YORK.

New-York, March 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: It astonishes every lover of his country your allowing at this time so many gentlemen to leave this Continent and go to Britain. You cannot have too many pledges in your hands, and there are none at this period of danger that should be allowed to leave the Continent who are able to bear arms; far less should they be allowed to be conveying quantities of specie out of this Province. The passengers now going from this place must pay their freight in gold and silver, which will at least take away one thousand pounds in cash. This hurts the cause much more than importing necessary articles. Do not stumble at mole-hills and jump over mountains.

Yours, as you conduct yourselves,

AMERICANUS.

ELIHU MARVIN TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Cornwall Precinct, March 30, 1776.

SIR: The subscriber of the enclosed, Jonathan Brooks and Reuben Clark, being proper members of the Committee of Cornwall Precinct, and the bearer, (Nathan June,) informs the need of having the commissions sent speedily. If you can send them by the bearer, you will oblige your humble servant,

JOHN BLACKLER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Esopus Jail, March 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Conscious of my own innocence as to acting any ways derogatory from the rules established by the Congress, I am emboldened to flatter myself my crime cannot be of so heinous a nature but that my present punishment is sufficient. I have now been confined upwards of one hundred days, without the least prospect of enlargement on the one hand, and my inevitable ruin on the other. Had I ever, directly or indirectly, been employed in the present unhappy contest, I should not have murmured; but on bare suspicion to be sent away from my friends and the means of support, surely is cruel. The term limited by the honourable the Continental Congress for a capital offender is but three months imprisonment. That time (if I am made to appear in that light) is expired. All that I crave is liberty to return to my native country, in order to live peaceably, if possible; or, should not that be agreeable, permission to seek a living within any bounds you may think proper to allow; and on the breach of such restriction, my life shall pay the forfeit. Should I be so happy as to merit your attention, it shall ever, with a most grateful heart, be acknowledged by, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN BLACKLER.

To New-York Committee of Safety.

Albany Committee-Chamber, March 30, 1776.

A Petition of Henry Van Rensselaer and Sons was laid before this Board; which said Petition is in the following words, to wit:

To the Committee of Safety, &c., of the County of ALBANY.
The Petition of HENRY VAN RENSSELAER and Sons, of CLAVEBACK, humbly sheweth:

That whereas the Provincial Congress of this Colony has recommended the erection of two Powder-Mills in this County, under certain encouragements and regulations, as more particularly by said resolves will appear:

Your Petitioners have taken the said resolves into consideration, and are of opinion that their situation at the place aforesaid is conveniently formed for erecting a manufactory of the kind, a sufficient stream running at the distance of more than two miles east from Hudson's River, which they conceive to be proper for the said purpose. They therefore humbly request the Committee will take the same into consideration; and if, upon inquiry, the said place will answer the intention of said resolves, they pray that they may be entitled to the recommendation of this Committee for the purpose aforesaid; and your Petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

HENRY VAN RENSSELAER & SONS.

Resolved, That the prayer of the said Petition be granted, and they are hereby recommended to the Provincial Congress accordingly.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO SILAS DEANE.
Camp before Quebec, March 30, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have often sat down to write you, and as often been prevented by matters of consequence crowding upon me, which I could not postpone. I am now so much perplexed with a multiplicity of affairs that I can hardly form an assemblage of three ideas, and those, I am afraid, will not be very pleasing to you, as they convey no very agreeable intelligence, but rather matters of complaint, (which, I make no doubt, you are daily troubled with.) Without further preamble, I shall give you a short sketch of our strength, situation, prospects, &c.: From the 1st of January to the 1st of March, we have never had more than seven hundred effective men on the ground, and frequently not more than five hundred; since which we have been increasing in our numbers, as you will observe by the enclosed morning reports. Our numbers are far short of what I expected before this time, and the New-England Troops will be of very little service to us for some time, as the greatest part of them have the small-pox. That fatal disorder has got into our camp, though every method that prudence could suggest has been attempted to prevent it; a variety of orders have been repeatedly given, (some of which I enclose,) and as repeatedly disobeyed or neglected. The reinforcements, (as fast as they came in,) privately prepared and inoculated, (Colonel Warner's Regiment and Major Cady's detachment in particular;) not one-quarter of the former, and very few of the latter, are fit for duty; so that the publick will incur an expense of at least twenty pounds for each of those people, who will not, on an average, have done ten days' service to the 15th April, to which time they are engaged. Our Surgeons are without medicine; our Hospitals crowded, and in want of almost every necessary.

Enclosed is a small sketch of the City of Quebeck and vicinity, by which you will see the great extent of ground we are obliged to occupy. No less than twenty-six miles makes a tour of the rounds, including three ferries. A few small cannon—sixes, twelves, and one twenty-four-pounder, little ball, and less powder, cannot be expected to effect the reduction of a place so strongly fortified as Quebeck. Three seven-inch mortars, a few shells, (and those too small,) will cut a despicable figure at a bomb-battery, and serve but to expose our weakness; only one Artillery officer, and twenty matrosses, very few of whom know their duty; not one artificer for making carcasses, or any kind of fire-works. An able Engineer (a most necessary man in an army) wanting, and no prospect of being supplied with one; a well furnished military chest (which gives life and spirits to an army) entirely wanting, without which we cannot make one movement in this country. For, to tell you the truth, our credit extends no farther than our arms. Add to this catalogue, want of provisions, (not more than one month's on hand,) and our resources uncertain, and most of the New-England, and all the New-York Troops, engaged no longer than the 15th April—these are some few of the difficulties we have to encounter.

The want of money and provisions laid me under the necessity, the 4th of this month, to issue a Proclamation, giving our paper money a currency; promising to exchange it in four months for hard cash, at the same time declaring those enemies who should refuse it. About fifteen thousand dollars have been paid away. Many received it willingly, but the greater part of the people were averse to taking it. This step could not possibly be avoided, and will have this good effect: those who have received it will be interested in keeping the credit of it good. Notwithstanding this long catalogue of wants, &c., we are determined to exert ourselves. The officers and men are in general in good spirits, but too few in numbers to attempt an escalade. We are, therefore, raising batteries; one on Point Levi, of three twelve-pounders and one eight-inch howitz, will be ready to open to-morrow; another on the Heights of Abraham, within five hundred yards of the wall, of one twenty-four-pounder, four twelves, two sixes, and two howitz, we expect to open in four or five days. I have one gondola, mounting one twelve-pounder, at Sellery, with several armed boats. I am preparing a fire-ship to send into the Cul-du-Sac, where the two frigates and merchant ships are lying, which I make no doubt will have a proper effect if we are not prevented by ice, or contrary winds, until the ships can lay in the stream. If we should be happy enough to succeed in destroying the ships, I think it will be impossible for the town to hold out until they can be relieved.

A few days since I received intelligence from Point La Caile (twelve leagues from the south shore) that a party of sixty men had landed there from Quebeck, and that two hundred and fifty Canadians had joined them, and seized a convoy of our provisions. I immediately despatched Major Dubourgs, Captain Bruyn, and eighty men, in pursuit of them, who surprised their advanced guard, killed seven, wounded two, and took thirty-eight prisoners, with the King's standard, without any loss on our side; the rest dispersed immediately, and everything now remains quiet.

It is now twelve o'clock at night, and I dare say you will be glad when I end my dull epistle.

I am, with great truth and sincerity, dear sir, your friend and humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To the Honourable Silas Deane, Esq.

General Orders before QUEBECK, FEBRUARY 11, 1776.

Whereas the repeated orders given to prevent the spreading of that fatal disorder the Small-Pox, have been in a great measure disregarded; it is ordered that the commanding officer of every company immediately send such of his company as are seized with it to the Hospital; and all soldiers who shall know of any persons with that disorder in their private quarters, and do not make immediate complaint thereof to the Barrackmaster, shall be treated as neglecting their duty, and guilty of a breach of orders.

General Orders before QUEBECK, MARCH 15, 1776.

As the spreading the Small-Pox at this juncture will probably prove the entire ruin of the Army, the officers are desired to take all possible care to prevent it, by keeping the men from strolling from their quarters.

The Surgeons of the Army are forbid, under the severest penalty, to inoculate any person. And as many officers and men are preparing for the small-pox, it is said with an intention of taking it by inoculation; to prevent the fatal consequences attending such conduct, those who are found guilty, if officers, will be immediately cashiered; if private soldiers, punished at the discretion of a Court-Martial.

PAYMASTER-GENERAL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 18. Referred to Mr. Read, Mr. Clinton, Mr. Braxton.]

Watertown, March 30, 1776.

SIR: I beg the favour of you to make my grateful acknowledgments to the Congress for the honour they did me in appointing me Paymaster-General of the Army. I have endeavoured to answer their expectation, by executing that office with assiduity and fidelity, and should think it an honour still to continue in that station. But, sir, as the operations of war may, and probably will, change their seat, and some other of the Colonies be the principal scene of action, and it may be expected that I should attend the Army with the General and Commander-in-Chief, you will oblige me by desiring the Congress, under these circumstances, to accept my resignation of that office. The inconvenience to my private affairs is the smallest inducement to this step. The provision made for the support of the Paymaster's office is ample. But, as I have ever made the publick good my ruling principle, I flatter myself, from the connection and interest I have here, it may be more in my power to render some small services to the publick here than in another part of the Continent. I hope, therefore, this resignation will not be considered as proceeding from any discontent, or want of respect for the General or for the Congress, whose dignity and influence I make it my business on all occasions to support.

I shall be ready to render my accounts of the disposition of the money I have received, in such manner as the Congress shall direct, and to serve them in any station they may think proper to appoint me to.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

J. WARREN.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Congress.

MARK HOPKINS TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Great-Barrington, March 30, 1776.

SIR: Upon the receipt of the Militia Bill, and the order of the honourable Council conformable thereto, the Field-Officers of the Regiment which I have the honour to command, met, and divided the same into companies; and, amongst the rest, divided this town of Barrington into two companies, by a line running east and west through the middle of the same, having first taken off some of the out corners of the town, and placed them to other companies for their convenience. After which division, the companies were brought to a choice of their officers, and chose those named in the list now sent to the Secretary. The Captains of each company were chosen by a bare majority of votes, and the Lieutenants but by a few more. Since the choice, a large number of the soldiers appear to be very uneasy with the officers elected. Those of the South Company say that Captain Peter Ingersoll was broke last fall by the sentence of a Court-Martial in the Continental Army, and was then declared incapable of sustaining any office in the Continental service. The First Lieutenant, Timothy Younglove, they say is a Tory, and during the whole of our troubles has manifested himself unfriendly to the common cause, and openly opposed all the measures that have been recommended by the Congress; therefore that he ought not to have any command in the Militia. Those in the North Company say that the Captain, Hewit Root, is advanced in years, and by frequent fits of the gout, or rheumatism, is rendered incapable of doing the duties of his office. They also object against the moral character and general conduct of the First Lieutenant; and the uneasiness in both companies has risen to that height, that they say they never will bear arms under these officers, so long as they are able to earn enough to pay their fines.

It must be observed that the town consists of members of the Church of England and Dissenters; the former of which (a few excepted) have been very backward in all our late publick matters, and amongst us are denominated Tories. It is said that by their interest principally, the aforementioned officers were elected. They have never turned any men out for the publick service, which the other party have; and thus, being all present, are able to outvote the Whigs.

A petition has been presented to me, signed by fifty-four persons, requesting an alteration in the division of said companies into East and West Companies. By the proposed new division, the main of those called Tories will be in the West Company. The petitioners imagine that, upon a choice according to this division, such officers would be chosen as would give general satisfaction. The other party say that this proposed division will give as great uneasiness as the present, and they, to the number of eighty-seven, have petitioned against the proposed new division. The Field-Officers, upon the present appearance, are of opinion that, if the now proposed division had been made at first, it might have been for the best; but after we had proceeded to make a division, and a choice of officers has been made accordingly, thought ourselves hardly warranted to make a new division without the direction of the honourable Council; and the rest of the Field-Officers directed me to write to your Honours upon the matter. William Whiting, Esq., the Representative from the town, can fully inform your Honours of the difficulties and circumstances attending the whole matter, to whom we refer for that purpose.

I beg leave further to mention, that a part of this town, called the Hoplands, containing about thirty-eight men, is separated from the rest of this town by mountains, in such a manner that the people there cannot get to the place of parade here without travelling eight or ten miles. They lie contiguous to a part of Tyringham; we therefore determined that they should join that part of Tyringham, and so make a company; but upon notice, the said Hoplanders refused to join with Tyringham. They are so few that, by the act, they cannot be formed into a company by themselves; so that, as matters now stand, they must be obliged to join the North Company in this town; and yet they have had no voice in the choice of the officers, it not being known but that they would be willing to join with Tyringham till after the choice here.

We look to your Honours for direction in these matters, not doubting but the people will acquiesce in what your Honours shall direct in the premises.

I am your Honours' most humble servant,

MARK HOPKINS.

To the President of the Honourable Council of Massachusetts-Bay.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

Annapolis, March 31, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosed is a copy of a letter we have just received from Mr. Hughes. And as mounting the eighteen-pounders immediately will be a capital thing for your town, and, eventually, the Province in general, we request you will exert your utmost diligence in getting the carriages ready for them.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Baltimore County.

TO CATO, CASSANDRA, AND ALL THE WRITERS ON THE INDEPENDENT CONTROVERSY.

Philadelphia, March 31, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: * Though it might be deemed absolutely necessary to suppress all publications which tend to disunite the Colonies in their present spirited opposition to a cruel and unnatural attack from the people of England; yet, as the question of Independency has been lately started, in a pamphlet entitled Common Sense, and supported by a variety of subsequent authors, I confess I was much pleased on the appearance of a writer on the other side of the question; for, as I have no other view than peace and happiness for myself and posterity, I was determined to give an earnest attention to the arguments on both sides. It is no matter with me whether I live under an Emperor, a Pope, a Bashaw, a King of England, or a Republick, provided I can be convinced, by irrefutable arguments, that such or such a state contained the greatest quantity of happiness for the people at large, and for individuals in particular; for, as I am in the situation of ninety-nine out of every hundred in the world, who have no expectations of ever ascending into office, and riding upon the top of the machine, and have only to expect to contribute my proportion of labour to wheel it along, I therefore think it my business, as well as my fellow-labourers', to see that it is so constructed as to move with as little labour as possible, and the machinery so contrived as to be the least liable to get out of order in the variety of rough and smooth roads through which we must inevitably pass. Now, taking it for granted that the machine must necessarily be kept in proper motion, I conclude, we are not to consult the ease and convenience of the riders, but that of the draughtsmen, who, being the majority, and giving motion to the machine for their own emolument—(I know, critics, the simile won't run upon all fours, but I shall nevertheless stick to it till you offer me a better)—I say, we move it along for our own emolument; and if the riders should insist on having it built to contain only a single chair for a crowned head, or to spread a larger floor over our heads to support a Commonwealth, we who pull, and not they who ride, ought to be the judges of the matter; for that some must pull, and that some will ride, in every community on the face of the earth, must be granted me; therefore, all I have to consider, with the rest of my brethren on the ground, is to attach myself to that machine, or (if you won't let me pursue the simile) to that form of Government, which will afford me the most ease, and give me the least pain.

People in general know so little of the different movements of a State, and the complicated connections and dependencies on the other powers of the world, that they are almost unequal to the task of forming a proper judgment of the fitness or unfitness of this or that mode; for this reason it gave me great pleasure to think I was now about to have the matter laid before me in an open and candid manner, that I and the rest of my unlettered brethren might judge for ourselves. The writer signed Cato, I should have liked much better had his actions corresponded with his declarations. Says he, "Nor need any person be alarmed; for an indecent nor angry expression shall not dishonour my pen, nor yet a single sentiment which is not calculated to cement all parties in the Province, upon safe and popular grounds, more firmly than ever, in executing the resolves of the Congress, and maintaining American liberty." Had this decency really prevailed in Cato's breast, why did he, a few lines before, charge the commentators on the conduct of the Assembly with "scurrilous misrepresentations?" Decency and scurrility can certainly have no possible connection; and, unhappily for him, in his second letter, he proceeds to term a writer, who styles himself Cassandra, "an enthusiast, a madman, and a barbarian." Language of this kind can be of no real use to men who are searching for truth; and I will take the liberty to request Cato, in his future essays, to keep up to the decency he professed to set out with. I could have wished to have passed Cassandra unnoticed on this head; but as he also has given too much reason for censure, I will just make free to say, that his arguments have acquired no force with me by directing personal attacks on Cato, and endeavouring to point out the real man to the publick; nay, by introducing the very name of a private gentleman into his essays, and obliquely glancing at him as the writer of Cato's letters. I am sensible it is so guarded that Cassandra may plead off, and declare, if he pleases, that he had no such person in view; and Cato might find it difficult to disprove his sincerity. Cassandra may also assert, where he hints at the danger which Cato runs of "too far provoking the majesty of the people by the bold flourishes of a pen which pays no respect to truth, lest he may find it expedient to end his days on the principles of dependency," that he meant no such thing as the threatening Cato with the chance of being hanged by a mob; though his marking the word "dependency" in italicks, will certainly convey that idea to many minds. Now, gentlemen, with all due respect to you both, I would wish you to avoid indecency and personality. However sharp your minds may be set against each other, upon a supposition that you have got at the secret of names on both sides, I would request you to consider, that though you are both volunteers, yet you are in some measure accountable to the publick. If two advocates, pleading a cause of great importance before a learned Court and an intelligent Jury, were to make use of illiberal reflections upon each other's characters, and rip up a long list of charges of fraudulent designs and wicked practices, would not both Court and Jury think themselves grossly insulted, and would not such advocates deserve the severest censure from the bench? Be pleased to remember, gentlemen, you are pleading at the bar of the publick, upon a cause of greater importance than ever came before any tribunal on earth—no less than whether it is expedient or inexpedient to make a total separation in Government between the new and the old world. Do you think, gentlemen, that a thousandth part of your readers either know, care for, or desire to know, who are the writers on this popular subject? If John a Nokes and Tom a Stiles should be fixed on as the authors in this city, and should hand forth to the publick every foible and unfavourable incident of each other's life, of what importance, think you, would this be to those who are strangers to them both? If Kouli Khan's gardener's daughter had a child by the Grand Vizier's brother, what has that to do with the Revolution in Persia? It is the matter, and not the man, that the publick are concerned with. If Lord North himself was a prisoner amongst us, and should issue forth from his confinement daily lucubrations on the subject now before us, I would give them as earnest a reading as if they flowed from the pen of a Camden or a Burke; and yet I am a zealous advocate against Great Britain in the present controversy. It is truth alone I am hunting for, and this I believe to be the case with nine-tenths of the people; therefore I beg you will behave like gentlemen to yourselves and to the publick; canvass the matter fairly, fully, and freely; and do not suppose yourselves of so much importance as to think we shall be pleased with your calling off our attention from the grand question, to the unimportant discussions of the characters or schemes of either party. I, with a great number of others, should be glad to see you enter deeply into the question on both sides. State the advantages of an Independence—the benefits to be derived from a new mode of Government; how it will affect individuals; the additional happiness and freedom it will produce—particularized in a number of plain, clear instances; for though I, and some others, might be satisfied with the general assertion, "that the State will be much benefited by the change," yet there is no gaining admission into some bosoms but by full and positive demonstration; and the number of such is very great. To make myself better understood, I mean thus: If A, being a shopkeeper in this city, having a tolerable stand for business, though at a distance from the market, was to be advised by B to remove his shop to the outskirts of the town, where he should be sure to make his fortune, A would naturally require of B some proof of its probability, as the proposal might seem a strange one; but if B, being in the secret, should inform him that the Corporation had determined to remove the market to that very spot, A would not hesitate a moment about the matter. So with respect to Independence: some people will be satisfied with nothing short of such clear and demonstrative evidence. You must tell them, also, of the particular new trades which will be opened to us; the prices our goods will bear at home to the farmer, and what they will bring at such and such ports, and how much those prices exceed what we have been used to get for them at the markets we were allowed to trade to. In this you must name the articles, the prices, and the places. You must then tell us the advantages of buying linens, woollens, cottons, silks, and hardware in France, Spain, and Portugal, and other counties in Europe, and how much cheaper they are than in England and Ireland. In this, too, you must name the goods, the places, and prices; and whether these places will take in exchange our lumber, our naval stores, our tobacco, flaxseed, &c., &c., and what prices they will give; what credit it is customary for those several places to allow to foreigners on what we commonly call dry goods—for our country people generally requiring credit, the merchant-importer must have credit too, otherwise trade will be confined to a few rich houses, who will exact what prices they please upon the farmer and consumer. Next, you must show that the charge of supporting Government will be less, in a state of independence, than it hath been heretofore, during a connection; you must name the expenses we now pay, and the expenses we shall then pay; you must give an estimate of the charge of supporting such an Army and Navy in time of peace, as may always preserve the peace. There are many who will not be satisfied with your telling them that “a well-regulated Militia will save all the expense arising on the score of an Army;” say they, a man’s time and labour, when he musters, will always be the same to him as money paid, and that, therefore, you must fix the number of men that are to be enrolled every year, and the number of times they shall appear; for instance, if in Pennsylvania twenty-five thousand should muster eight times in the year, at two shillings and six pence per day, it would amount to twenty-five thousand pounds, which would be just equal to the present one shilling and six pence tax on all the estates in the Province; if they are to receive no pay, it will nevertheless be a loss to them equal to that sum; if they are to be paid, the amount of this tax should certainly be estimated, because it must be paid by the community at large in every Province, in proportion to the numbers so enrolled as a Militia. The expense of building a sufficient fleet should also be ascertained, and also the number of ships and men necessary to be kept in constant pay, as guarda costas, occasional convoys or despatch vessels, conveying Ambassadors to the different ports in Europe; and you must also estimate the annual expense of watching and keeping those vessels in repair which are laid up. Also, the expenses of maintaining in every Court of Europe Ambassadors, Consuls, Messengers, Spies, and even bribe-money, for intelligence of the designs of their respective Cabinets. Also, the expenses of the Fleet and Army in time of war; for we may reasonably expect to share the fate of other nations, and of being sometimes unfortunately engaged in war with some troublesome ambitious Prince or other. Perhaps they may undertake to stop our trade up the Straits, in the Mediterranean, or up the North Seas, to Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Russia: we must then either give it up, or fight for it, or pay some subsidy to a foreign power for protection in those seas—the expenses in any, or all of these cases, you should give to us. Also, in what proportion the value of our estates in America will increase, so as to defray the necessary charges of Government, taking for granted that a one shilling and six pence tax in the pound on all taxable estates in America does now yield five hundred and thirty-three thousand three hundred and thirty-three dollars—being rather more than half a million; which is calculated thus: Pennsylvania is rated by the Congress to pay about one-eighth of all the expenses of the United Colonies; and as a tax of one shilling and six pence in the pound in the said Province, nets about twenty-five thousand pounds, we may suppose a one shilling and six pence tax upon the United Colonies will yield just eight times as much; which is two hundred thousand pounds, our currency, or five hundred and thirty-three thousand three hundred and thirty-three dollars per annum. Lastly, you are to consider, after all things are candidly stated, whether the sums annually raised on the one hand to protect ourselves, and the absolute gain in trade (over and above what we used to make) on the other hand, do or do not render it most for our interest to separate from Britain.

On the part of those who contend for a reunion, they must show what are the advantages that result from such a connection; what were the customary expenses of Government in America before the present rupture; what are the exclusive privileges we derive from exporting goods to Great Britain; whether there are acts of Parliament in favour of the Colonies, to the prejudice of other nations, and which we reap the sole advantage of, and whether these are equivalent to any loss we may sustain by having our trade confined to them; whether our trade is not limited to our great disadvantage. You are to particularize the ports we may trade to under the old regulations, and the different articles of America which we may carry directly to foreign ports. You must also show that the principle part of the goods we import from England and Ireland could not be supplied us upon as good terms from any other country; and that those nations with whom we might incline to trade, would not grant us bounties upon naval stores and sundry other articles, in the same manner as England does; the amount of which, annually paid to the Colonies, you should sum up. You must also show cause, if you can, why America ought not to take credit to herself for all the taxes paid by the English manufacturers before they send their goods to the Colonies, it being generally granted that the consumer ultimately pays all charges. You must also show whether taxes on goods imported into America from Holland, France, or Spain, where imposts are very heavy, are or are not added to the cost of the said goods, in the same manner as we reckon them on English goods. Also, whether the long established credit our American merchants have obtained in England, in the interior part of the kingdom, with the original manufacturers, cannot be as well accomplished in the new countries we may go to; or whether we must take their goods from merchants at the several out-ports, with all the middle men’s or intervening dealers’ profit added to them. And if we should obtain credit at such places for twelve months, as in England, what will be the advance which a Frenchman, a Dutchman, or a Spaniard, will choose to put on his goods, as an equivalent for the risk which he will suppose himself to run by trusting strangers. Whether it is not a generally established custom with all trading nations to trust foreigners, with whom they have no legal or political constitutional connection, as freely as their own subjects in distant parts of the world. If this is not generally the case, you should show why America cannot make treaties with such powers in order to obtain credit, either by pledging to them the estates of the community at large, to make good deficiencies that might happen by individuals failing or neglecting to pay such foreign debts, or by such other means as the American States might think fit to offer. You should also show whether the low price of goods for many years past, was owing to the smallness of the demand, or to the great quantity brought to market, or to the reasonableness and moderation of the importing merchants; and whether if France, Spain, and Holland, should refuse to give credit to every young merchant going out for a cargo, with a tolerable recommendation, as the traders in England have been accustomed to do—I say, if this should be the case, and the importations should fall wholly into the hands of a few rich merchants, why might not some mode of restriction be entered into for preventing the exorbitant exactions they might be guilty of, to the great injury of the consumers. You must also convince the farmer, if he bought his goods as low as formerly, occasioned by a reunion with Great Britain, that he would also have the same advantages of shipping off his produce, which he has been used to, without any restriction being laid on our trade that might lower the price when he brought his crops to market. You must also point out what advantage it would be to England to have tobacco once more exported to them; and whether this, among other considerations, would be any inducement for them to offer us better terms. Some might possibly think that, nationally speaking, the being deprived of an expensive luxury would be rather a gain than a loss; for though the tax on this article may be rated at four hundred thousand pounds per annum, yet it is wholly paid by themselves, as well as the nett cost of the tobacco. The publick funds would, indeed, be losers, but the people would be gainers in a sum just equal to the nett amount paid to the American planter; therefore you must show other reasons why England would give up any points for the sake of reconciliation. And before this point is settled, you must convince us that the people of England are not gainers by our withholding trade to the West-Indies; for as the large quantities of rum and sugar, which we formerly imported from the Islands, will now be sent to England, the price to the consumer there will be considerably abated; of course the quantity used by the lower class of people will be increased; and as those articles pay very high duties, the revenue will be capitally enlarged. And it may be supposed to have this further effect: the great tracts of ground hitherto occupied in England for raising grain, purely to distil spirits, will, in a great measure, be deprived of their object, by the plenty of rum carried in from the West-Indies; and as a total stop is put to the exportation of tea, it may probably fall so low in England as (together with the low price of sugar) to make it a very general diet, morning and night, for the lower class of people; thus drinking foreign spirit, and making part of their meal of foreign produce, the land which was before employed in those services may be spared for raising provisions to ship to the West-Indies, where they will be sure to come to a good market as long as we withhold our trade thither. Therefore you must show some substantial reason for your opinion, that it is the interest of England to wish our trade with the West-Indies restored to its old state; for if England can now buy her sugar and rum cheaper, and sell her grain higher than formerly, why should she wish to reunite with us on this score? A full reply to this suggestion is expected.

You must also prove that England, on a reunion, would grant us such a protection as would secure our property in any part of the world; and that, on our complaining to their Court of seizures or detainer of our vessels by the Russians, Normans, Swedes, Danes, Hamburgers, Dutch, French, Portuguese, Spaniards, the States of Medina, Tuscany, Venice, Rome, Geneva, Courland, Grecian, Turkish, or Piratical States, &c., &c., that they would demand instant satisfaction and restitution for us, as is usual with their own ships, and all this without bringing us in for any share of the expenses. Business of this kind took up a great deal of the attention of the Commonwealth of England, their vessels being frequently detained and insulted; but, by the spirited conduct of the Protector, justice was always obtained. It is therefore your part to show that, on a reunion, the King of Great Britain would take as ample care of the Americans, in such cases, as Cromwell did of British property. Or if a reunion should not take place, you are to point out sufficient reasons to justify you in the supposition that America has not or may not have a naval power competent to the task of doing herself justice. You must also show, in case of a reunion, that England would not call on us for a share of the expenses attending a compact with Russia or other European Princes, in order to keep up the balance of the Protestant power against the Roman Catholic States, thereby preventing Popery from overrunning the world. And you must, lastly, show that, by a reconciliation on constitutional principles, we shall return to the free, money-getting trade we formerly enjoyed; and that we shall have it enlarged to us upon a grand national scale, without any regard to the private emolument of this or that party, but upon principles of the general interest of the whole Empire, without our paying any taxes for the support of Government, more than what we have been used to—the debt arising from the present dispute only excepted. That the administration of justice, and security of property, will be as upright and safe as heretofore; and that the present happiness and future liberty of America would be as well maintained in a reunion as by a separation.

These are heads which I would wish to see separately and largely discussed. And I entreat you, gentlemen, to pursue the subject with calmness and temper. Stick to the matter and neglect the man. It imports not who is the writer, but all are eventually concerned in the cause. I shall read your controversy with great attention, and so will thousands beside me; and if, upon an impartial hearing, it shall appear to be for the real interest of America to cut the Gordian-knot, and establish Independence, I declare, with the utmost sincerity and solemnity, that I will give it my hearty concurrence.

Should curiosity, agreeable to the fashion of the times, tempt some readers to desire a knowledge of the writer of this essay, they may be informed that his fortune, his connexions, and everything he holds dear, give him a deep interest in the happiness of America; that his abilities to serve his country rise no higher than to occupy the station of an honest man and quiet citizen; and, most happily for him, he has never been prompted by ambition to quit his post, being simply and truly

A COMMON MAN.

AZOR BETTS TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Esopus Jail, March 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I flatter myself my present melancholy situation will be a sufficient pardon for this intrusion; but where can the wretched flee for shelter, but to those where the power of extricating them is lodged? By the last post, gentlemen, I troubled you with a petition, the purport of which I am willing most solemnly to swear to; and as the inevitable ruin of myself and family must be the certain issue of my confinement, therefore trust to your clemency for my enlargement, which, if I am so happy as to obtain, shall ever, with gratitude, be remembered by, gentlemen, your very obedient, humble servant,

AZOR BETTS.

COLONEL NICOLL TO JOHN McKESSON.

Fort Constitution, March 31, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have a copy of a letter sent to Congress by Captain Raymond, but am doubtful it never was delivered, as I have not had any account of the receipt of it. The Garrison is still destitute of the greatest part of the articles therein mentioned. I desire you would let the Committee of Safety see the enclosed copy, if the original was not delivered, and let me know, as soon as possible, how I am to be provided with necessaries, both for this and the Garrison at Pooplopen's Kill.

I sent an account by Captain Moffat, a few days ago, of sundries the Island is charged with for the use of the Garrison; and as the money is wanting, should be glad to know how I am to come at it. Be good enough to introduce the matter in Committee of Safety, and let me know their conclusion. Your compliance will oblige, sir, your humble servant,

ISAAC NICOLL.

To John McKesson, Esquire.

N. B. Mr. Phelps has been here since the enclosed letter was written, but has made no provision at all only some fresh meat and potatoes.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, March 31, 1776—5 o'clock, P. M.

SIR: I am to inform your Excellency that I have this moment an express from Newport, informing me that a ship-of-war hath arrived in the harbour of Newport, and that twenty-seven ships, undoubtedly having the Ministerial Troops on board, are within Second-Point. Upon this most alarming occasion, when we have not more than four hundred soldiers upon Rhode-Island, and not above seven or eight hundred more in the whole Colony, besides the Militia, not more than half armed, I must use the most pressing instances with your Excellency to forward sufficient succors to the Colony with all possible despatch. I am about issuing the necessary orders for calling the whole Militia together, and taking other proper measures.

I am, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOHN A. WASHINGTON,

Cambridge, March 31, 1776.

DEAR BROTHER: Your letter of the 24th ultimo was duly forwarded to this camp by Colonel Lee, and gave me the pleasure of hearing that you, my sister, and family, were well. After your post is established to Fredericksburgh, the intercourse, by letter, may become regular and certain; and whenever time (little of which, God knows, I have for friendly correspondences) will permit, I shall be happy in writing to you. I cannot call to mind the date of my last to you, but this I recollect, that I have written more letters to, than I have received from you.

The want of arms, powder, &c., is not peculiar to Virginia. This country (of which, doubtless, you have heard such large and flattering accounts) is more deficient of each than you can conceive. I have been here months together with (what will scarce be believed) not thirty rounds of musket cartridges a man—have been obliged to submit to all the insults of the enemy's cannon for want of powder, keeping what little we had for pistol distance. Another thing has been done, which, added to the above; will put it in the power of this Army to say what, perhaps, none other, with justice, ever could: We have maintained our ground against the enemy under the above want of powder, and we have disbanded one Army and recruited another within musket-shot of two-and-twenty regiments, the flower of the British Army, when our strength had been little, if any, superior to theirs; and at last have beat them, in a shameful and precipitate manner, out of a place the strongest by nature on this Continent—strengthened and fortified in the best manner, and at an enormous expense.

As some account of the late manœuvre of both armies may not be unacceptable, I shall, hurried as I always am, devote a little time to it.

Having received a small supply of powder, then, very inadequate to our wants, I resolved to take possession of Dorchester-Point, lying east of Boston, looking directly into it, and commanding, absolutely, the enemy's lines on the Neck (Boston.) To effect this, which I knew would force the enemy to an engagement, or subject them to be enfiladed by our cannon, it was necessary, in the first instance, to possess two Heights, (those mentioned in General Burgoyne's letter to Lord Stanley, in his account of the battle of Bunker's Hill.) which had the entire command of it. The ground at this time being frozen upwards of two feet deep, and as impenetrable as a rock, nothing could be attempted with earth. We were obliged, therefore, to provide an amazing quantity of chandeliers and fascines for the work; and on the night of the 4th, after a previous severe cannonade and bombardment for three nights together, to divert the enemy's attention from our real design, removed every material to the spot, under cover of darkness, and took full possession of those Heights, without the loss of a single man.

Upon their discovering of the works next morning, great preparations were made for attacking them; but, not being ready before the afternoon, and the weather getting very tempestuous, much blood was saved, and a very important blow (to one side or the other) prevented. That this remarkable interposition of Providence is for some wise purpose, I have no doubt; but as the principal design of the manœuvre was to draw the enemy to an engagement under disadvantages—as a premeditated plan was laid for this purpose, and seemed to be proceeding to my utmost wish; and as no men seemed better disposed to make the appeal than ours did upon that occasion, I can scarce forbear lamenting the disappointment, unless the dispute is drawing to an accommodation, and the sword going to be sheathed.

But to return; the enemy, thinking (as we have since learned) that we had got too securely posted before the second morning to be much hurt by them, and apprehending great annoyance from our new works, resolved upon a retreat, and accordingly embarked in as much hurry, precipitation, and confusion, as ever troops did, the 17th, not taking time to fit their transports, but leaving King's property in Boston to the amount (as is supposed) of thirty or forty thousand pounds, in provisions, stores, &c. Many pieces of cannon, some mortars, and a number of shot, shells, &c., are also left; and baggage-wagons, artillery-carts, &c., which they have been eighteen months preparing to take the field with, were found destroyed, thrown into the docks, and drifted upon every shore. In short, Dunbar's destruction of stores after General Braddock's defeat, which made so much noise, affords but a faint idea of what was to be met with here.

The enemy lay from the 17th to the 27th in Nantasket and King's Roads, about nine miles from Boston, to take in water from the Islands thereabout, surrounded by their shipping, and to fit themselves for sea. Whither they are now bound, and where their tents will be next pitched, I know not; but as New-York and the Hudson River are the most important objects they can have in view, as the latter secures the communication with Canada, at the same time it separates the Northern and Southern Colonies, and the former is thought to abound in disaffected persons, who only wait a favourable opportunity and support, to declare themselves openly, it became equally important for us to prevent their gaining possession of these advantages; and, therefore, so soon as they embarked, I detached a brigade of six regiments to that Government; so soon as they sailed, another brigade composed of the same number; and to-morrow another of five will march. In a day or two more I shall follow myself, and be in New-York ready to receive all but the first.

The enemy left all their works standing in Boston and on Bunker's Hill—and formidable they are. The town has shared a much better fate than was expected, the damage done to the houses being nothing equal to report; but the inhabitants have suffered a good deal by being plundered by the soldiery at their departure. All those who took upon themselves the style and title of Government-men in Boston, in short, all those who have acted an unfriendly part in this great contest, have shipped themselves off in the same hurry; but under still greater disadvantages than the King's Troops have done, being obliged to man their own vessels, (for seamen could not be had for the transports for the King's use,) and submit to every hardship that can be conceived. One or two have done what a great many ought to have done long ago—committed suicide.

By all accounts, there never existed a more miserable set of beings than these wretched creatures now are. Taught to believe that the power of Great Britain was superior to all opposition, and that foreign aid, if not, was at hand, they were even higher, and more insulting in their opposition, than the Regulars. When the order issued, therefore, for embarking the troops in Boston, no electric shock—no sudden clap of thunder—in a word, the last trumpet, could not have struck them with greater consternation. They were at their wits' end; and, conscious of their black ingratitude, chose to commit themselves, in the manner I have above described, to the mercy of the waves at a tempestuous season, rather than meet their offended countrymen. But with this declaration the choice was made, that if they thought the most abject submission would procure them peace, they never would have stirred.

I believe I may, with great truth, affirm, that no man, perhaps, since the first institution of armies, ever commanded one under more difficult circumstances than I have done; to enumerate the particulars would fill a volume. Many of my difficulties and distresses were of so peculiar a cast, that, in order to conceal them from the enemy, I was obliged to conceal them from my friends—indeed, from my own Army; thereby subjecting my conduct to interpretations unfavourable to my character, especially by those at a distance, who could not, in the smallest degree, be acquainted with the springs that governed it. I am happy, however, to find, and to hear from different quarters, that my reputation stands fair; that my conduct hitherto has given universal satisfaction. The addresses which I have received, and which, I suppose, will be published, from the General Court of this Colony, (the same as our General Assembly,) and from the Selectmen of Boston, upon the evacuation of the town, and my approaching departure from the Colony, exhibit a pleasing testimony of their approbation of my conduct, and of their personal regard, which I have found in various other instances, and which, in retirement, will afford me many comfortable reflections.

The share you have taken in the publick disputes is commendable and praiseworthy; it is a duty we owe our country—a claim posterity has upon us. It is not sufficient for a man to be a passive friend and well-wisher to the cause. This, and every other cause of such a nature, must inevitably perish under such an opposition. Every person should be active in some department or other, without paying too much attention to private interest. It is a great stake we are playing for, and sure we are of winning, if the cards are well managed. Inactivity in some, disaffection in others, and timidity in many, may hurt the cause—nothing else can; for unanimity will carry us through triumphantly, in spite of every exertion of Great Britain, if linked together in one indissoluble band. This they now know, and are practising every stratagem which human invention can devise to divide us, and unite their own people. Upon this principle it is, the Restraining Bill is passed, and Commissioners are coming over. The device, to be sure, is shallow—the covering thin. But they will hold out to their own people that the acts complained of are repealed; and Commissioners sent to each Colony to treat with us, neither of which will be attended to, &c. This, upon weak minds among us, will have its effect; they wish for reconciliation, or, in other words, they wish for peace, without attending to the conditions.

General Lee, I expect, is with you before this. He is the first officer in military knowledge and experience we have in the whole Army. He is zealously attached to the cause, honest and well meaning, but rather fickle and violent, I fear, in his temper. However, as he possesses an uncommon share of good sense and spirit, I congratulate my countrymen upon his appointment to that department. The appointment of Lewis, I think, was also judicious; for, notwithstanding the odium thrown upon his conduct at Kanhawa, I always looked upon him as a man of spirit, and a good officer; his experience is equal to any one we have. Colonel Mercer would have supplied the place well; but I question (as a Scotchman) whether it would have gone glibly down. Bullitt is no favourite of mine; and, therefore, I shall say nothing more of him, than that his own opinion of himself always kept pace with what others pleased to think of him—if anything, rather ran ahead of it.

As I am now nearly at the end of my eighth page, I think it time to conclude; especially as I set out with prefacing the little time I had for friendly correspondences. I shall only add, therefore, my affectionate regards to my sister and the children, and compliments to any inquiring friends; and that I am, with every sentiment of true affection, your loving brother and faithful friend,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To John A. Washington.

SOUTH-CAROLINA PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

At the Second Session of the Second Provincial Congress of South-Carolina, begun and holden at Charlestown, on Thursday, the 1st of February, 1776:

The Honourable Captain William Henry Drayton, as President, having taken the Chair, and the bad weather having prevented the attendance of a sufficient number of Members to proceed upon business:

Mr. President adjourned the Congress to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

In Congress, Friday, February 2, 1776.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Resolution of a Committee for a District between Broad and Enoree Rivers, appointing John Thomas, Jun., Esq., to be an additional Representative for that District, being presented, as a Return, and read:

Resolved, That, upon examining the said Resolution, it appears that the said John Thomas, Jun., has not been so elected as to entitle him to a seat in the present Congress.

Ordered, That the Committee for the lower District in the fork between Broad and Saludy Rivers, not having yet returned any Members to represent the same in the present Congress, do cause three Members to be elected, in the usual form and manner, and after due notice given, as enjoined by a Resolution of this Congress of the 29th of November last.

The Honourable Henry Middleton and John Rutledge, Esquires, two of the Delegates of this Colony to the Continental Congress, being lately returned from Philadelphia, and being in their places as Members of this Congress, presented a manuscript copy of the Journals of the present Session of the Continental Congress.

Resolved, That the Journals of the present Session of the Continental Congress, presented by the Honourable Mr. Middleton and Mr. Rutledge, be read in this Congress.

And the Journals of the Continental Congress were read accordingly, from the 10th day of May, 1775, to the 29th day of June following, inclusive:

Resolved, That this Congress do sit, to do business, from nine o'clock in the morning to three in the afternoon, every day.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow.

In Congress, Saturday, February 3, 1776.

The Congress met.

And yesterday's Journal was read.

Mr. Harrington having delivered in a special Return, of this date, addressed to the President of the Congress, which was read, and is as follows:

"Charlestown, February 2, 1776.

"SIR: Claudius Pegues, Esq., one of the six Deputies duly elected to represent the Parish of St. David in Congress, signified by letter, addressed to the Committee of the said parish, that he declined serving the said parish in Congress. He delivered the letter to me, to lay before the Committee, who were not to meet till the 19th of last month; and as the Congress were to sit on the 1st instant, I, as Churchwarden, and not recollecting the resolve of the last Congress relative to elections, advertised the 23d of January as a day of election for a Deputy to Congress, instead of Mr. Pegues, when it appeared that William Henry Mills had a majority of votes, of which I acquainted him by letter.

"I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

"HENRY WILLIAM HARRINGTON."

Resolved, That a Member of Congress cannot resign his seat during the continuance of the Congress in which he took his seat as a Member; and, therefore, as Claudius Pegues, Esq., could not decline his seat in the present Congress, the election of William Henry Mills, Esq., as a Member of Congress, in the room of Claudius Pegues, Esq., was null and void.

Ordered, That, for the more expeditious publication of the proceedings of Congress, Colonel Laurens, Mr. Bee, and Mr. Thomas Heyward, Jun., be a Committee to extract from the Journals, and send to the press from day to day, such parts thereof as are proper to be made publick, and to cause a sufficient number of copies to be printed for the use of the Members.

Colonel Laurens, President of the Council of Safety, reported that a packet of very interesting intelligence had this morning been received by that Board, by express from Philadelphia, which they were ready to lay before the Congress, if it should be their pleasure.

Ordered, That the contents of the said packet be immediately laid before the Congress, and read.

The following were accordingly read, viz:

Letter from the Delegates of this Colony in the Continental Congress, dated Philadelphia, January 2, 1776, enclosing the following copies of intercepted Letters, certified by Charles Thomson, Secretary to the said Congress:

From Lord William Campbell, Governour of this Colony, to General Gage, in Boston, dated Rebellion-Road, September 20, 1775:

From John Moultrie, Esq., Lieutenant-Governour of East-Florida, to Colonel James Grant, in Boston, dated St. Augustine, October 4, 1775:

From Frederick George Mulcaster, Esq., Engineer at St. Augustine, to Colonel Grant, containing a draft of this Harbour, and plan of this Town, with references and remarks, dated St. Augustine, October 3, 1775:

Two from John Stuart, Esq., the King's Superintendent of Indign Affairs in the Southern District of North-America, both addressed to General Gage, and dated St. Augustine, October 3, 1775—one of them enclosing copy of a talk from the Cherokee Indians to Alexander Cameron, Esq., one of Mr. Stuart's Deputies, delivered at Choté, August 8, 1775:

From Major Jonathan Furlong to General Gage, dated St. Augustine, October 5, 1775:

Extract from Patrick Tonym, Esq., Governour of East-Florida, to General Gage, dated St. Augustine, September 14, 1775:

Extract from Frederick George Mulcaster, Esq., to Colonel Grant, dated St. Augustine, September 29, 1775.

The originals having been taken by Captain Manly, of the Continental Armed Schooner Lee, within a few hours' sail of Boston, in a sloop that was, at the same time, conveying Moses Kirkland to General Gage, after having first carried him to Lord Dunmore, in Virginia.

Resolved, That it is expedient and necessary that the Lady and Daughter of John Stuart, Esq., be restrained from absenting themselves from his house in Charlestown.

Ordered, That proper Guards be immediately placed, and continued, about the house of the said John Stuart, to prevent such absenting; and that Colonel Moultrie do place Guards accordingly.

Ordered, That Captain William Cattell and Captain Benjamin Huger, two Members of this Congress, do wait on Mrs. Stuart previous to the placing Guards as aforesaid, and acquaint her of the Order.

Resolved, That no property whatever of the Honourable John Stuart, the King's Superintendent of Indian Affairs for the Southern District of North-America, or of his brother, Henry Stuart, lying or being in any Parish or District within this Colony, be removed from thence upon any pretence.

Ordered, That the Committees in such Parishes or Districts, respectively, where such property may be, do take the most effectual measures to prevent any removal thereof.

Ordered, That Colonel Powell and Colonel Richardson be desired to make inquiry what men from their respective Regiments of Militia, and from such other country Militia as are now in town, are willing to engage to remain here on pay for a given time.

Ordered, That the Secretary do now proceed in reading the Journals of the Continental Congress.

And the said Journals were read accordingly to the 19th of July, 1775, inclusive.

Adjourned to Monday, nine o'clock.

In Congress, Monday, February 5, 1776.

The Congress met.

And the Journal of Saturday was read.

Captain Benjamin Huger reported that he, with Captain Cattell, had, on Saturday, agreeable to order, waited on Mrs. Stuart and her daughter, (Mrs. Fenwicke), and acquainted them with the order of Congress respecting their persons; that Mr. Fenwicke requested it might be represented to the Congress that, as his wife was in an ill state of health, and required air and exercise, he might have permission to remove her into the country; and that he would be answerable for her appearance at any time, agreeable to the order of Congress or Council of Safety; and that Mrs. Stuart also requested of the Congress permission to accompany her daughter to John's Island.

Resolved, That Mr. Fenwicke have leave to take his wife into the country; he being answerable that she shall not depart the Colony, and for her appearance at any time, agreeable to the order of Congress or Council of Safety.

Ordered, That no person whatever be suffered to visit Mrs. Stuart without leave from Colonel Moultrie, or the commanding officer for the time being, signified by an introduction by an officer appointed by him for that purpose; and that, if Mrs. Stuart shall, at any time, have occasion to go abroad, with the permission of Colonel Moultrie, or the commanding officer for the time being, she shall do so, attended by an officer to be appointed for that purpose.

Ordered, That the Secretary do proceed in reading the Journals of the Continental Congress.

And the said Journals were read accordingly, to the 18th day of October last, inclusive.

Colonel Powell and Colonel Richardson reported that, having made some inquiry, they were of opinion that one hundred and fifty men from each of their Regiments may be induced to remain in Charlestown for the term of one month ensuing, provided proper care be taken of their horses.

Ordered, That a Return be made, as soon as may be, of all the country Militia now in Charlestown.

The following Letter was written to the Committees of the Parishes of St. Bartholomew and St. Helena, and of Charlestown, respectively:

Charlestown, February 5, 1776.

[By authority of Congress.]

To the Committee for the Parish of . . . . .

GENTLEMEN: I have the honour to transmit to you a resolution of Congress, respecting the estates and property of John Stuart and Henry Stuart; which, without doubt, you will cause to be duly observed. And that you may be at no loss in what manner to proceed, I do also signify to you that it is the sense of the Congress that, if you shall be of opinion you cannot prevent the removal of any part of the property to be restrained but by taking such part into your custody, you ought, on the part of the publick, to take such part into your custody, and to acquaint the Congress or Council of Safety thereof.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM HENRY DRAYTON, President.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow.

In Congress, Tuesday, February 6, 1776.

The Congress met.

And the Journal of yesterday was read.

Resolved, That the Council of Safety do forthwith cause the Marsh and Hog-Island Creek Channels, in Charlestown Harbour, to be so effectually stopped as to prevent the passage of Ships-of-War through either; and that they do also cause such land-marks as they shall think proper to be so removed or disguised as to render the passage over the bar as difficult as possible.

Resolved, That three thousand Bills, each of the denomination of fifty Pounds, be stamped and signed, in lieu of thirty thousand Bills, each of the denomination of five Pounds, heretofore resolved to have been stamped and signed.

Ordered, That the Commissioners formerly appointed do cause the said three thousand Bills, each of the denomination of fifty Pounds, to be stamped, signed, and lodged in the Colony Treasury, with all possible despatch.

The Letter from Major Williamson, of the 29th past, read in Congress on the 3d instant, the consideration whereof had been postponed, was now again read.

And the following Resolution and Orders were passed in consequence thereof:

Resolved, That Patrick Cunningham, Hugh Brown, and Thomas Edghill, now in custody of Major Williamson, be forthwith sent to Charlestown, to be committed to the common jail; that John York, Major Joseph Robinson, Captain Hendricks, Henry O'Neal, and Euan McLaurin, be also sent to Charlestown as soon as they can be taken and secured; and that Andrew Cunningham, John Evans, and William Evans, also in the custody of Major Williamson, may be discharged.

Ordered, That Colonel Thomas do take proper measures for apprehending and securing John York above-mentioned.

Ordered, That a Letter be written to Major Williamson, transmitting to him the Resolutions of Congress respecting the Prisoners at Fort-Charlotte; and ordering that he do suspend the disarming the Insurgents until the Congress shall make further order thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. Arthur Middleton, Major Pinckney, Colonel Richardson, Major Mayson, Mr. Salvador, Mr. Rapley, Colonel Gervais, Colonel Thomas, and Mr. Woods, be, and they are hereby appointed, a Committee to inquire into the state of the interior parts of the Colony lately in commotion; to consider what measures are proper to be pursued to preserve the peace, and secure the safety, and to prevent future commotions therein; and also to consider of the cases of the State Prisoners, and to report what measures might be pursued with respect to them.

Charlestown, February 6, 1776.

[By authority of Congress.]

To Major ANDREW WILLIAMSON:

SIR: I transmit to you the determinations of Congress this day relative to the Prisoners at Fort-Charlotte, which I make no doubt you will, without delay, endeavour to execute.

The Congress mean to take the most effectual measures to settle the state of the interior country, and to prevent, if it be possible, any future commotions there. For this purpose, a Committee is appointed to form a plan of proper measures; and, in the mean time, you are ordered to suspend the disarming the Insurgents until further order shall be made therein.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM HENRY DRAYTON, President.

Resolved, That the Members of the present Council of Safety be a Committee to take into consideration the number of Forces necessary to be raised, and kept in pay, for the service of this Colony; and the Resolution of the Continental Congress of the 4th day of November last relative thereto.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow.

In Congress, Thursday, February 8, 1776.

The Congress met.

And the Journal of yesterday was read.

Resolved, That Mr. President do signify the approbation of this Congress, and present their thanks to the Honourable Henry Middleton and John Rutledge, Esquires, now present in Congress, and to the other Delegates of this Colony at Philadelphia, for their important services in the American Congress.

Mr. President accordingly addressed himself to the Honourable Mr. Middleton and Mr. Rutledge, in nearly the words following:

"GENTLEMEN: When the hand of tyranny, armed in hostile manner, was extended from Great Britain to spoil America of whatever she held most valuable, it was, for the most important purposes, that the good people of this Colony delegated you to represent them in the Continental Congress at Philadelphia. It became your business to ascertain the rights of America—to point out her violated franchises, to make humble representation to the King for redress; and, he being deaf to the cries of his American subjects—to appeal to the King of Kings, for the recovery of the rights of an infant people, by the majesty of Heaven formed for future empire.

"In this most important business, you engaged, as became good citizens; and, step by step, you deliberately advanced through it, with a regret and sorrow, and with a resolution and conduct, that bear all the characters of ancient magnanimity. Your constituents, with a steady eye, beheld your progress. They saw the American claim of rights, the Association for the recovery of American franchises, and the humble Petition to the King for redress of grievances. They saw the American appeal to the King of Kings, and a second humble Petition to the British Monarch—alas! as unavailing as the first. They have also seen the establishment of an American naval force—a Treasury—a General Post-Office—and the laying on a Continental embargo. In short, they have seen permission granted to Colonies to erect forms of Government, independent of, and in opposition to, the regal authority.

"Your country saw all these proceedings, the work of a body of which you were, and are members; proceedings arising from dire necessity, and not from choice; proceedings that are the natural consequences of the present inauspicious reign; proceedings just in themselves; and which, notwithstanding the late declarations of the corrupt Houses of Parliament, the Proclamation at the Court of St. James's, on the 23d of August, and the subsequent Royal Speech in Parliament, are exactly as far distant from treason and rebellion as stands the glorious Revolution which deprived a tyrant of his Kingdoms, and elevated the House of Brunswick to royalty.

"Worthy Delegates! It is the judgment of your country that your conduct, of which I have just marked the grand lines, in the American Congress, is justifiable before God and man; and that, whatever may be the issue of this unlooked-for defensive civil war, in which, unfortunately, though gloriously, we are engaged—whether independence or slavery—all the blood, and all the guilt, must be imputed to British, not to American counsels. Hence your constituents, sensible of the propriety of your conduct, and of the benefits which, with the blessing of the Almighty, it is calculated to shed upon America, have constituted me their instrument, as well to signify to you their approbation, as to present to you their thanks; and it is in the discharge of these duties that I now have the honour to address you.

"In an important crisis like the present, to receive the publick thanks of a free People, is to receive the most honourable recompense for past services; and to deserve such thanks, is to be truly great. I know that it is with pain such men hear their commendations. Gentlemen, with the publick recompense, I mean to pay in to you my mite also; and lest I wound your delicacy, when I mean only to do justice to your merit, I forbear to particularize what is already well known. I therefore confine myself; and I do most respectfully, in the name of the Congress, present to you, and to each of you, the thanks of your country, for your important services in the American Congress, at Philadelphia."

Colonel John Lisle, elected one of the Representatives for the District between Broad and Saludy Rivers, not having taken his seat during the late Session, now attended, and declined serving.

A return was made of the following gentlemen, as duly elected Members of the present Congress, in the upper part of the District between Broad and Saludy Rivers, viz: Captain John Caldwell, James Williams, John Williams, Jonathan Downs, John Rogers, John Lindsey, and John Caldwell, of Enoree, Esqrs. And Messrs. John Williams and James Williams attending to take their seats,

Ordered, That they do take their seats in Congress accordingly.

Resolved, That the Reverend Mr. Tennent, Mr. Prince, Colonel Thomas, Colonel Wofford, Mr. John Williams, Mr. James Williams, and Mr. Jonas Beard, be, and they are hereby appointed a Committee, to consider and report a proper division of the extensive District between Broad and Saludy Rivers, into three, and the number of Members each division ought to have in Congress, to constitute a full representation.

Resolved, That the Committee appointed to inquire into the state of the interior parts of the Colony, be authorized and empowered to send for Persons, Papers, and Records; and that such Members of Congress who choose so to do, may attend and give their opinions.

Mr. Edwards, from the Committee to whom the Petition of the Congregation of Particular Baptists, in Charlestown, had been referred, delivered in a Report.

And the said Report being taken into immediate consideration,

Ordered, That James Brisbane be sent for to Charlestown, to do justice to the Petitioners.

Resolved, That the present Members of the Council of Safety, together with Mr. President of the Congress, Colonel Powell, and Major Pinckney, be, and they are hereby, appointed a Committee, to take into consideration the following Resolution of the Continental Congress, of the 4th of November last, viz:

“Resolved, That if the Convention of South-Carolina shall find it necessary to establish a form of Government in that Colony, it be recommended to said Convention to call a full and free representation of the People; and that the said Representatives, if they think it necessary, establish such form of Government as, in their judgment, will best produce the happiness of the People, and most effectually secure peace and good order in the Colony, during the continuance of the present dispute between Great Britain and the Colonies.”

Resolved, That this Congress will make provision for defraying the necessary expenses of Wagon-hire, incurred on the late expedition under Colonel Richardson.

Resolved, That Colonel Gadsden be added to the Committee appointed on the 7th instant, to take into consideration the number of Forces necessary to be raised and kept in pay for the service of this Colony; and the Resolution of the Continental Congress relative thereto, of the 4th of November last; and, also, to the Committee appointed yesterday, to consider the Resolve and Recommendation of the said Congress, respecting a form of Government.

The election to be held at Hammond's Old Store.

The place of election to be at the Meeting-House, near the house of Joseph Kelsey.

And that the said Districts, as now divided, be allowed and do respectively elect, four Members of Congress, as their Representatives.

Ordered, That the above Resolution be forthwith printed in Handbills, and made publick.

Colonel Gadsden presented to the Congress an elegant Standard, such as is to be used by the Commander-in-Chief of the American Navy; being a yellow field, with a lively representation of a Rattlesnake in the middle, in the attitude of going to strike, and these words underneath, “Don't tread on me!”

Mr. President laid before the Congress the following copy of the Letter which he had written, and sent express, by their order, to the Colony of Georgia:

South-Carolina, Charlestown, February 15, 1776.

[By authority of Congress.]

To the Honourable the Congress of GEORGIA:

GENTLEMEN: I have the honour to enclose to you the copy of a Resolution of Congress, extending the Resolution of the Continental Congress on the 1st of November last, prohibiting exportation from the United Colonies; and I have it in charge to recommend to you, in the strongest terms, that your Colony should form a similar resolution.

It is thought so absolutely necessary for the welfare of America that Georgia form a similar resolution, and we have this point so much at heart, that the Congress have delegated the Honourable Rawlins Lowndes, Colonel Parsons, and Thomas Savage, Esq., to repair forthwith to Savannah, to make all possible representation to induce your co-operating with us in so salutary a step.

These gentlemen mean to set out to-morrow or next day, and their speedy departure renders it unnecessary for me to add anything more to give weight to the recommendation in question.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM HENRY DRAYTON, President.

The Congress then proceeded to ballot for the Delegates to the Continental Congress.

And the ballots being reckoned, it appeared, and Mr. President declared, that Thomas Lynch, John Rutledge, Edward Rutledge, Arthur Middleton, and Thomas Heyward, Jun., Esquires, were, by majority of votes, duly elected.

Whereupon, the Congress

South-Carolina, Charlestown, February 18, 1776.
[By authority of Congress.]
To the Committee of Safety for SALISBURY, NORTH-CAROLINA:

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Dunn and Mr. Boote, who were sent prisoners from your Colony to this, have repeatedly made applications to our publick Assemblies for their discharge. In our last session of Congress, they presented a petition and remonstrance to the same effect, which the Congress referred to your judgment, and I enclosed the prayer of the petition in the following letter addressed to you. The letter was delivered to Mr. Boote, who undertook to forward it:

“January 10, 1776.
“GENTLEMEN: I have the honour to enclose to you an extract of the prayer of a remonstrance and petition which has been, by Mr. Dunn and Mr. Boote, presented to the Congress of this Colony in their last session. These gentlemen, in their remonstrance and petition, declared they did not mean and never would relinquish any right of action at law which they may have against those gentlemen who were the immediate cause of their being sent prisoners into this Colony. The Congress would not make any other order upon the remonstrance and petition than that it should be referred entirely to your judgment.”

Mr. Dunn is now a prisoner upon his parole; and Mr. Boote is a prisoner in the common jail in this town, he being, of the two, thought to be by much the most dangerous person.

The said Report having been fully debated and amended, the Congress came to the following Resolutions thereupon, viz:

You are also ordered, under the direction and with the concurrence aforesaid, to give every aid in your power for repelling insurrections and invasions there, and securing and imprisoning every person in Georgia whose going at large may be dangerous to the liberties of America, or the security of that Colony.

Ordered, That an engrossed copy of the above Orders be forthwith made out, signed by Mr. President, and delivered to Colonel Bull.

All which was done accordingly.

The Congress met.

And the Journal of yesterday was read.

Mr. President laid before the Congress the following copy of the Letter, written by their order, to Georgia :

Charlestown, South-Carolina, March 5, 1776.

[By authority of Congress.]

To the Honourable the Council of Safety for GEORGIA :

GENTLEMEN: Your letters of the 1st and 2d instant, and your resolutions, order, and proclamation of those dates, were laid before the Congress, transfusing a general and perfect joy. And the Congress, sensible of the vast importance which your exemplary conduct must be of to the American cause, unanimously voted their thanks; and I have the honour thus to transmit them to you, for your having decisively taken the noble, politick, and vigorous resolution, that the vessels in the ports of Savannah, ready to sail contrary to the interest of America, shall be forthwith unrigged and unruddered; and that, rather than the enemy shall possess those vessels and your Capital, all shall perish in a noble conflagration, lighted by yourselves—an instance of heroick principle not exceeded by any, and equalled but by few, in history.

Your conduct, in citing such of the inhabitants of Savannah as had abandoned their possessions in that town to return to its defence, under penalty of being deemed to have deserted such property, and of being excluded from any support towards obtaining an indemnification for any loss they may sustain by a general conflagration, received the highest applause, as being worthy of imitation; the policy and justice of the measure are equally conspicuous.

In short, the Congress feel the greatest satisfaction from their having anticipated your call for assistance; it is sufficient that we know our friends stand in need of our aid. We hope that our forces under Colonel Bull will fully accommodate your necessities; and you may rest assured that we shall continue to afford to the friends of America in Georgia, every support in our power.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM HENRY DRAYTON, President.

Mr. Peronneau and Mr. Dart, in conformity to the Order of yesterday, attended, and delivered in the following :

HENRY PERONNEAU,
BENJAMIN DART,
Joint Publick Treasurers."

The Report from the Committee on Ways and Means, for payment of the services already voted, was taken into consideration.

*And the said Report having been debated and amended, the Congress came to the following Resolutions thereupon, viz :

Whereas it appears that, on the 28th day of February, after discharging the services now due, there remains in the Colony Treasury no more of the one million one hundred and twenty thousand Pounds, issued by authority of Congress, than three hundred thousand Pounds : And whereas the charge of the Naval and Military establishments, calculated from the 1st instant to the 1st of January next, will amount to one million one hundred and nineteen thousand two hundred and seventy-six Pounds ; so that, should this Colony obtain the allowance for three Continental Battalions, with rations at three Shillings per man, per day, amounting to three hundred and sixty-five thousand three hundred Pounds, with the sum remaining in the Treasury, there will be a deficiency of four hundred and fifty-three thousand nine hundred and seventy-six Pounds ; and there may be wanted, for contingencies, two hundred and ninety-six thousand and twenty-four Pounds more :

Therefore, Resolved, That a sum not exceeding seven hundred and fifty thousand Pounds, currency, in Bills or Certificates, in the quantities, and of the denominations following, be stamped or printed, signed, and lodged in the Treasury, viz :

- 2,000 bills of one hundred Pounds each ;
- 3,700 bills of fifty Pounds each ;
- 5,200 bills of twenty-five Pounds each ;
- 9,000 bills of fifteen Pounds each ;
- 5,000 bills of three Pounds each ;
- 10,000 bills of two Pounds five Shillings each ;
- 5,500 bills of two Pounds each ;
- 10,000 bills of one Pound fifteen Shillings each ;
- 6,000 bills of one Pound ten Shillings each ;
- 10,000 bills of seventeen Shillings and six Pence each ;
- 10,000 bills of twelve Shillings and six Pence each ;
- 12,000 bills of six Shillings and three Pence each ;
- 10,000 bills of five Shillings each ;
- 10,000 bills of three Shillings and nine Pence each ;
- 10,000 bills of two Shillings and six Pence each ;
- 10,000 bills of one Shilling and three Pence each.

Resolved, That the publick faith of this Colony be, and it is hereby, solemnly pledged to provide funds for calling in and sinking the Bills to be issued under the foregoing Resolutions.

And whereas, notwithstanding the great issue of Paper Currency, it appears that cash is scarce in circulation : but to avoid a redundancy of such currency,

Resolved, That a power be, and is hereby, vested in the Council of Safety to borrow, on interest, the whole or any part of the said sum of seven hundred and fifty thousand Pounds, now resolved to be issued, if they shall find it expedient and practicable.

The Report of the Committee to whom the Petition of William Hill was referred, being taken into consideration, debated on, and amended,

Resolved, That the sum of one thousand Pounds, currency, be paid by the Commissioners of the Treasury to William Hill, upon his producing and depositing with them proper conveyances and titles of his land, and the improvements thereon, situated on Allison's Creek, a branch of Catawba River, in St. Mark's Parish, to be made to Colonel Thomas Neel, Captain Samuel Watson, and Mr. John Howe, in trust for the publick, for repayment of the said sum of one thousand Pounds, within the term of two years.

Resolved, That no Moneys be issued by Henry Peronneau or Benjamin Dart, Esquires, Joint Publick Treasurers, out of the Publick Treasury, until the further order of this Congress, or authority derived from them.

The following Prohibition was accordingly issued by Mr. President, and served upon the said Treasurers :

Charlestown, South-Carolina, March 6, 1776.

[By authority of Congress.]

To HENRY PERONNEAU and BENJAMIN DART, Esquires,
Joint Publick Treasurers :

GENTLEMEN: You are hereby prohibited from issuing, or causing to be issued, any publick money in your charge, without order first had and obtained from the Congress, or proper authority derived from them.

The Congress having resumed the consideration of the Report to inquire into the state of the interior parts of the Colony, lately in commotion, and the most likely measures to preserve peace, and to prevent future commotions therein; and having gone through the said Report,

Resolved, That a declaration of pardon and amnesty be published to the late Insurgents, with certain exceptions.

That all persons who shall hereafter bear arms against, or shall be active in opposing, the measures of the Continental or Colony Congress, and upon due conviction thereof, before a majority of the Committee of the District or Parish where such persons reside, shall be disarmed, and, at the discretion of the said Committee, taken into custody; and, if necessary thereto, the said Committee shall call in the aid of the military as soon as possible, transmitting to the Congress or Council of Safety an account of such proceedings.

That all reasonable indulgence ought to be given to the aforesaid late Insurgents, and, as far as is consistent with the publick safety, they be allowed to trade as usual, except for Arms and Ammunition.

That if any person who has been disarmed, shall convince the Committee aforesaid that he sincerely desires to join in support of the American cause, his arms shall be restored to him, and, in every respect, he shall be put on the footing of an Associator, upon his taking the following oath:

"I, A B, do, upon the Holy Evangelists, (or, according to the form of my profession,) freely, voluntarily, and without the least compulsion, evasion, or mental reservation, solemnly swear and declare, that I will, at all times, to the best of my power, aid and support the authority of Congress, and every authority derived from them. And also, that I will pay obedience to the Continental and Provincial Councils, according to the true meaning and spirit of the Association entered into by the Congress of this Colony, on the 4th of June last. So help me God."

That if any person, having been disarmed, shall, without leave of the Committee aforesaid, be found in possession of Arms or Ammunition, or be convicted of having purchased either of those articles, he shall again be disarmed, and committed to close confinement by the said Committee; they transmitting, as soon as possible, to the Congress or Council of Safety, an account of such proceeding.

That all Commissions of officers who have been in arms against the authority of Congress, or who have been, or shall be, convicted of having been active in opposing the authority of Congress, or having refused to act in support of that authority, be, and shall be null and void.

That the respective Committees, and the supporters of the American cause, ought to discourage the use of any opprobrious language reflecting upon the late misbehaviour of the aforesaid Insurgents, who, behaving in a peaceable manner, ought to be treated with friendship and humanity, tenderness and moderation, as the Congress wishes to reclaim rather than to punish.

Resolved, That the consideration of the Order of the Day be postponed.

Read a Letter received last night from the Council of Safety of Georgia, dated 16th instant,* with the sundry Papers therein referred to, viz :

* SAVANNAH, March 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN : Since ours of the 4th instant to you, we have neither heard from you, nor have we wrote to you, except by Lieutenant-Colonel Wells, upon a particular business, which, by your assistance, we hope he will soon have effected.

Colonel Bull, with the detachment from your Province, arrived here very seasonably on Sunday last, our own Militia having been so greatly fatigued with marching, keeping out-guards, ambuscades, and watching, that we were under the necessity of suffering a great part of them to go home.

On the evening of the 3d instant, the chief of the vessels which escaped the fire, got up some small distance from the town, and lay under cover of the armed schooner and sloop; and, towards the morning, they sent express to Colonel McIntosh, with the original of the enclosed copy marked No. 1, by which we were entrapped into a cessation, at the time when we should have done ourselves justice by destroying or taking all the vessels, both warlike and mercantile, which it was in our power easily to do with fire-ships, as they lay in the South River for near two days, and most of them often aground. This mistake was occasioned by our anxiety for the safety and recovery of our captive friends, though, perhaps, a very mistaken policy, for coercive measures might have been more successful.

We enclose to you copies of all the letters which passed upon that occasion, which will convey to you a full idea of the subject. By them you will find that they sued for peace. During this truce, when any of our officers or men went near the shore where any of the vessels lay, (in all which the soldiery were distributed,) they were meanly obsequious.

On the 7th instant, while they were yet within our power in the Back River, we found that they had affected to construe one of Colonel McIntosh's proposals into a consent that the merchant shipping should be carried to Cockspur; and, therefore, by way of explanation, and to make a further demand of our prisoners, we sent the despatch marked No. 2, which was delivered as directed, about six o'clock at night. Immediately after which, the whole of the marines, soldiers, and mariners, were set to work, and, after labouring very hard, staving and throwing overboard most of the rice, got out of the Back River, safe into Five-Fathom Hole, about two o'clock in the morning, and in the course of two or three days down to Cockspur.

A few days ago, we sent down a boat, with some necessities to our confined friends; and by the return, among a number of others, came the originals of the copies we now enclose to you. We are informed that there are many other letters in the packet, both for Carolina and Georgia, which may be had by sending the hard money; and as we intend sending down further supplies to-day, we shall send hard money for all the letters. Those which shall appear to belong or appertain to your Province, we will despatch to you.

By the letters from the contracting victuallers, we learn that our enemies have essayed to make this river a victualling and watering place for the whole forces employed against America; but, with respect to the former, we are determined at all hazards to disappoint them. All we have to guard against is, the being surprised. A number of vessels and troops may arrive below, and be tempted to attack the town at a time when it may be most defenceless. To prevent this, it will be necessary to keep a standing force; in doing which, we are in need of your assistance. If you could spare us about one hundred and fifty or two hundred men, until our officers shall get the battalion recruited, it would enable us, with drafts from our own people, to keep a force sufficient, with our natural advantages, to repel a formidable enemy.

We are much afraid that the enemy will use their exertions to ravage your plantations bordering on our river. They have done it already, as they were making their escape through the Back River, by taking a number of negroes belonging to Mr. Middleton, Mrs. Cuthbert, and others, and by taking the live stock, &c., from the plantations appertaining to the friends of America.

We have ordered a large boat to be fitted out for the purpose of guarding the river. We have some reasons to believe that the transports, with some of the vessels-of-war, are about sailing for Boston; and we are almost certain that the force now upon our coast will not attempt aught against Charlestown; however, the officers below say that Sir Peter Parker sailed on the 5th of December, for America with four forty-four-gun ships, and five thousand soldiers, and that their destination, in particular, was against your Province.

Several of the King's officers and non-associates have taken sanctuary on board the King's ships; and we have six others, besides the two Captains, confined as hostages for the 'good treatment and enlargement of Messrs. Demeré, Roberts, and Rice. If necessary, we shall trouble some of our sister Colonies with them.

No. 1. Two Letters from Messrs. Demeré and Roberts to Colonel McIntosh, dated on board the Charming Nancy, 3d and 4th March; Colonel McIntosh's Answer. Letter from Messrs. Demeré and Roberts, 4th March :

No. 2. Letter from Colonel McIntosh to Messrs. Demeré and Roberts. Letter from Captain Barclay and Major Grant, dated on board the Hinchinbrook, 6th March. Colonel McIntosh's Letter to them, 5th March. Letter from Mr. Demeré to Colonel McIntosh, dated Hinchinbrook, 6th March :

No. 3. Letter from the Council of Safety in Georgia to Captain Barclay and Major Grant, dated Savannah, 7th March. Letter from Captain Barclay and Major Grant to Anthony Stokes, Esq., dated on board the Scarborough, 14th March :

No. 4. Letter from the Council of Safety for Georgia to Captain Barclay and Major Grant, dated Savannah, 16th March. Copy of an intercepted Letter from James Taylor, dated on board the Christie, at Cockspur, 14th March, to Mr. George Houstoun. Copies of other intercepted Letters, Captain Grant, of the armed schooner St. John, has, within a few days past, arrived at Cockspur, and gives an account that the American fleet was seen off near Providence, and that thereupon he took the powder (amounting to two hundred and seventy barrels) on board, and went out from the Island one way as the fleet came in on the other.

Six or seven large ships have been seen off St. Catherine's, from whence they got a pilot; but whether it is Sir Peter Parker or our friends, we are at a loss to conjecture. The King's ships below have taken the Georgia Packet, Captain George Bunner, with four hundred barrels of flour, and other articles of provisions.

By order of the Council of Safety :

WILLIAM EWEN, President.

To the Honourable the Congress or Council of Safety for South-Carolina.

ON BOARD THE CHARMING NANCY, March 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN : In obedience to your command, we both came on this vessel to demand Mr. Rice. We were ordered on board, and examined by Captain Barkley and Major Grant, who have both declared it was never their intention to commit any act of hostility against this Province, nor do they even now mean any, unless drawn on by you. The above gentlemen have desired me to declare to you, that if any two of you will come on board, you will have their faith and honour to return unmolested; and you may be satisfied with what is above set forth.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

RAYMOND DEMERÉ,
DANIEL ROBERTS.

[No. 1.] ON BOARD THE CHARMING NANCY, March 4, 1776.

GENTLEMEN : Immediately on our coming on board here, we wrote you a letter by return of the boat; but as we did not hear from you, and the unfortunate scene that afterwards ensued, we apprehend the letter has not reached you. We therefore beg leave to mention the purport of it.

On our coming alongside, we were ordered on board, and examined by Captain Barkley and Major Grant, with regard to our errand. After informing them of this particular, we were confined to the cabin. The above gentlemen have both declared, on their mutual faith and honour, it was never their order or intention to commit any act of hostility against this Province, nor do they even now mean any, unless drawn on by any fresh provocation from you. They have both desired us to assure you, in the most solemn manner, that if any two gentlemen, such as the inhabitants most confide in, will come on board, they may inform themselves of the truth of what has been mentioned; and they pledge themselves, as above, to grant them permission to return when and where they please, unmolested. This, gentlemen, is the conversation that has passed, and beg leave to submit it to your consideration.

We further assure you, that we write without any constraint, or being any way dictated to; and the genteel treatment we have both received, encourage us to place the greatest confidence in their assertions. We shall just add, that your deliberations on this matter may be productive of the most important consequences. Mr. Rice is with us, and treated very well.

We are, gentlemen, with respect and esteem, yours, &c.

RAYMOND DEMERÉ,
DANIEL ROBERTS.

To the Commanding Officer at Savannah.

Colonel McIntosh's Answer.

DEAR GENTLEMEN : I received your letters of yesterday and to-day, and am authorized to tell you that, as you have been so shamefully treated, contrary to the uniform practice of all civilized people, we will not risk the liberty of any more of our fellow-citizens, which they are unanimously determined, at all events, to sell with their lives. The manoeuvres of these gentlemen, their hostile appearance, with so many armed vessels and troops, stealing in the night on board the ships of those who have scandalously deserted a people by whom they got their bread, in order to attack us, and their conduct with respect to you, evidently show their design against an innocent, peaceable people. We all earnestly wish you among us again; but are sure you would not desire your freedom on any conditions dishonourable to your country. If they will withdraw their vessels and troops from annoying us, to Cockspur again, we authorize you to receive any proposition they may make.

I am, &c.

To Messrs. Raymond, Demeré, and Roberts.

viz: From John Simpson, in London, dated 23d December, 1775, to Mr. George Houstoun; from Robert Grant & Co., in London, to the same, of same date, with an extract of a Contract with the Commissioners of the Victualling-Office;

IN SAVANNAH RIVER, March 4, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We just this moment received yours, and are authorized to inform you that, from the circumstance of our letter of yesterday not being answered, and your firing to-day, it was believed your intention was to treat his Majesty's sea and land forces in a hostile manner, notwithstanding the declaration made in our letter; but as the proposal made in your letter of this day intimates your disposition to act inoffensively towards his Majesty's sea and land forces, if the vessels and troops are carried to Cockspur without annoying you, we are authorized to assure you that, consistently with the declarations made, the troops and vessels will be conducted to Cockspur immediately, without any act of hostility on their part, if not attacked; and an express-boat is to be sent to stop the firing below, not doubting but similar steps will be taken by you. We therefore flatter ourselves that you will pay due attention to the above, as we have pledged our words, in consequence of the above declaration, that every act of hostility will be refrained from by you.

We are, gentlemen, with regard and esteem, your most humble servants,

RAYMOND DEMERÉ,
DANIEL ROBERTS.

To Colonel McIntosh.

N. B. Captain Barkley has this moment despatched an express to the Cherokee, to stop firing. We beg the bearer may be permitted to return.

[No. 2.] Colonel McIntosh's Answer.

DEAR GENTLEMEN: In consequence of your letter of this evening, I have given orders that not a single shot shall be fired at the ships and troops, unless they show evident signs of hostility against the Province, as we act altogether upon the defensive. But we shall not relax in our vigilance while they are hovering around us.

I am, &c.,

LACHLAN MCINTOSH.

To Messrs. Demeré and Roberts.

ON BOARD THE HINCHINBROOK, March 6, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 5th March came to hand this morning, about half an hour ago; and we must observe, that the gentlemen whose release you desire were aboard ship at the time that you signified to Mr. Demeré that, if the vessels and troops were withdrawn to Cockspur, without annoying the people of the Province, these gentlemen were authorized to receive any propositions that might be made. And, in a subsequent letter, you intimated that there should be a cessation of hostilities, and not a single shot fired unless we annoyed you. On this ground we set out, and are resolved religiously to observe the conditions mentioned. We will proceed to Cockspur without offence to the Province, if we are not fired on, and are to expect the same punctual performance of your engagements. But after our arrival at Cockspur, (as we are determined to act up to our declarations on coming here,) if you, any gentleman, or gentlemen, properly authorized, will come down and suggest a plan that can accommodate all parties, by a release of the ships now at Savannah, and their masters, we give you our word of honour that you, or them, shall be perfectly safe, and return when they please, as this method seems most likely to bring matters to the issue that you wish for. In the mean time, if hostilities commence, they must be imputed to the people of Georgia, not to us, as we are determined to act up to the proposal made to us.

As Mr. Demeré is in a ship that has fallen down the Back-River, his letter shall be conveyed to him, and his answer sent on shore. We are, sir, your most obedient, humble servants,

ANDREW BARKLEY,
JAMES GRANT.

To Lachlan McIntosh, Esq.

SAVANNAH, March 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When I authorized Messrs. Demeré and Roberts, by my letter of yesterday, to inform you that orders were given for a cessation of arms on our side, we certainly expected you would consider it as implied that those gentlemen, together with Mr. Rice, should be immediately released; for surely it must appear to every man that the detention of our fellow-citizens is, to all intents and purposes, a continuation of hostilities on your side. I am now directed to acquaint you that the people have waited with the utmost anxiety for the arrival of those gentlemen all this day; and I am induced to think, from your professions of a friendly disposition, that you will see how absolutely necessary it is to make this step the groundwork of a further negotiation. I shall wait with impatience for your answer, and hope our friends will be the messengers themselves, by ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

I am, &c.,

LACHLAN MCINTOSH.

To Captain Barkley and Major Grant.

ON BOARD THE HINCHINBROOK, March 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I was this morning sent for by Captain Barkley and Major Grant, who presented me with your letter of yesterday to them: in answer to which, I must observe, that, when you authorized Mr. Roberts and myself to declare to those gentlemen that a cessation of hostilities should cease until the vessels got down to Cockspur, I did not imagine it implied that we should have liberty to return. I therefore particularly request you will do nothing till we reach Cockspur. By that time you can consider what is best to be done; and everything in our power will be exerted to bring matters to some favourable issue. With regard to Captains Inglis and Wardell being detained, I most earnestly wish they may be included with the other masters of vessels, to have the liberty of sailing with their ships. I imagine Captain Barkley and Major Grant will expect those gentlemen are entitled to the same indulgence as the others; and as I am now very confident no hostilities are meant against the Province, the detention of those vessels may only aggravate matters, and their enlargement may be productive of something very agreeable in the event. I have just to conclude, with my usual esteem and regard, dear sir, your humble servant,

RAYMOND DEMERÉ.

To Colonel McIntosh.

P. S. I have just had intimation of some intrenchment being thrown up at or near Mr. Bryan's Plantation. If so, I sincerely wish it may be stopped, as it can answer no good purpose. I would rather suffer every inconvenience from my confinement than any further hostilities should be commenced; for I would, in that case, think myself partly the cause.

[No. 3.] SAVANNAH, IN THE COUNCIL OF SAFETY, March 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have been privy to several letters which have passed to and from Colonel McIntosh, Messrs. Demeré and Roberts, and yourselves; and we find by yours that you consider that we consented the merchant shipping should go down to Cockspur, with the troops; whereas the most cursory review of the letter which appertains to that matter, will at once evidently show you, that the troops and armed vessels only were meant; and we now declare to you, that none others were intended. Indeed, a moment's reflection will further demonstrate this; for you and all Great Britain know, that we have made, and are yet pursuing, a commercial opposition to the acts so much complained of, and which have roused this large Continent into arms.

We abhor the idea of infidelity, and have, therefore, forbore to avail ourselves of the advantages which your situation, for several days past, put in our power, until we should have an opportunity of having the misapprehension explained. We will now forbear any virulent expressions, but we deem the detention of Messrs. Demeré and Roberts a breach of that good faith which the parent country has been so much famed for keeping inviolate.

We knew the troops were on board the merchant shipping some hours before they went, and, relying on the common faith of the civilized part of the world, expected that you would have permitted them to return, and have made what might pass between you and them the groundwork of an explanation; and by that means have prevented any hostilities.

In one of Colonel McIntosh's letters to Messrs. Demeré and Roberts, he authorized them, in case you should withdraw to Cockspur, as before we have explained, then to receive any propositions you might make; but this never can be construed into an assent on our part to your detaining them.

The merchant shipping, also, we consider as appertaining to this Province, and, of course, under our cognizance; and the attempt to take them away by force justified the opposition. The capture, also, of the vessel with goods, we conceive, cannot be justified upon any principle whatever.

From these premises, gentlemen, you will readily conclude that we expect two things: the one is, the return of our citizens, and the other the withdrawing your troops from on board the merchant shipping, and carrying them and the armed vessels down only to Cockspur.

That you may not be deceived, we now make this declaration: We expect a return of our citizens to the place from whence they were taken, by twelve o'clock to-morrow, with your assurance, upon your honour, to withdraw without any attempt to land in either Province, as soon as wind and tide shall permit; and in case you shall refuse or neglect compliance, we shall consider either as a breach of the cessation you desired. And we declare further, that your treatment of our three citizens, now in your power, will be our criterion of conduct towards all those men who now are, or may be in our power.

The laws of retaliation have suggested to us the propriety and expediency of arresting and confining the King's officers; several of whom we have accordingly taken and confined; but these men, upon the return of our friends, and not before, shall be enlarged.

By order of the Council of Safety:

WILLIAM EWEN, President.

SCARBOROUGH, COCKSPUR, March 14, 1776.

SIR: We are surprised and concerned that you and the other gentlemen with you, should be confined by the rulers of the people, now at Savannah, as you had a right to protection from the parole that had been given. It is equally unaccountable that the Captains Inglis and Wardell should be carried into confinement, and prevented from sailing with their ships and cargoes, contrary to the faith that had been plighted to them by the very powers which the people at present acknowledge. But as proposals have been made to us for the release of Messrs. Demeré, Roberts, and Rice, and that we wish to remove your distresses and those of your fellow-sufferers, we authorize you to signify to such of the people as take direction in these matters, that if you, Captain Powell, Colonel Tattnall, Colonel Multryne, the two McGillivrays, Captain Inglis, Captain Wardell, and all others that may be in confinement on this occasion, are set at liberty, and that Lachlan McIntosh, Samuel Elbert, and Joseph Habersham, Esquires, or any others that you may conjoin with them, engage themselves upon honour, by a writing under their hands, for the future security of your persons, families, and properties, while you act a neutral part, and likewise the security of the persons, family, and property of the Governour, gentlemen of the Council, and other servants of the Crown, who may not be in confinement, and that you, any, or all of you, shall be at liberty to quit the Province when you or they think proper, and also that the Captains Inglis and Wardell, with other masters of vessels, who may incline to go to sea, shall immediately be permitted so to do with their ships and cargoes; then, and in that case, you are authorized to assure the people or their leaders, that we will release the Messrs. Demeré, Roberts, and Rice.

The conditions that only require men to be just to their own engage-

In Congress, Saturday, March 23, 1776.

The Congress met.

And the Journal of yesterday was read.

Thomas Waring, duly elected and returned a Member of Congress for the Parish of St. George, Dorchester, in the room of William Sanders, Esq., deceased, attending, and declaring that he was willing to serve, Ordered, That Mr. Waring do take his seat accordingly.

Resolved, That the Commissioners appointed yesterday ments may easily be complied with. An immediate answer is required; and we have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servants,

ANDREW BARKLEY.
JAMES GRANT.

To Anthony Stokes, Esq.

[No. 4.] SAVANNAH, IN THE COUNCIL OF SAFETY, March 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As we have already pledged our faith to release all the King's officers, and others now in our custody, upon the enlargement of our captive friends, and we, holding it inviolate, are yet willing to perform our engagement. Should this exchange take place, such of them as choose to leave the Province may; and such as do not, may remain upon their parole of honour to refrain from all connection with the King's vessels and soldiery. And we do now declare that we will neither make, or receive, any other terms.

By order of the Council of Safety:

WILLIAM EWEN, President.

To Captain Barkley and Major Grant.

The following are Copies of Intercepted Letters.

COCKSFUR, ON BOARD THE CHRISTIE, March 14, 1776.

SIR: I have the opportunity of acquainting you of my misfortune of being here; which is adding loss to loss. I also have to acquaint you of the disagreeable circumstance of Captain Andrew Lee having, by the Commodore's orders, hove overboard some of your rice, and also have some of it on board now, which he intends to take away, and put on board some of the transports for Boston. But if in my power, I shall stop it for two days, till I hear from you, which I beg may be as soon as possible. I never intended being here, if it had been in my power to have done otherwise; which would have been more pleasure to your most humble servant,

JAMES TAYLOR.

To George Houstoun, Merchant in Savannah.

LONDON, December 23, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I have been applied to by Messrs. Robert Grant & Co., Contractors to the Navy, for a proper person in your Province to supply the King's ships with what provisions they may want when any of them come your way. I therefore mentioned you, hoping it may be of some advantage to you. But should the executing of it be disagreeable, or attended with any risk, you are at liberty to decline it; only, I should, in that case, wish you to recommend some person who would undertake it. Messrs. Robert Grant & Co. will write you themselves upon the subject.

I am, with esteem, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SIMPSON.

To George Houstoun.

LONDON, December 23, 1775.

SIR: By the recommendation of Mr. John Simpson, (from whom we enclose you a letter,) we have taken the liberty to send you a copy of a contract with the Victualling-Board for supplying his Majesty's ships on your station with provisions, in the name of Mr. Robert Grant, though on our joint account. We beg you will make the necessary supplies when demanded, and draw on us for your reimbursement; at the same time transmit us the vouchers.

The usual commission we give on such transactions is five per cent., which we hope will be agreeable to you. We shall be much obliged to you if you will, from time to time, advise us of the prices current with you, as we have several contracts to the northward, which, probably, might be supplied with some articles from your place; and if any opportunity for Boston, advise Charles Lyell, Esq., or Alexander Brymer, to the same purpose. You will please observe, that we have nothing to do with the Pursers' necessary bills, only to give them money for them at the current exchange, if they apply for it, without putting us to any loss or expense whatever. You have form of a voucher enclosed.

We are, sir, yours, &c.,

ROBERT GRANT & CO.

To George Houstoun.

VICTUALLING-OFFICE, September 20, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Having contracted with Mr. Robert Grant, of London, merchant, for furnishing sea provisions to such of his Majesty's ships and vessels as shall touch at Georgia, and be in want thereof, we desire you will please to receive of him, or his agent, all such quantities of sea provisions as you may be in want of at the said place; and underneath is a copy of the contract made with the said gentlemen, for your information.

We are, gentlemen, your most humble servants,

JAMES WALLACE,
ROBERT PETT,
THOMAS COLBY,
JONAS HANWAY.

To the Commanders of his Majesty's Ships and Vessels at Georgia.

Extracts from Mr. ROBERT GRANT's Contract.

And it is further agreed, that I am to furnish rice in lieu of half the quantity of oatmeal that shall be demanded, after the rate of half a for laying such obstructions to the navigation of the channels over Charlestown Bar, and in the harbour, as they shall judge necessary, be, and they are hereby, authorized and required, to prepare proper Fire-Vessels, for the most effectual annoyance of any enemy that shall attempt to enter the said harbour.

Ordered, That Captain Lempriere be added to the said Commissioners.

Resolved, That all the Letters which have been put on board the Ship Port-Henderson, be forthwith brought from pound of rice in lieu of a pint of oatmeal; and the quantity of rice that shall appear by the vouchers to be supplied to his Majesty's ships shall be paid for in the following manner, viz: Thirty-two pounds of rice shall be allowed to be equal, and shall be paid for at the same price as one bushel of oatmeal.

And I do also oblige myself to deliver weekly to the Admiral, or Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's ships at Georgia, or when the commanding officer for the time being shall require it, during the continuance of this contract, an abstract of all the provisions remaining in my stores, and likewise an abstract of the several species and quantity of provisions issued to each of his Majesty's ships every week at Georgia.

LONDON, December 5, 1775.

DEAR SIR: The act now before the House for prohibiting all trade and intercourse with the associated Provinces, will effectually prevent our getting home any remittances from Georgia. All American vessels are to be seized after January. All vessels found going to, or in, any of the ports, are to be seized after the 1st of March; and all property whatever going to, returning from, or remaining in any of those ports after the 1st June. This being the case, you will readily see that it will be impracticable to charter vessels from hence to proceed to Georgia, load, and get away before March. The only chance left of our shipping anything will be from East-Florida; if, therefore, (and for this purpose nothing must be left unessayed,) you can, by any means, collect and lodge five hundred barrels of rice on the Florida side of St. Mary's, we shall not only be able to throw a handsome sum into the hands of our correspondents, to whom we owe it, and much more, but shall make a handsome profit, and it is more than probable something extraordinary. As Tonyn is no friend of ours, it is not prudent that you be seen in the conduct of this matter. Make Mr. Egan acquainted with the plan, and let the whole be conducted in his name in that country; and as, from your resolutions, you are to have no intercourse with that Province, Egan's name, and none other there, must appear with you.

You can easily collect the rice, I am sure; and if you conduct the business properly, it may be accomplished without the knowledge of an individual in your Province to whom you do not communicate it. In fact, as the scheme is feasible, practicable, and may be very profitable, I am come to the determination of chartering a small vessel, not to exceed four hundred and fifty or five hundred barrels of rice, and go out in her to St. Mary's, East-Florida, to sail from hence in thirty days from the date hereof, and to load rice. But, for fear of the worst, it shall be in option to send her (in case only you find the former plan impracticable) to the West-Indies with lumber, so that, from this sketch of the matter, regulate and govern yourselves accordingly. A load of lumber you may surely get. To prevent suspicion, I shall charter the vessel in Egan's name, and only appear in the business as his agent.

I am extremely anxious to get out; and as this is the only chance I shall have, nothing will prevent my putting it in execution; and as the risk we run of a failure is by no means equal to the advantages we may reap in case we succeed, you may depend upon what I now write.

The act recites, that so soon as any of the Provinces, or any part of a Province, returns to its allegiance, its trade shall be restored. You will therefore be best able to judge of the temper and disposition of our Province, and by which you will take care to regulate your conduct. As to purchasing of rice, (for, as you know, it is a perishable article,) we ought not to meddle with more than we have a prospect of getting off our hands. If, on the other hand, you find an opening for anything, buy largely—we owe money, and we must, we ought to pay it. I shall at this time say no more, than that you may once again, before you see me, hear from me by the Packet to sail the 16th for Virginia, North and South-Carolina.

I am, &c.,

ROGER KELSALL.

LONDON, December 22, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Above is a copy of what I wrote you via Augustine, since which I can only inform you that the before-mentioned law received the Royal assent yesterday, and I have very good reason to suppose will be transmitted to every Governour and Commander on the Continent. I would, notwithstanding, send you the act, but cannot procure it. I refer you to Captain McKay, who will see it as soon as any person in your Province, and, I dare say, will communicate its contents most willingly. I confirm what I before wrote to you, and you may expect to see me in the vessel, which I have already wrote you I would charter. I shall put off her sailing as long as possible, yet think and believe it will be in all the month of January; therefore you will purchase accordingly. I hope you will exert yourself in this business, in which case I have no doubt of success, and you may have and entertain the most sanguine hopes of the greatest advantages from the result. Rice will command, in all probability, twenty shillings per hundred, staves twenty pounds per thousand, and other things in proportion. Upon the whole, exert yourselves, risk something, and leave the rest to fortune. But remember rice. This is the article we ought to ship, and it is expected we shall do it. I say no more. As to my own affairs, I refer you, &c.

I am, dear James, yours,

thence, and lodged in the Constitutional Post-Office, and there delivered to the several persons claiming; the claimants opening the same in the office, to prevent misdelivery.

Resolved, That Mr. Edwards, Captain Roger Smith, Mr. Hall, Mr. Loockock, Mr. Corbett, and Mr. Dupont, be, and they are hereby, appointed Commissioners for unlading and valuing the Cargo of the Ship Port-Henderson, and for fixing a reasonable rate at which the said Cargo shall be sold, for consumption or for sale, at a price not exceeding the purchase and carriage, in small quantities, by retail; and for employing proper persons to execute this service, allowing such proper persons a reasonable compensation for their trouble.

Resolved, That the Commissioners appointed to purchase Salt, do take, for the publick benefit, all such Salt as they can find in the hands of private persons, as expressed in the Resolve of the 19th instant, for the uses therein mentioned; paying for the said Salt twenty-five Shillings per bushel, and allowing for each family from whom such Salt shall be taken, sufficient for such family's use during six months.

Read a Letter from Edward Rutledge, Esq., one of the Delegates from this Colony in the Continental Congress, dated at Philadelphia, 1st March, 1776.

Resolved, That the Delegates of this Colony in the Continental Congress, or a majority of such of them as shall at any time be present in the said Congress, or any one of the said Delegates, if no more than one shall be present, be, and they and he are and is hereby, authorized and empowered, for and in behalf of this Colony, to concert, agree to, and execute, every measure which they or he, together with a majority of the Continental Congress, shall judge necessary, for the defence, security, interest, or welfare of this Colony in particular, and of America in general.

Resolved, That Roger Smith, Thomas Savage, John Matthews, John Huger, John Parker, Jacob Motte, Elias Horry, Jun., Peter Leger, and Alexander Moultrie, Esqs., be, and they are hereby, appointed Commissioners to stamp, and any three of them to sign, the Bills or Certificates of the larger denominations, from one hundred Pounds down to fifteen Pounds; which Bills shall also be countersigned by any one of the Commissioners of the Treasury. And that John Deas, John Scott, Sen., John McCall, Sen., Joshua Ward, Samuel Prioleau, Jun., James Fisher, John Webb, William Doughty, Alexander Inglis, William Greenwood, Samuel Legaré, Nathaniel Russell, Thomas Jones, Peter Fayssoux, and Thomas Waring, Esqs., be, and they are hereby, appointed Commissioners, with all possible despatch, to have printed, and any two of them to sign, the Bills of smaller denominations, from three Pounds down to one Shilling and three Pence, voted on the 6th instant to be issued. And when stamped, printed, signed, and numbered as aforesaid, that they, from time to time, deliver all the said Bills into the hands of the Commissioners of the Colony Treasury.

The Report of the Committee to whom were referred the Petitions of Joseph Buffington and William Wofford, Esqs., being taken into consideration, and amended, the Congress came to the following Resolutions thereupon:

Whereas it appears, that the fifty acres of Land upon which Iron Works are to be erected by Joseph Buffington, are not his, but the property of William Wofford, Esq., or others; and that there is an encumbrance upon the said Works already begun; and that the carrying on the said Works will be a publick benefit:

Therefore, Resolved, That the said encumbrance, being two thousand three hundred and eighty-one Pounds eight Shillings and ten Pence half-Penny, due to the Honourable William Henry Drayton, be paid; and that the sum of four thousand Pounds be lent, for the carrying on and completing the said Works, upon the following terms, viz: That when the said William Wofford, or others having legal right so to do, shall have made, to the said Joseph Buffington, good and sufficient title, in fee simple, to the said fifty acres of Land; saving to the said William Wofford, his heirs and assigns, that on no part of the said fifty acres of Land shall any Grist or Flour Mill, to work by water, be erected, and that the water shall not be stopped to the detriment of the said William Wofford, his heirs and assigns; and the said Joseph Buffington shall then have made to John Neufville,

William Gibbes, and Peter Bacot, Esqs., in trust for the publick, good and sufficient titles in fee simple, and also titles in like manner to one thousand acres of Land, with timber for fuel contiguous thereto; and Mr. Drayton shall have transferred to the said John Neufville, William Gibbes, and Peter Bacot, Esqs., for the use of the publick, all such securities as he may have for the payment to him of the said encumbrance; then the said sum of two thousand three hundred and eighty-one Pounds eight Shillings and ten Pence half-Penny, shall, by the Commissioners of the Treasury, be paid to Mr. Drayton; and the said Commissioners shall also then pay into the hands of Colonel John Thomas, Captain James Williams, and Mr. John Prince, the said sum of four thousand Pounds, to be by them expended and laid out, as Commissioners for erecting and completing the said Works. And that, if the said sum of six thousand three hundred and eighty-one Pounds eight Shillings and ten Pence half-Penny, shall not, by the said Joseph Buffington, his heirs or assigns, be repaid to the Commissioners of the Treasury for the time being, within four years next ensuing, then the said Lands, with all the improvements thereon, shall be sold, and the publick reimbursed the said six thousand three hundred and eighty-one Pounds eight Shillings and ten Pence half-Penny, of the money arising from the sale; and the overplus, if any, be paid to the said Joseph Buffington, his heirs or assigns.

And whereas the establishment of another Iron Work will also be of publick utility:

Therefore, Resolved, That the sum of three thousand Pounds for that purpose, be granted to William Wofford, upon his giving full and sufficient security for the repayment of the same, within four years, to the Commissioners of the Treasury for the time being. Provided, nevertheless, That the said sum of three thousand Pounds shall not be lent to the said William Wofford until he shall have made, or caused to be made, good titles as aforesaid, to the said Joseph Buffington, to the said fifty acres of Land. And also,

It is hereby declared, that the two Iron Works above specified, shall not be entitled to receive the Premiums already declared for the encouragement of Iron Works.

Mr. Edwards, from the Committee to whom the Proposal of Mr. William Bellamy was referred, delivered in a Report.

And the said Report being taken into immediate consideration,

Resolved, That the sum of three thousand Pounds, currency, be advanced to the said William Bellamy, out of the Colony Treasury, on loan, for the term of five years, free of interest, in consideration, and for the express purpose, of his forthwith erecting a proper Mill for making Paper and cutting Files, in as great perfection as in any part of Europe: he, the said Bellamy, giving undeniable security to John Neufville, William Gibbes, and Peter Bacot, Esqs., Commissioners of the Colony Treasury, for the performance thereof, and for repayment of the said sum into the said Treasury, by the expiration of the said term of five years.

On motion, that this Congress do now proceed to choose another Captain for the Second Regiment of Riflemen, in the room of Captain Richardson, resigned,

Resolved, That the said appointment be referred and left to the Council of Safety.

Resolved, That Thomas Lynch, Jun., Esq., on account of the alarming ill state of health of his father, one of the Delegates from this Colony, at Philadelphia, have leave of absence.

Resolved, That another Delegate to represent this Colony in the Continental Congress, be forthwith chosen by this Congress, by ballot, in addition to, and with as full powers, in all respects, as the Delegates already chosen have, and are invested with.

The Congress then proceeded to ballot for the said Delegate,

And Thomas Lynch, Jun., Esq., appeared to be, and was declared, duly elected.

Resolved, That Thomas Lynch, Jun., Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a sixth Delegate from this Colony, to represent the same in the Continental Congress.

The Congress met.

And the Journal of yesterday was read.

The Committee to whom the Petition of David Duncan was referred, reported, that they had, to the satisfaction of both parties, settled the dispute between him and Mrs. Lingard.

The engrossed copy of "A Constitution, or form of Government," being laid before the Congress, Ordered, That Colonel C. C. Pinckney and Mr. Salvador be a Committee to examine and compare the same with the rough draft thereof.

George King, Esq., was returned duly elected on the 6th instant, as a Representative for the Parish of St. Matthew, in the room of Tacitus Gaillard, Esquire, who had declined serving.

On motion, to establish a proper rank between the Officers of the Land and Sea Forces of this Colony:

Whereas it is expedient for the publick service, that a proper rank should be established between the Officers in the Navy and the Officers in the Land Forces of this Colony:

Therefore, it is Resolved, That rank be established in the following manner:

The Captain of a Ship, or Frigate, of not less than twenty guns, all not less than nine-pounders, of three years' standing, to rank with a Colonel.

The Captain of a Ship, or Frigate, as aforesaid, of less than three years' standing, to rank with a Lieutenant-Colonel.

The Captain of a Ship that does not carry twenty guns, all not less than nine-pounders, to rank with a Major.

The Master or Commander of a Snow or Brigantine, Schooner or Sloop, each carrying not less than fifty men, to rank with a Captain of Foot. And Colonel C. C. Pinckney reported, that he, with Mr. Salvador, had carefully examined the engrossed copy of the Constitution or form of Government, and that they found it correct.

Ordered, That the following Title be prefixed to the said engrossed copy:

"South-Carolina."

"In a Congress, begun and holden at Charletown, on Wednesday, the first day of November, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, and continued, by divers ad-journments, to Tuesday, the twenty-sixth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six."

The Committee to whom the Memorial of sundry inhabitants on Savannah-River, Great Rocky-Creek, and places adjacent, was referred, delivered in a Report.

And the said Report being taken into immediate consideration, was agreed to.

Resolved, That Fort Royal, about eighteen miles above Fort Charlotte, on Savannah River, on the frontiers of this Colony, is advantageously situated for the security of the inhabitants, in case of an Indian war, either with the Creeks or Cherokees. That Major Williamson, Captain Bowie, Captain Andrew Pickens, Adam Crain Jones, Esquire, and Mr. Rapley, be, and they are hereby, appointed Commissioners, they, or a majority of them, to view the said Fort, and to report, upon oath, at the next meeting of Congress or General Assembly, the state thereof, the expense of building it, and the damage done to the owner of the land.

Resolved, That the Paymaster to the two Regiments of Riflemen, be allowed a daily pay of three Pounds ten Shillings.

Ordered, That the engrossed copy of the Constitution or form of Government, with the Title prefixed, be now read.

And the same being read, is as follows:

South-Carolina.

In a Congress, begun and holden at Charlestown, on Wednesday, the first day of November, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, and continued, by divers adjournments, to Tuesday, the twenty-sixth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six.

A Constitution, or form of Government, agreed to, and resolved upon, by the Representatives of SOUTH-CAROLINA.

Whereas the British Parliament, claiming of late years a right to bind the North-American Colonies by law, in all cases whatsoever, have enacted statutes for raising a revenue in those Colonies, and disposing of such revenue as they thought proper, without the consent, and against the will of the Colonists. And whereas, it appearing to them, that (they not being represented in Parliament) such claim was altogether unconstitutional; and, if admitted, would at once reduce them from the rank of freemen to a state of the most abject slavery; the said Colonies, therefore, severally remonstrated against the passing, and petitioned for the repeal of those acts—but in vain. And whereas the said claim being persisted in, other unconstitutional and oppressive statutes have been since enacted, by which the powers of the Admiralty Courts in the Colonies are extended beyond their ancient limits, and jurisdiction is given to such Courts in cases similar to those which in Great Britain are triable by jury—persons are liable to be sent to, and tried in, Great Britain, for an offence created and made capital by one of those statutes, though committed in the Colonies; the Harbour of Boston was blocked up; people indicted for murder in the Massachusetts-Bay, may, at the will of the Governour, be sent for trial to any other Colony, or even to Great Britain; the chartered Constitution of Government in that Colony is materially altered; the English Laws, and a free Government, to which the inhabitants of Quebeck were entitled by the King's Royal Proclamation, are abolished, and French Laws are restored; the Roman Catholic Religion (although before tolerated and freely exercised there) and an absolute Government are established in that Province, and its limits extended through a vast tract of country, so as to border on the free Protestant English settlements, with design of using a whole people, differing in religious principles from the neighbouring Colonies, and subject to arbitrary power, as fit instruments to overawe and subdue the Colonies. And whereas the Delegates of all the Colonies on this Continent, from Nova-Scotia to Georgia, assembled in a General Congress at Philadelphia, in the most dutiful manner, laid their complaints at the foot of the throne, and humbly implored their Sovereign, that his royal authority and interposition might be used for their relief from the grievances occasioned by those statutes, and assured his Majesty, that harmony between Great Britain and America, ardently desired by the latter, would be thereby immediately restored, and that the Colonists confided in the magnanimity and justice of the King and Parliament for redress of the many other grievances under which they laboured. And whereas, these complaints being wholly disregarded, statutes still more cruel than those above-mentioned have been enacted, prohibiting the intercourse of the Colonies with each other, restricting their trade, and depriving many thousands of people of the means of subsistence, by restraining them from fishing on the American coast. And whereas, large Fleets and Armies having been sent to America, in order to enforce the execution of those laws, and to compel an absolute and implicit submission to the will of a corrupt and despotick Administration, and in consequence thereof, hostilities having been commenced in the Massachusetts-Bay, by the Troops under command of General Gage, whereby a number of peaceable, helpless, and unarmed people, were wantonly robbed and murdered; and there being just reason to apprehend that like hostilities would be committed in all the other Colonies, the Colonists were therefore driven to the necessity of taking up arms to repel force by force, and to defend themselves and their properties against lawless invasions and depredations. Nevertheless, the Delegates of the said Colonies, assembled in another Congress at Philadelphia, anxious to procure a reconciliation with Great Britain upon just and constitutional principles, supplicated his Majesty to direct some mode by which the united applications of his faithful Colonists might be improved into a happy and permanent reconciliation; that, in the mean time, measures might be taken for preventing the further destruction of their lives; and that such statutes as immediately distressed any of the Colonists might be repealed. And whereas, instead of obtaining that justice to which the Colonists were, and are, of right entitled, the unnatural civil war into which they were thus precipitated, and are involved, hath been prosecuted with unremitted violence; and the Governours, and others bearing the Royal commission in the Colonies, having broken the most solemn promises and engagements, and violated every obligation of honour, justice, and humanity, have caused the persons of divers good people to be seized and imprisoned, and their properties to be forcibly taken and detained, or destroyed, without any crime or forfeiture; excited domestick insurrections; proclaimed freedom to servants and slaves; enticed or stolen them from, and armed them against their masters; instigated and encouraged the Indian nations to war against the Colonies; dispensed with the law of the land, and substituted the law-martial in its stead; killed many of the Colonists; burned several towns, and threatened to burn the rest; and daily endeavour, by a conduct which has sullied the British arms, and would disgrace even savage nations, to effect the ruin and destruction of the Colonies. And whereas a statute hath been lately passed, whereby, under pretence that the said Colonies are in open rebellion, all trade and commerce whatsoever with them is prohibited; vessels belonging to their inhabitants trading in, to, or from, the said Colonies, with the cargoes and effects on board such vessels, are made lawful prize, and the masters and crews of such vessels are subjected, by force, to act on board the King's ships, against their country and dearest friends; and all seizures and detention, or destruction of the persons and properties of the Colonists, which have at any time been made, or committed, for withstanding or suppressing the said pretended rebellion, and which shall be made in pursuance of the said act, or for the service of the publick, are justified; and persons suing for damages in such cases, are, on failing in their suits, subjected to payment of very heavy expenses. And whereas, large reinforcements of troops and ships have been ordered, and are daily expected in America, for carrying on war against each of the United Colonies, by the most vigorous exertions. And whereas, in consequence of a plan recommended by the Governours, and which seems to have been concerted between them and their Ministerial masters, to withdraw the usual officers, and thereby loosen the bands of Government, and create anarchy and confusion in the Colonies, Lord William Campbell, late Governour, on the 15th day of Sep- tember last, dissolved the General Assembly of this Colony, and no other hath since been called, although, by law, the sitting and holding of General Assemblies, cannot be intermitted above six months; and having used his utmost efforts to destroy the lives, liberties, and properties of the good people here, whom, by the duty of his station, he was bound to protect, withdrew himself from the Colony, and carried off the Great Seal and the Royal Instructions to Governours. And whereas the Judges of the Courts of Law here have refused to exercise their respective functions, so that it is become indispensably necessary that, during the present situation of American affairs, and until an accommodation of the unhappy differences between Great Britain and America can be obtained, (an event which, though traduced and treated as Rebels, we still earnestly desire,) some mode should be established by common consent, and for the good of the people—the origin and end of all Government—for regulating the internal polity of this Colony, the Congress being vested with powers competent for the purpose, and, having fully deliberated touching the premises, do therefore Resolve,

I. That this Congress, being a full and free representation of the people of this Colony, shall henceforth be deemed and called the General Assembly of South-Carolina, and as such shall continue until the 21st day of October next, and no longer.

II. That the General Assembly shall, out of their own body, elect by ballot a Legislative Council, to consist of thirteen Members, seven of whom shall be a quorum, and to continue for the same time as the General Assembly.

III. That the General Assembly and the said Legislative Council shall jointly choose by ballot, from among themselves or from the people at large, a President and Commander-in-Chief, and a Vice-President of the Colony.

IV. That a Member of the General Assembly, being chosen and acting as President and Commander-in-Chief, or Vice-President, or one of the Legislative Council, shall vacate his seat in the General Assembly, and another person shall be elected in his room; and if one of the Legislative Council is chosen President and Commander-in-Chief, or Vice-President, he shall lose his seat, and another person shall be elected in his stead.

V. That there be a Privy Council, whereof the Vice-President of the Colony shall of course be a Member, and President of the Privy Council; and that six other members be chosen by ballot—three by the General Assembly, and three by the Legislative Council: Provided always, That no Officer of the Army or Navy, in the service of the Continent or of this Colony, shall be eligible; and a Member of the General Assembly or of the Legislative Council, being chosen of the Privy Council, shall not thereby lose his seat in the General Assembly or Legislative Council, unless he be elected Vice-President of the Colony; in which case he shall; and another person shall be chosen in his stead. The Privy Council, of which four to be a quorum, to advise the President and Commander-in-Chief when required; but he shall not be bound to consult them, unless in cases after-mentioned.

VI. That the qualifications of the President and Commander-in-Chief, and Vice-President of the Colony, and Members of the Legislative and Privy Council, shall be the same as of Members of General Assembly; and, on being elected, they shall take an oath of qualification in the General Assembly.

VII. That the Legislative authority be vested in the President and Commander-in-Chief, the General Assembly, and Legislative Council. All money Bills, for the support of Government, shall originate in the General Assembly, and shall not be altered or amended by the Legislative Council, but may be rejected by them; all other Bills and Ordinances may take rise in the General Assembly or Legislative Council, and be altered, amended, or rejected by either. Bills having passed the General Assembly and Legislative Council may be assented to or rejected by the President and Commander-in-Chief; having received his assent, they shall have all the force and validity of an Act of General Assembly of this Colony; and the General Assembly and Legislative Council, respectively, shall enjoy all other privileges which have at any time been claimed or exercised by the Commons House of Assembly; but the Legislative Council shall have no power of expelling their own Members.

VIII. That the General Assembly and Legislative Council may adjourn themselves respectively; and the President and Commander-in-Chief shall have no power to adjourn, prorogue, or dissolve them; but may, if necessary, call them before the time to which they shall stand adjourned; and where a Bill has been rejected, it may, on a meeting after an adjournment (for not less than three days) of the General Assembly and Legislative Council, be brought in again.

IX. That the General Assembly and the Legislative Council shall each choose their respective Speakers and their own Officers without control.

X. That if any Member of the General Assembly, or of the Legislative Council, shall accept any place of emolument, or any commission, except in the Militia, he shall vacate his seat, and there shall thereupon be a new election; but he shall not be disqualified from serving upon being re-elected.

XI. That on the last Monday in October next, and the day following, and on the same days of every second year thereafter, Members of the General Assembly shall be chosen to meet on the first Monday in December then next, and continue for two years from the said last Monday in October; the General Assembly to consist of the same number of Members as this Congress does, each Parish and District having the same representation as at present, viz:

Wednesday, March 27, 1776.

The General Assembly met according to adjournment.

The Minutes of yesterday being read, his Excellency the President elect, being present, addressed the General Assembly, in nearly the words following:

"GENTLEMEN: The very great, unsolicited, and unexpected honour which you have been pleased to confer on me, has overwhelmed me with gratitude and concern. Permit me to return you my most sincere thanks for so distinguishing and unmerited a mark of your confidence and esteem. I have the deepest sense of this honour. The being called by the free suffrages of a brave and generous People to preside over their welfare, is, in my opinion, the highest any man can receive. But dreading the weighty and arduous duties of this station, I really wish that your choice had fallen upon one better qualified to discharge them; for, though in zeal and integrity I will yield to no man, in abilities to serve you I know my inferiority to many. Since, however, this, gentlemen, is your pleasure, although I foresee that, by submitting to it I shall be ranked by your enemies amongst ambitious and designing men, (by whom they say the people have been deceived and misled,) yet, as I have always thought every man's best services due to his country, no fear of slander, or of difficulty or danger, shall deter me from yielding mine. In so perilous a season as the present I will not withhold them; but in her cause every moment of my time shall be devoted. Happy indeed shall I be, if those services answer your expectations, or my own wishes. On the candour of my worthy countrymen I rely, to put the most favourable construction, as they hitherto have done, upon my actions. I assure myself of receiving, in the faithful discharge of my duty, the support and assistance of every good man in the Colony; and my most fervent prayer to the omnipotent Ruler of the universe is, that, under his gracious Providence, the liberties of America may be for ever preserved."

And then the President elect withdrew.

His Honour the Vice-President elect, in a speech, stating his reasons for so doing, desired leave to decline the appointment to the office of Vice-President, and requested that the Members of the General Assembly and Legislative Council would proceed to a new choice of a Vice-President of the Colony.

His Honour then withdrew.

And the Members having taken the subject under their consideration, directed Mr. Chairman to point out to his Honour the Vice-President the mistake he was under, touching his not being equal to act in the Chancery, and upon which he had founded his desire to decline the Vice-Presidentship; to acquaint him that his services in that station were desired; and to report his determination thereupon. And the Vice-President being sent to, to desire his presence in the General Assembly, and his Honour signifying that he was much indisposed, and begged to be excused attending for the present,

The Members of the General Assembly and of the Legislative Council, proceeded to ballot for a Chief Justice; and, upon casting up the ballots, Mr. Chairman reported that the Honourable William Henry Drayton, Esq., was duly elected Chief Justice.

The Members of the General Assembly and Legislative Council then proceeded, in like manner, to the choice of four Assistant Judges; and the ballots being cast up, Mr. Chairman reported that the Honourable Thomas Bee, John Matthews, Esq., and the Honourable George Gabriel Powell, were duly elected Assistant Judges, by the votes of a majority of the Members present; but that Mr. Henry Pendleton, who had the next number of votes, had not such a majority.

A motion was thereupon made, to determine, by a question, whether Mr. Pendleton was duly elected an Assistant Judge; and the question being put, it passed in the negative.

Colonel Powell then requested leave to decline accepting the appointment to the office of an Assistant Judge of this Colony; and giving such reasons as were satisfactory to the House, his request was granted.

The Members of the General Assembly and Legislative Council thereupon proceeded to ballot for two Assistant Judges; and the ballots being cast up, Mr. Chairman reported that Joshua Ward and Henry Pendleton, Esquires, were duly elected Assistant Judges.

The Members of the General Assembly and Legislative Council then proceeded to ballot for an Attorney-General; and the ballots being cast up, Mr. Chairman reported that Alexander Moultrie, Esq., was duly elected Attorney-General.

Colonel Parsons reported, from the Committee appointed for that purpose, the draft of an Oath proper to be taken by His Excellency the President and Commander-in-Chief.

And the said Report being agreed to,

Resolved, That the following Oath be administered, in the General Assembly, to his Excellency the President and Commander-in-Chief, to qualify him for entering upon the execution of his office:

"I solemnly promise and swear to preside over the people of this Colony according to the Constitution, or form of Government, agreed to and resolved upon by the Representatives of South-Carolina, on the 26th day of March, 1776; that I will cause law and justice in mercy to be executed; and, to the utmost of my power, maintain and defend the laws of God, the Protestant Religion, and the liberties of America. So help me God."

The Members of the General Assembly were then adjourned, to meet at five o'clock, in the evening.

Wednesday, March 27, 1776, five o'clock, P. M.

The General Assembly met, according to adjournment, and proceeded to ballot for the following Officers, separately, viz:

The Secretary of the Colony, the Ordinary, the Judge of the Admiralty, the Register of Mesne Conveyances, and the Sheriff of Charlestown District. And upon casting up the ballots, Mr. Chairman reported that John Huger, Esq., was duly chosen Secretary of the Colony; that William Burrows, Esq., was duly chosen Ordinary; that Hugh Rutledge, Esq., was duly chosen Judge of the Admiralty; that George Sheed, Esq., was duly chosen Register of Mesne Conveyances; and that Thomas Grimbail, Esq., was duly chosen Sheriff for Charlestown District.

Upon motion, Resolved, That his Excellency the President and Commander-in-Chief be sworn into office to-morrow; and that Colonel Gadsden be desired to issue General Orders, that the Regulars and Militia in Charlestown do parade to-morrow; and that the artillery be fired when his Excellency shall have taken the State oath; also, that the salute be returned by the Navy; and that Proclamation, with all due solemnity, be made of his Excellency's being sworn to the administration of Government.

Resolved, That a similar Proclamation be made by the several Sheriffs of the country Districts.

Ordered, That Mr. Chairman be desired to wait on the President, and acquaint his Excellency with the above Resolutions.

And then the General Assembly was adjourned till to-morrow morning, nine of the clock.

Thursday, March 28, 1776.

The General Assembly met according to adjournment.

The names of the Members were called over, and the Journal of yesterday was read.

The gentlemen who had, on Tuesday last, by the General Assembly, been elected Members of the Legislative Council, withdrew to make choice of their own officers.

On motion, that a Speaker of the General Assembly be now chosen,

Mr. Chairman quitted the Chair.

And the Honourable James Parsons, Esq., was unanimously chosen Speaker.

Mr. Speaker having taken the Chair,

The House proceeded to the election of their Clerk, and unanimously made choice of Peter Timothy to that office.

Mr. Speaker and the rest of the Members having, respectively, taken the oath of fidelity required by the Constitution, and the oath of office being also administered to the Clerk,

A Message was sent to the Members of the honourable the Legislative Council, to acquaint them that the Members of this House having been duly sworn, they were ready to receive the Legislative Council, that the oath of fidelity might likewise be administered to them, respectively, in the General Assembly, as required by the Constitution.

The Honourable George Gabriel Powell, Henry Middleton, Thomas Ferguson, Charles Pinckney, Le Roy Hammond, Stephen Bull, Thomas Shubrick, and David Oliphant, Esquires, accordingly attended, and took the oath of fidelity in the General Assembly; and then they withdrew.

Thomas Grimbail, Esq., who had been duly elected Sheriff of Charlestown District, attending at the door, he was called in, and likewise took the oath of fidelity required by the Constitution.

Ordered, That the Honourable Mr. Drayton, Colonel Gadsden, Colonel C. C. Pinckney, Colonel Daniel Horry, Major Cattell, and Captain Roger Smith, be a Committee to wait on his Excellency the President and Commander-in-Chief, to acquaint him that the Members of this House having been sworn in, and having made choice of their Speaker, they were now ready to receive his Excellency, to administer to him the Oaths necessary to qualify him to enter upon the duties of that important station to which, by the suffrages of a free People, he had been elected.

And the Committee being returned, and having introduced his Excellency, he took the oath of fidelity, and also the oath of office, in the General Assembly. And his Honour the Vice-President also took the oath of fidelity.

His Excellency then, preceded by the Sheriff bearing the sword of State, and the Officers of the Legislative Council, and accompanied by his Honour the Vice-President, the Honourable the Speaker, and the Members of the Legislative Council, the Honourable the Speaker and Members of the General Assembly, in solemn procession, proceeded to the Exchange; where the preamble and the three subsequent clauses of the Constitution, or form of Government, being read, and the proceedings in the General Assembly on the 26th instant, whereby it appeared that his Excellency John Rutledge, Esquire, was duly chosen President and Commander-in-Chief, and that his Honour Henry Laurens, Esq., was duly chosen Vice-President of this Colony, being also read and proclaimed by the Sheriff; his Excellency, with the same procession, returned into the General Assembly, Mr. Speaker and the Members of the General Assembly first coming in; and, being seated, his Excellency the President and Commander-in-Chief, his Honour the Vice-President, and the Legislative Council, then entered, and

Mr. Speaker reported to the House the proceedings since he had quitted the Chair. His Excellency the President and Commander-in-Chief, his Honour the Vice-President, and the Legislative Council, then withdrew.

The General Assembly then proceeded to choose, by ballot, a Member of the Legislative Council in the room of the Honourable Henry Laurens, Esq., who, by accepting the office of Vice-President of the Colony, had vacated his seat therein; and it appearing, upon casting up the ballots, that the gentleman who had the greatest number of votes had not those of a majority of the Members present, the House again proceeded to ballot for a Member of the Legislative Council; and having balloted accordingly, Mr. Speaker reported that the Honourable William Moultrie, Esq., was duly elected.

The House was then adjourned to meet at five o'clock in the afternoon.

Thursday, March 28, 1776, P. M.

The House met according to adjournment.

And the names of the Members being called over,

The House proceeded to ballot for three Members of the Privy Council; and, upon the ballots being cast up, the Honourable James Parsons was declared duly elected a Member of the Privy Council by a majority of votes of the Members present.

The House then proceeded to ballot for two other Members of the Privy Council; and, upon casting up the ballots, it appeared, and Mr. Speaker reported, that the Honourable William Henry Drayton was, in like manner, duly elected a Member of the Privy Council.

The House then proceeded to ballot for a third Member of the Privy Council; and, upon casting up the ballots, it appeared that none of the gentlemen balloted for had the votes of a majority of the Members present. The House thereupon again proceeded to ballot for a third Member of the Privy Council; and, the ballots being cast up, Mr. Speaker reported that John Edwards, Esquire, was duly elected a Member of the Privy Council.

Ordered, That a Message be sent to the President, acquainting his Excellency that this House have chosen the Honourable James Parsons, William Henry Drayton, and John Edwards, Esquires, to be Members of the Privy Council.

The following Message was accordingly drawn and agreed to by the House:

May it please your Excellency:

Ordered, That Colonel C. C. Pinckney and Mr. Gibbes do wait on their Honours with the said Message.

Captain Moultrie reported, that he, with Captain Roger Smith, had waited upon his Excellency the President, and delivered to him the Message they had in charge.

It being represented to the House that there was an urgent necessity for immediately opening the Ordinary's Office,

Ordered, That Captain Moultrie do wait upon William Burrows, Esq., to acquaint him of his being chosen Ordinary of this Colony, and that it is necessary he should properly qualify himself to enter upon the execution of the duties of that office as soon as possible.

Ordered, That Mr. Loock, Captain Trapier, Colonel Thomas, Major Williamson, Captain Winn, Mr. Beard, Colonel Gervais, and Mr. Bull, be a Committee to receive and report the names of Candidates, or other fit persons, to be chosen Sheriffs for the several Districts out of the limits of Charlestown, and that they do report the same as soon as may be to-morrow.

And then the House adjourned till to-morrow morning, nine of the clock.

Friday, March 29, 1776.

The House met according to adjournment.

Captain Moultrie reported that he had, agreeable to the order of the House, waited upon Mr. Burrows with the message he had in charge; that Mr. Burrows expressed great sensibility of the honour conferred upon him by the House in electing him to the office of Ordinary, which he was willing to accept, but that his present indisposition rendered it impossible for him to attend the General Assembly to take the necessary oaths.

Ordered, That Colonel Horry do, on account of Mr. Burrows's present indisposition, wait upon him at his own house, and administer the oaths to him there.

Colonel Thomas, from the Committee on the state of the Militia in the interior parts of the Colony, delivered in a Report.

Ordered, That the said Report be taken into consideration to-morrow.

Ordered, That one of the Messengers be sent to desire the immediate attendance, in this House, of Captain Francis Ross, one of the Members for the New-Acquisition.

On motion, Resolved, That a Message be sent to the honourable the Legislative Council, to desire a conference between a Committee of both Houses on the subject of a joint Congratulatory Address to his Excellency the President and Commander-in-Chief.

The following draft was accordingly prepared:

May it please your Honours:

The General Assembly think it expedient that a joint Address from the Legislative Council and General Assembly should be presented to his Excellency the President, congratulating him upon his being in possession of the administration of the Government, and assuring him that both the Houses will support him in the same with their lives and fortunes. Ordered, That Mr. Matthews and Captain Skirving do wait upon the Legislative Council with a copy of the above Resolution.

His resignation was therefore accepted.

The Honourable Mr. Drayton reported, that he, with Colonel Pinckney, had waited on the Legislative Council, agreeable to the order of this House, to request their attendance, in order to proceed to the election of Sheriffs; and their Honours were pleased to answer they would attend presently.

To his Excellency JOHN RUTLEDGE, Esq., President and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Colony of SOUTH-CAROLINA.

The Address of the Legislative Council and General Assembly:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: We, the Legislative Council and General Assembly of South-Carolina, convened under the authority of the equitable constitution of Government established by a free People in Congress, on the 26th instant, beg leave most respectfully to address your Excellency.

Nothing is better known to your Excellency than the unavoidable necessity which induced us as members of Congress, on the part of the people, to resume the powers of Government, and to establish some mode for regulating the internal polity of this Colony; and, as members of the Legislative Council and General Assembly, to vest you for a time limited with the Executive authority. Such constitutional proceedings, on our part, we make no doubt will be construed into acts of the greatest criminality by that despotism which, lost to all sense of justice and humanity, has already pretended that we are in actual rebellion. But, sir, when we reflect upon the unprovoked, cruel, and accumulated oppressions under which America in general, and this country in particular, has long continued,—oppressions, which gradually increasing in injustice and violence are now, by inexorable tyranny, perpetrated against the United Colonies under the various forms of robbery, conflagrations, massacre, breach of publick faith, and open war; conscious of our natural and unalienable rights, and determined to make every effort in our power to retain them, we see your Excellency's elevation from the midst of us, to govern this country, as the natural consequence of such outrages.

Tuesday, April 2, 1776.

By the suffrages of a free People you, sir, have been chosen to hold the reins of Government; an event as honourable to yourself as beneficial to the publick. We firmly trust you will make the Constitution the great rule of your conduct; and, in the most solemn manner we do assure your Excellency that, in the discharge of your duties under that Constitution which looks forward to an accommodation with Great Britain, (an event which, though traduced and treated as Rebels, we still earnestly desire,) we will support you with our lives and fortunes.

The Honourable Mr. Drayton, from the Committee appointed to bring in certain Bills and Ordinances, presented the following:

A Bill to punish those who shall counterfeit, or utter knowing them to be counterfeit, the Certificates issued by the late Houses of Assembly, or the Continental or Colonial Currency which hath been already, or shall be hereafter issued.

"Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council,

Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the General Assembly:

"It has afforded me much satisfaction to observe that, though the season of the year rendered your sitting very inconvenient, your private concerns (which must have suffered greatly by your long and close application in the late Congress to the affairs of this Colony) requiring your presence in the country; yet, continuing to prefer the publick weal to ease and retirement, you have been busily engaged in framing such laws as our peculiar circumstances rendered absolutely necessary to be passed before your adjournment. Having given my assent to them, I presume you are now desirous of a recess. On my part, a most solemn oath has been taken for the faithful discharge of my duty; on yours, a solemn assurance has been given to support me therein. Thus, a publick compact between us stands recorded. You may rest assured that I shall keep this oath ever in mind. The Constitution shall be the invariable rule of my conduct. My ears shall always be open to the complaints of the injured. Justice in mercy shall neither be denied or delayed. Our laws and religion, and the liberties of America, shall be maintained and defended to the utmost of my power. I repose the most perfect confidence in your engagement. And now, gentlemen, let me intreat that you will, in your several Parishes and Districts, use your influence and authority to keep peace and good order, and procure strict observance of and ready obedience to the law. If any persons therein are still strangers to the nature and merits of the dispute between Great Britain and the Colonies, you will explain it to them fully, and teach them, if they are so unfortunate as not to know their inherent rights. Prove to them that the privileges of being tried by a jury of the vicinage, acquainted with the parties and witnesses; of being taxed only with their own consent, given by their representatives, freely chosen by and sharing the burden equally with themselves—not for aggrandizing a rapacious Minister and his dependant favourites, and for corrupting the people and subverting their liberties, but for such wise and salutary purposes as they themselves approve; and of having their internal polity regulated only by laws consented to by competent judges of what is best adapted to their situation and circumstances—equally bound, too, by those laws, which are inestimable, and derived from that Constitution, which is the birthright of the poorest man, and the best inheritance of the most wealthy. Relate to them the various unjust and cruel statutes which the British Parliament, claiming a right to make laws binding the Colonies in all cases whatsoever, have enacted, and the many sanguinary measures which have been and are daily pursued and threatened, to wrest from them those invaluable benefits, and to enforce such an unlimited and destructive claim. To the most illiterate it must appear that no power on earth can of right deprive them of the hard-earned fruits of their honest industry, toil, and labour; even to them the impious attempt to prevent many thousands from using the means of subsistence provided for man by the bounty of his Creator, and to compel them, by famine, to surrender their rights, will seem to call for Divine vengeance. The endeavours, by deceit and bribery, to engage barbarous nations to imbrue their hands in the innocent blood of helpless women and children; and the attempt by fair, but false promises, to make the ignorant domesticks subservient to the most wicked purposes, are acts at which humanity must revolt. Show your constituents, then, the indispensable necessity which there was for establishing some mode of Government in this Colony; the benefits of that which a full and free representation has established; and that the consent of the people is the origin, and their happiness the end, of Government. Remove the apprehensions with which honest and well-meaning, but weak and credulous minds may be alarmed, and prevent ill impressions by artful and designing enemies. Let it be known that this Constitution is but temporary, till an accommodation of the unhappy differences between Great Britain and America can be obtained; and that such an event is still desired by men who yet remember former friendships and intimate connections, though, for defending their persons and properties, they are stigmatized and treated as Rebels.

Truth being known, will prevail over artifice and misrepresentation. Conviction must follow its discovery. In such cases, no man, who is worthy of life, liberty, or property, will or can refuse to join with you in defending them to the last extremity; disdaining every sordid view, and the mean, paltry considerations of private interest and present emolument, when placed in competition with the liberties of millions; and seeing that there is no alternative but absolute, unconditional submission and the most abject slavery, or a defence becoming men born to freedom, he will not hesitate about the choice. Although superior force may, by the permission of Heaven, lay waste our towns and ravage our country, it can never eradicate from the breasts of freemen those principles which are ingrafted in their very nature. Such men will do their duty, neither knowing or regarding consequences, but submitting them, with humble confidence, to the omniscient and omnipotent Arbiter and Director of the fate of Empires, and trusting that His almighty arm, which has been so signally stretched out for our defence, will deliver them in a righteous cause.

The eyes of Europe, nay, of the whole world, are on America. The eyes of every other Colony are on this—a Colony whose reputation, generosity, and magnanimity, is universally acknowledged. I trust, therefore, it will not be diminished by our future conduct; that there will be no civil discord here; and that the only strife amongst brethren will be, who shall do most to serve and to save an oppressed and injured country.

JOHN RUTLEDGE.

April 11, 1776.

Ordered, That the Message be engrossed, and that Mr. Speaker do sign the same.

Ordered, That the Honourable Mr. Drayton and Captain McQueen do carry the said Message to his Excellency the President.

Mr. Speaker then adjourned the House to Tuesday, the 1st day of October next, after the Members thereof had sat in Congress and in General Assembly seventy-one days.

An Act to prevent Sedition, and punish Insurgents and disturbers of the publick peace.

Whereas a horrid and unnatural war is now carried on by the Ministry and Parliament of Great Britain, against the United Colonies of North-America in general, and this Colony in particular, with a cruel and oppressive design of robbing the Colonies and good people of this Colony of their dearest and most valuable rights as freemen, and reducing them to a state of the most abject slavery and oppression; and whereas, also, in order further to accomplish the said iniquitous and unwarrantable designs, every means has been adopted by a wicked Administration to sow civil dissensions and animosities, and to create disorder, confusion, and bloodshed amongst the good people of this Colony, by employing secret emissaries to stir up in the minds of wicked and evil-disposed persons, persuasions and principles inimical to the ties of humanity, and the common rights of mankind, and thereby inducing them not only to disturb the common peace, safety, and good order of this Colony, but to take up arms, and spill the blood of their fellow-citizens, who are only acting in the defence of their lives, liberties, and properties, against the hands of a lawless and despotick power; to the intent, therefore, and in order the more effectually to preserve and secure the peace, order, and good government of this Colony, and to deter and prevent such evil-minded persons from committing such offences, and all such other offences declared in this act, to the great danger of the lives, liberties, and properties of the inhabitants of this Colony:

Be it enacted by his Excellency JOHN RUTLEDGE, Esquire, President and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Colony of SOUTH-CAROLINA, and by the honourable the Legislative Council and General Assembly of this Colony, and by the authority of the same, That if any person or persons within this Colony do, or shall, from and immediately after the passing of this act, take up arms with a hostile intent, and by force and violence, or by words, deeds, or writing, or any other means whatsoever, cause, induce, or persuade, or attempt to cause, induce, or persuade any other person or persons, with such hostile intent, to take up arms, and by force and violence to oppose and subvert the authority of the Government of this Colony, established by the Constitution, agreed on and confirmed in Congress at Charlestown, on the twenty-sixth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, or to wound, maim, or kill any person or persons, or destroy any of the houses, goods, or chattels, of any such persons, who shall, under, and by virtue of any authority of the said Government, be acting in support and defence of the same, or the execution of any power, authority, or office derived therefrom,—all and every of such person or persons, and the aider and abetter, or aiders and abettors, of such person or persons so offending, in either of the offences aforesaid, shall, on being indicted and convicted of the same, by due course of law, be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony, and suffer death without benefit of clergy.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any persons within this Colony shall, immediately after the passing of this act, or at any time thereafter, by letter, writing, message, or other means of intelligence, hold any correspondence or intercourse, or conspire or concert in any manner whatever with, or aid or abet any Land or Naval Force, raised or to be raised, or which shall be sent by Great Britain, in a hostile manner, against this Colony, or any force or body of men within this Colony, who shall, in a hostile intent or manner, oppose the power and authority of the present Government of this Colony, established as aforesaid, with an intent to promote the accomplishments of any hostile plan of operation, designed by such force or forces against the lives, liberties, and properties, of all or any of the inhabitants and friends to the Constitution of this Colony, established as aforesaid,—every such person or persons, so offending in any of the said offences, shall, on being indicted and convicted thereof, by due course of law, be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony, and suffer death without benefit of clergy.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons within this Colony shall, immediately after the passing of this act, or at any time thereafter, furnish or supply, or cause or procure to be furnished or supplied, with any bills of exchange, moneys, goods, provisions, liquors, or other necessary articles of subsistence, or any military or naval stores whatever, any of the Land or Naval Forces, raised or to be raised, or sent by Great Britain, or any authority derived from that Government, against this Colony, or shall, in like manner, furnish or supply, or cause to be furnished or supplied, any force or body of men who shall, in a hostile manner, oppose the Government of this Colony, established as aforesaid,—every such person or persons, so offending in either of the offences aforesaid, and the aider or abetter, or aiders and abettors of any of the said offences, shall, on being indicted or convicted thereof, by due course of law, be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony, and suffer death without benefit of clergy.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons within this Colony shall, at any time after the passing of this act, compel, induce, persuade, or attempt to compel, induce, or persuade, any white person or persons, or any free negro or negroes, mulatto or mulattoes, Indian or Indians, to desert from their habitation or habitations, or any negro, or other slave or slaves, to desert from his or their master, mistress, or owner, and to join any land or naval force, raised, or to be raised, or sent by Great Britain, or any authority derived from that Government, against the United Colonies of America, or this Colony, or to join any person or persons armed in a hostile manner, with intent to oppose or subvert the Government of this Colony, established as aforesaid, or with intent of killing any person or persons, or destroying his, her, or their goods or property, who shall be acting, or ready and willing to act, in support and defence of such Government, or any of the inhabitants of this Colony, and friends to the same,—every such person or persons, so offending in any of the above offences, and all such as shall aid and abet the said offender or offenders, in the perpetration and execution of any of the said offences, shall, on conviction thereof, by due course of law, be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony, and shall suffer death without benefit of clergy: Provided always, nevertheless, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed, or taken, to prevent the good people of this Colony from arming of slaves, or negroes, for the better defence of this Colony against all enemies whatsoever who shall invade or attack the same, or endanger the safety thereof.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person, or persons, within this Colony, shall, immediately after the passing of this act, or at any time thereafter, collect, or assemble, with any body or assembly of persons, or cause, or procure them to be so collected and assembled, with intent, in a riotous and seditious manner, to disturb the publick peace and tranquillity, and the good order of the Government, and by words, or otherwise, to create and raise traitorous seditions or discontents in the minds of the good people of this Colony against the authority of the present Government, established as aforesaid,—every such person or persons, so offending in any of the said offences, shall, on conviction thereof, by due course of law, be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the lands and tenements, goods and chattels, and other real and personal estate of all such person or persons, who shall be duly convicted, by virtue of this act, of any of the crimes and offences thereby made felony, shall, within one month after such conviction, by the Sheriff of each District, respectively, in which such real and personal estate of the person, or persons, so convicted, or any part thereof, shall be found, with three freeholders of the said District, be appraised upon oath, and the said appraisement duly returned, by the said Sheriff of such District, to the Secretary's office in Charlestown within one month after such appraisement is made; and the said Sheriff of such District in which the appraisement is made, as aforesaid, shall, within one month thereafter, expose such estate so appraised to publick sale, first giving twenty-one days' publick notice of the sale; and shall, within three months after such sale, deposit the amount of the same, deducting legal poundage and charges, in the office of the Colony Treasury in Charlestown; and the Commissioners of the Colony Treasury, or any one of them, on receipt of such moneys from the Sheriff, as aforesaid, shall give a receipt or voucher for the same.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any Sheriff or Sheriffs, for any of the Districts in this Colony, shall, in anywise, transgress, or disobey, or neglect, the putting in execution any of the provisions or clauses in this act respecting their duty and office,—every Sheriff so offending, disobeying, or neglecting the same, shall forfeit his office, and incur the penalty of one thousand pounds, current money, to be sued for, and recovered, by bill or plaint in any court of record in this Colony, wherein no essoign, privilege, protection, or wager of law, or more than one imparlance, shall be allowed.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the moneys arising from the sale of all such estates as shall become forfeited, by virtue of this act, shall be appropriated for a fund, and shall become a reprisal fund, for reimbursing all such losses and damages which have been, or shall be, sustained by any person or persons, who have been, are, or shall be, engaged in opposition to the oppressive measures of the British Ministry, or the defence of the present established Constitution and the liberties of this Colony.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person or persons shall be reimbursed, by virtue of this act, for any losses or damages sustained from persons acting in open hostility against the present Constitution of Government, and the liberties of this Colony, unless the said reimbursement be, on application, and oath made of the damages actually sustained, deemed just and reasonable by the General Assembly of this Colony, or such other body, or persons, as the Legislative body of this Colony shall appoint: Provided always, nevertheless, That such person or persons, to whom such reimbursement shall be thought reasonable, do first, before the receipt thereof, take and subscribe the oath of fidelity ordained in the present Constitution, if such person or persons had not before taken and subscribed the same.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the fines and penalties to be incurred, by virtue of this act, shall, upon recovery thereof, be paid into the Colony Treasury, to be applied to, and for such uses and purposes as are herein mentioned.

Wednesday, February 14, 1776.

Mr. Speaker, with the Members present last night, met this morning, and a number sufficient to proceed on business not yet appearing, they adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Ordered, That Mr. Rodman and Mr. Pennock wait on the Governour, and acquaint him that a quorum of the Representatives is met in pursuance of their adjournment, and ready to receive any business his Honour may be pleased to lay before them.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

Thursday, February 15, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

The Members appointed to wait on the Governour with the message of last night, reported they had delivered the same according to order, and that his Honour was pleased to say he had no business at present to lay before the House.

Mr. Hunter and Mr. Thompson, Members for Northumberland and Westmoreland, this day appearing in the House for the first time since their election, were qualified as usual, and took their seats accordingly.

A Petition from Henry Hale Graham, Esq., Prothonotary, Recorder of Deeds, and Deputy Register for the Probate of Wills, &c., in the County of Chester, was presented to the House, and read, setting forth that the Publick Records of the said County are, by legal authority, ordered to be kept within the Borough of Chester, in the said County; that, soon after the Petitioner's appointment to the said offices, he did (at his own private expense) erect a building, (detached from all others,) constructed in such manner as to preserve these Records from any common accident of fire, and from being destroyed by vermin, in which the said Records have ever since been lodged and kept; that a number of the inhabitants of the said County have "requested the Petitioner to remove those Records to some place of greater security, (out of the said Borough,) being fully sensible of the importance of their preservation, and being apprehensive from their situation that they may be easily destroyed by an armed force from the river;" that although the Petitioner might look upon himself highly justifiable, in case of an actual invasion, to remove those Records out of the said Borough, yet he cannot think himself warranted in doing it until such a case did actually happen, (which might then be too late for their preservation,) unless directed so to do by legal authority; that the Petitioner, therefore, apprehends it to be his duty to apply to the honourable House, and humbly to request, that they would be pleased to take the premises into consideration, and do therein what shall appear to them expedient and necessary.

Ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. Hillegas produced at the table a Receipt from Richard Butler, Agent at Pittsburgh, for the sum of one hundred Pounds, voted by the House at their last sitting, as a present to Petapanihila, (alias George Allen,) an Indian, for his services to this Province; which sum was ordered to be carried to the account of the eighty thousand Pounds lately emitted.

Two Petitions from John Britton and John Ladd Howell, of the City of Philadelphia, for the office of Barrack-master, were presented to the House and read.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The Committee for Battalion Expenses produced at the table an Account for raising and training a Troop of Light-Horse, and requested the opinion of the House on some charges therein; which being examined, the said Account was referred back to the Committee for settlement, after making such deductions as they may judge reasonable.

The House taking into consideration the Account from Joseph Fox, Esq., for repairs made at the Barracks, referred the same to the Committee of Accounts for settlement.

The Petition from Henry Hale Graham, Esquire, being again read and considered,

Ordered, That Mr. Hillegas, Mr. Reed, Mr. Gibbons, and Mr. Pearson, be a Committee to prepare and bring in

The House adjourned to Monday next, at four o'clock, P. M.

— Monday, February 19, 1776, P. M.

Mr. Speaker, with twenty-five Members, met pursuant to adjournment, and a quorum not appearing, they adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

— Tuesday, February 20, 1776.

A quorum met pursuant to adjournment.

A Petition from Major William Coats, of the Northern-Liberties, for the office of Barrackmaster, was presented to the House and read.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Memorial from the Managers of the United Company of Philadelphia, for promoting American Manufactures, was presented to the House and read, setting forth, That the Memorialists, having been appointed by a large number of the inhabitants of the said City, and the County adjacent, as Managers of a Manufactory of Linen, Woollen, and Cotton, they have made very considerable progress in the institution, and at present employ above seven hundred persons as spinners, weavers, bleachers, &c.; but the present high price of flax operates as a great discouragement to this undertaking, which is wholly owing to the real scarcity of that article. And as an increase equal to the demand, in the ensuing year, may prove very uncertain, if left to the private opinion of individuals with respect to the quantity wanted, the Memorialists beg leave to recommend to the honourable House the offering bounties on that article, upon the plan of the Dublin Society; the happy effects of which have been evidenced in the extensive establishment of a very beneficial manufacture through the Kingdom of Ireland; or to give such other encouragement as the House may judge proper.

That the Memorialists, calling to mind the publick spirit of former Assemblies of this Province, in the article of hemp, are emboldened in this application, trusting that the present House will not yield to any set of men in zeal for the publick good.

That the Memorialists further beg leave to represent, that there is now introduced into the Manufactory a machine for spinning cotton and wool, by which one person can perform the work of three; but as the expense of such machines (being about seven Pounds) renders it impracticable for the poorer sort of people to procure them, they are as yet but little used among us; but the Memorialists are of opinion if the honourable House would appropriate a sum of money for the purpose of erecting a number of the said machines, and fixing them in different parts of the country, it might be the means of introducing them into general use, in every family that could accomplish the purchase, which would be a considerable saving of labour, and contribute greatly to the establishment of American Manufactures.

Ordered to lie on the table.

Upon motion, the House resumed the consideration of the several Petitions from William Masters, John Britton, John Ladd Howell, Lewis Nicola, and William Coats, for the office of Barrackmaster, in the room of Joseph Fox, Esq., who has resigned; and, after some time spent therein,

Resolved, That Major Lewis Nicola be, and he is hereby, appointed Barrackmaster of the Barracks in the Northern-Liberties of the City of Philadelphia, for the remainder of the present year.

The House resumed the consideration of the Bill entitled "An Act to enable the Keepers of Records in the Counties of Philadelphia and Chester to remove them to more safe and convenient places;" which being read the second time, and debated by paragraphs, was ordered to be transcribed for a third reading.

— Thursday, February 22, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. Speaker laid before the House sundry Resolutions and Orders from the honourable Continental Congress, which were read, and referred to further consideration.

The Governour, by Mr. Secretary, sent down a written Message to the House, with a Letter from Northumberland County, therein referred to; which were read by order, and are as they respectively follow, viz:

A Message from the Governour to the Assembly.

"GENTLEMEN: In consequence of your message of the 25th of November last, founded on a letter addressed to you from the County of Northumberland, respecting the Connecticut settlers at Wyoming, I took the earliest opportunity of giving orders to the Magistrates of that County to put the laws of this Province in execution in their County. The letter I have since received from the Magistrates and Sheriff (which I have ordered the Secretary to lay before you) will inform you of the steps they took, in pursuance of my order, and of the unfortunate event of their proceedings.

"As a considerable expense must have arisen on this attempt to execute the laws of Government, I doubt not you will readily make provision for defraying it.

"JOHN PENN.

"February 22, 1776."

Letter to the Governour from NORTHUMBERLAND.

"Sunbury, December 30, 1775.

"SIR: In pursuance of your Honour's letter of the 25th ultimo, the Magistrates of this County delivered into the hands of our Sheriff warrants, and other legal processes, against a number of persons residing at Wyoming, in this County, who have been charged, on oath, with the most illegal practices, and some of them with the greatest crimes. The Sheriff, apprehensive of resistance, judged it prudent to raise the posse of the County. A body of near five hundred men accompanied him to the neighbourhood of Wyoming, where they were met by some people from Wyoming, one of whom was said to be an officer. To these men the intention of the Sheriff and his posse was sufficiently explained, and the strongest assurances given that no violence or molestation should be offered to any person submitting to the laws. The Sheriff proceeded, however, but a little further, when he was most unexpectedly fired upon—one man (Hugh McWilliams) killed, and three others dangerously wounded. It was soon found impossible to force a passage on that side of the river, as the Narrows, naturally strong, had been fortified with the greatest care, and were lined with numbers of men, to which ours bore no reasonable proportion. An attempt was made to cross the river, with design, if possible, to arrive at the settlement of the persons against whom process had issued, without further molestation. This attempt was, for greater secrecy, made in the night. When the boats had nearly reached the opposite shore, and were entangled in a margin of ice, too thin to bear the weight of a man, they were, without any previous challenge, fired upon repeatedly by a party from the top of the bank. Jesse Lukens received a mortal wound, of which he is since dead; sundry others narrowly escaped. As a landing could not be effected, the boats returned.

"Baffled in this second attempt, the weather being intolerably severe, and receiving information that the persons we wished to arrest were the chief in command in their breast-works, it was thought advisable to desist from any further attempt. The boat, with the wounded men, was fired on while within gun-shot. A constant fire was kept up on our men from the opposite side, while they retreated through a long Narrows; one man only, however, was wounded, in the arm.

"We are sorry to inform your Honour, that a very considerable expense is incurred in this unfortunate affair. We, however, hope that the other branch of the Legislature will show the same readiness in properly resenting this daring insult on the Government of the Province, which we have ever experienced in your Honour.

"We are, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient, and most humble servants,

"WILLIAM SCULL, Sheriff.
 "SAMUEL HARRIS, Coroner.
 "WILLIAM PLUNKET,
 "SAMUEL HUNTER,
 "MICHAEL TROY,
 "JOHN WEITZEL."

Friday, February 23, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Petition from the Field-Officers of the Association in the County of Berks, was presented to the House, and follows in these words, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met:

"The Petition of MARK BIRD, DANIEL BROADHEAD, BALFAR GEEHR, and JONATHAN POTTS, Esquires, Field-Officers in the several Battalions in Berks County, in behalf of said Battalions, humbly sheweth:

"That the establishment of a Militia by this honourable House for the defence of the Province, gave great satisfaction to the inhabitants of this County, in general. But as we are humbly of opinion that the Militia law, in its present form, will not answer the good ends intended by it, and, therefore, gives great concern to many well-wishers to their country, we have taken the liberty to point out to the honourable House such parts of the said law as are generally objectionable, and to propose such alterations as, in our judgment, would be more satisfactory to the people, and better fulfil the design of the Association; trusting that the honourable House will patiently hear and consider the petitions and representations of their constituents at all times, and give such redress as, in their wisdom, shall appear right and reasonable; and hoping that, as this application proceeds from the most earnest wishes to serve our country, whatever may be the opinion of the House with respect to the propriety of the amendments proposed, it will not (as it is not intended) prove offensive to the House.

"To the Rules and Regulations for the better government of the Military Association in Pennsylvania, we beg leave to make the following objections, and propose the following alterations, &c.

"First: 26th Article. The Provincial Arms and Accoutrements will be delivered to the poorest Associators, by whom there is the greatest danger of loss. Is it not severe upon the commanding, or other officer, who is obliged to deliver arms, &c., to a large number of this class of people, to be accountable for their delivery to the Assembly, &c., at every other event than loss in actual service? If an Associator should run off, or be not able to purchase other arms, &c.; in case an accident should happen to those belonging to the Province, the officer cannot be justly censured; and if he does not fail in his duty, he ought not to be punished.

"Secondly: 27th Article. The Militia, in general, are yet very ignorant of Military discipline; and as actual service is expected from them early next summer, we think no time should be neglected in training them. We, therefore, humbly propose that the Companies should be exercised twice a week, except when they meet in Battalion, and then once a week, and the Battalions once a fortnight, till the 1st day of June next. After which time, it might, perhaps, be sufficient to exercise the men once every week, in Companies, and once in every month in Battalion.

"32d Article. Drum-Majors and Fife-Majors will be extremely useful in the Militia, and have a great deal of trouble. We wish the House would consider whether there is sufficient encouragement given to them.

"34th Article. A family may labour under such circumstances as to make it nearly impossible for the head of it to march with the Company. We submit it to the House, whether it would not be too heavy a punishment for a man in that situation to be held up to the publick as a coward and betrayer of his country. We think it would not injure the service to intrust the Captain with the power of dispensing with the personal attendance of any of his men, upon their finding another whom he approves of, well accoutred, and ready to march with the Company. But, unless an Associator should be situated in the manner before mentioned, we think the punishment rather too light for his basely withdrawing himself from the defence of his country, at the time of an invasion.

"35th Article: We think the expense of maintaining the families of poor Associators, entering into actual service, will fall too heavy on particular townships, many of which are very poor. The benefit derived from the service of such Associators will extend to the whole Province, and, therefore, the expense of providing for their families, in their absence, should be refunded by it. We would pray the House, also, to consider whether it would not have a good effect in encouraging the poorer sorts of people to act with spirit, by engaging to maintain them in case of their being disabled from labour in the service.

"37th Article. It would desolate whole townships to draft off whole Companies at a time. We would propose, when the ranks of the Captains are fixed, that the privates in each Company ballot which shall march first on any emergency; and if a full Company is necessary, let the eldest Captain take one-third of the men from each of the three eldest Companies, and take their tour of duty in that manner.

"38th Article. And in the mode for levying taxes, Res. 12th. For what purpose should any distinction be made between the application of the fines of Associators and Non-Associators? Associators' fines are to be immediately applied towards payment of the publick taxes, and burnt. The fines paid by the Non-Associators are to be safely preserved in the hands of Michael Hillegas, Esquire, for some unknown occasion.

"Resolutions directing the mode of levying Taxes on Non-Associators.

"1st Article. Many healthy, rich people, who are above fifty years of age, having no children under their care, and their servants being excused, they bear no part of the burden of associating. If they are able to pay a tax of . . . we think they should be put on a footing with other Non-Associators.

"2d Article. We think Assessors ought not to be excused on any pretence, from performing the duties enjoined them, without at least paying the expense of another person's performing that duty.

"8th Article. Resistance against a common enemy is equally advantageous to the whole community, and all the members of it should contribute their proportion towards it. But, as some persons declare themselves conscientiously scrupulous of joining in this most essential purpose of society, it ought not to be made their interest to act so destructive a part to the very existence of the community. The Associators, by these resolves, are obliged to furnish themselves with a good firelock, bayonet, steel-ramrod, worm, priming-wire and brush, cartridge-box, twelve flints, a knapsack, powder-horn and pouch; he must attend twenty days in the year at the place of exercise, at his own expense, and, in case of an invasion, must risk his life not only in his own defence, but in that of the Non-Associator's person, family, and property. The penalty on the Non-Associators for refusing to do a duty which he owes to his country, and to be at all this trouble, expense, and risk, is only fifty Shillings per annum. The great advantage given to the Non-Associator in point of interest, would entirely defeat the Association, if the people in general were not actuated by a patriotic spirit. We pray the honourable House particularly to attend to this objection.

"If the number of times of exercise was increased in the manner before-mentioned, and the Non-Associators to pay in proportion to the number of such times of exercise, and the Associators allowed one Shilling for every day that they exercise, to find them in provisions, the inequality between Associators and Non-Associators would be greatly reduced.

"11th Article. We think the Field-Officers of the several Battalions more proper and impartial judges to determine appeals, or discharge or lower assessments of Non-Associators, than the Commissioners, many of whom are themselves Non-Associators, particularly in this County.

"We think, as the fines for not associating are fixed at a certain sum by the Assembly, they should not be lowered or discharged by the Commissioners, or any other person, except for such reasons as are mentioned in the preceding article, viz: Death of the Non-Associator, or the dissolution of the Association; as no fines can accrue after either of those times; but we are of opinion, that to lodge so large a power in the Commissioners as to discharge or lower assessments as they shall think proper, will tend to defeat the Association entirely.

"We beg leave further to represent to this honourable House, that there are a great many persons able and willing to assist in the defence of the Province, but cannot afford to buy arms and accoutrements; or if they could afford it, the publick demand for them is so great, that they cannot be procured by a Militia; others there are who have arms, but are unwilling to associate. The time is now fast approaching, when a large Army is expected to invade the Province, and it will be necessary to strain every nerve in our defence. To have at such a time a large number of able-bodied men useless for want of arms, which may easily be procured, would, in our humble opinions, be extreme bad policy. We, therefore, pray the House to direct, that all Non-Associators shall, within a small space of time, deliver up their arms to the nearest Captains of the townships or places in which they reside, who should appoint proper persons to value them, and give the respective owners certificates of such receipt and valuation; and, in case of a loss, the Province refund their value; these arms to be distributed by the commanding officers of the several Battalions in the same manner as the Provincial arms are distributed.

"That the several matters and things before-mentioned may be fully considered, and redress granted in the premises by the honourable House, is the humble prayer of your Petitioners.

"MARK BIRD,
"DANIEL BROADHEAD,
"BALSAR GEEHR,
"JONATHAN POTTS."

A Petition from the Magistrates, Sheriff, and Coroner of the County of Northumberland, was presented to the House and read, setting forth, That the Petitioners, in pursuance of the express orders of his Honour the Governour, (founded on a Message from this honourable House, requesting orders to be given for a due execution of the laws of this Province, in the County of Northumberland, &c.) assembled the posse of this County, in order to serve processes upon, apprehend, and bring to justice, a number of notorious offenders, who, for some years past, have, with open force, bid defiance to the laws of this Province; that the posse aforesaid proceeded into the neighbourhood of Wyoming, were unexpectedly fired upon, and had one man killed and several wounded; that the Petitioners soon discovering that the obnoxious persons were intrenched, and that they could not force a passage along the accustomed road without great loss, attempted to cross the river, were again fired upon, and had one man mortally wounded; that the great severity of the weather, and other concurrent circumstances, determined the Petitioners to return home; that the Petitioners are sorry to inform the House that, notwithstanding their utmost care and frugality, a very considerable expense is incurred by this unfortunate attempt; that they hope, however, their endeavours to support the laws of the Province will meet with the approbation of the House, whose protection they implore, and humbly pray that some proper and effectual means may be used to secure them in the peaceable enjoyment of their property, and a due execution of the laws; or, if force only must decide the controversy, (which seems to be the wish of their adversaries,) the Petitioners beseech the House that they may not be left single and unsupported, to contend with a whole Colony.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The Bill intituled "An Act to enable the Keepers of Records in the Counties of Philadelphia and Chester to remove them to more safe and convenient places," being transcribed according to order, was read the third time, and compared at the table.

Resolved, That the Bill do pass.

Ordered, That Mr. Roberts and Mr. Humphreys wait on the Governour therewith, for his assent to the same.

A Petition from the Committee of Privates of the Military Association of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, was presented to the House, and follows in these words, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"The Petition of the Privates of the Military Association of the City and Liberties of PHILADELPHIA, humbly sheweth:

"That your Petitioners, having the greatest confidence in the equity and justice of this honourable House, have signed the Articles of Association framed the last session, notwithstanding the many difficulties to which they are thereby subjected; and the strong inducements to them to become Non-Associators, by the easy terms of exemption, being firmly persuaded that, on a reconsideration, this honourable House will remove every reasonable cause of complaint, and hear with favourable attention what your Petitioners, with the greatest deference and respect, beg leave to point out as necessary to quiet the minds of the Associators, and excite them to act with cheerfulness and vigour in the service to which they may be called. When the importance and necessity of defending our country against the ravages of a cruel and desolating enemy are so obvious, no arguments can be necessary to show it to be the duty of every good citizen to bear an equitable and proportional part of the publick burden; and surely no terms of exemption, affecting property merely, can be deemed equal to the risks and dangers to which they expose themselves, who are under the most solemn engagements of honour and duty, to lay down their lives, if necessary, in defence of their country. But your Petitioners would more especially solicit the attention of this honourable House to the following particulars, in which they humbly apprehend the resolutions of the House to be defective:

"First. That no regard has been shown to the great and otherwise useless expense Associators have been at, to equip themselves with arms and other accoutrements, and the long and earnest assiduity with which they have endeavoured to qualify themselves for the duties of the field. They beg leave to observe, that, in levying penalties upon Non-Associators, this honourable House have confined their views to the future only, imposing no more on such persons than what might be esteemed an equivalent to the twenty days which are expected to be employed in the field; though this honourable House, upon the slightest attention to the subject, must, and indeed seem to be sensible, that the time prescribed is not sufficient to acquire a competent knowledge of the art military, as they recommend it to the Associators, not already sufficiently expert, to meet as frequently as they can, at other times, to perfect themselves in the military exercise. Here, then, your Petitioners conceive themselves aggrieved; that, while animated with a fervent regard to liberty and their country, they have acquired a share of military knowledge sufficient, they hope, to encourage them to meet the enemy in the field, and being thereby exposed to the greatest danger, as most capable of repelling it, no regard has been shown either to the expense of equipment, or loss of time in acquiring this useful and necessary knowledge. The hardships and partiality of the regulation will further appear more strongly, when it is considered that your Petitioners will probably be called out to do duty before many of the field-days arrive; so that the strongest temptations are held out, from the smallness of the penalty, to the lazy, the timid, and disaffected, to avoid the danger and fatigue, by neglecting to qualify themselves, or at a critical moment evading their duty. So apparent already are the effects of this regulation, that persons of the above character affect to ridicule those whose patriotism would lead them to activity and action when necessary, by representing this honourable House as rating their lives at fifty shillings apiece. Such easy terms of exemption, in times of such imminent danger, your Petitioners humbly conceive, seem rather an invitation to prefer ease, security, and convenience, to the public interests and safety, and, if unaltered, will leave your Petitioners little to hope or expect, but the exertions and efforts of a generous few, whose zeal will probably prove their destruction. Your Petitioners humbly presume that, when so much is at stake, and there is so little prospect of securing it but by the sword, the terms imposed upon Non-Associators should be such as to induce every man of suitable age and strength (not truly conscientiously scrupulous) to join in the Association, and not such as would lead every one, whose attachment to the cause of his country did not supersede every other consideration, to pay his fine, and decline serving; they, therefore, cannot but lament, that while they, who are enemies to the liberties and cause of America, may, under the authority of the Province, appear in the garb of its best friends, by paying less than five shillings per month; they who are really its best friends, are liable, by an accidental deficiency, to be reproached with cowardice, and exposed to infamy.

"Your Petitioners, sensible that a compensation for arms, and past time employed in the publick service, involves several important considerations, do not presume to point out any sum, but beg leave to state their complaint, and leave it to the wisdom and justice of the House to give them suitable redress.

"Secondly. Your Petitioners beg leave to represent, that, under the present regulations, the estates of Non-Associators pay nothing but in common with Associators; and by this means such persons who, by age or other incapacity, are not included in the above articles, have the protection and security arising from the Association, upon easier terms than others—an indulgence for which your Petitioners can see no good reason, and which involves some of the most considerable estates in the Province; besides, personal service being principally required for the protection of property, your Petitioners would, with all humility, submit to the honourable House whether an annual sum of so much in the Pound, over and above the taxes paid equally by Associators and Non-Associators, ought not to be levied on the taxable estates of all Non-Associators, and others who do not come within the limits of the recommendation of the honourable Continental Congress respecting a General Association.

"Thirdly. Your Petitioners beg leave to point out a defect in the above regulation respecting apprentices: in some cases the apprentice is willing to associate, and the master withholds his consent; in others, the master consents and the apprentice refuses. Your Petitioners would humbly propose that, in the former case, the master should pay the fine; and in the other, that the apprentice, if of estate, shall pay the fine by his guardian or next friend; and if non-estated, suffer such punishment as the House shall deem proper and suitable to the offence.

"Fourthly. Your Petitioners do most earnestly remonstrate against the application of the fines and penalties levied in consequence of the Association. As the money to arise is not by the way of tax to defray the charge which the Associators may occasion, they humbly conceive that reason, custom, and precedent, all concur in showing that such appropriation ought to be for the immediate support and encouragement of the Association; and this, they humbly submit, might very properly be done in the following manner: That all such fines and penalties, whether levied from Associators or Non-Associators, be carried unto a fund by themselves, to be appropriated, First, To the relief of such Associators as may be wounded, or otherwise disabled in actual service. Secondly, To the relief and support of the widows and children of those who may be killed in actual service, by way of annuity. Thirdly, To the providing of arms and accoutrements for such Associators as are unable to furnish themselves. Fourthly, To pay such Associators as, through poverty, are not in the publick tax-books, for the time they may spend in the field. The residue, if any, to be applied as before proposed. Such an appropriation, your Petitioners conceive, would give life and spirit to the Association; and, upon a call of actual service and danger, the mind of the brave Associator would be relieved from those anxieties for his family which would otherwise damp his ardour, and induce him to avoid danger rather than meet it.

"Fifthly. In order to prevent any evasion of the regulations now or hereafter to be made, your Petitioners pray, that all persons alleging scruples of conscience, or claiming exemption by virtue of age or otherwise, be, if required, under a test by oath or affirmation, before they be admitted to the indulgence claimed. As the above exceptions are not made in favour of pretenders, but of those who are truly and really entitled thereto, your Petitioners humbly conceive no good reason can be offered against such claimants' giving full satisfaction on this head to those of their fellow-citizens who are risking all that is dear and valuable to them in life, in defence of the rights and interests of the Province, in which those of all its inhabitants are included.

"Sixthly. Your Petitioners beg leave to represent, that it has been the practice of all countries, and is highly reasonable that all persons, (not being mercenaries,) who expose their lives in defence of a country, should be admitted to the enjoyment of all the rights and privileges of a citizen of that country which they have defended and protected. Under this consideration your Petitioners beg leave to submit to the House the case of a number of brave and spirited Germans, and others, who have cheerfully joined in the Association, but are not entitled to the privileges of freemen electors. Good policy, as well as gratitude, suggest the propriety of granting every indulgence which can attach them to this country, and animate them in its defence. Your Petitioners therefore pray that some mode may be adopted for the purpose.

"Seventhly. Your Petitioners pray this honourable House to revise the thirty-fourth article of the Rules framed the last session for the government of the Associators, by substituting in the place of the penalty therein mentioned, "that such offender shall be forever hereafter incapable of holding any office of profit or trust under the authority of this Province." They moreover pray this honourable House to give directions to two or more Associators, to join the Commissioners of this City and the several Counties, in hearing the appeals of such persons as are mentioned in the eleventh resolution framed in the last session of this honourable House.

"Eighthly. It is with great concern your Petitioners inform this honourable House, that, notwithstanding the directions given and pointed out the last session, there is great reason to fear the Assessors in many places, from different motives, have omitted to execute the branch of their office which respects the Association. Your Petitioners therefore pray this honourable House to make some further provision against such neglect, so that the salutary and beneficial effects arising from the Association may not fail through the neglect, or other misconduct, of those entrusted to carry into execution the intentions of this honourable House.

"Your Petitioners, with the utmost humility, request this honourable House to take these matters into their serious consideration, and grant them such relief as, in their wisdom and equity, shall seem best calculated to remove that inequality which appears in the foregoing terms of exemption, and such other redress as the nature of the case may merit and require. And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

"SAMUEL SIMPSON, Chairman."

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Memorial from the Officers of the Military Association of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia was presented to the House, and is as follows, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"The Memorial of the Officers of the Military Association of the City and Liberties of PHILADELPHIA, sheweth :

"That your Memorialists have perused, at the request of the Private Associators of this City and Liberties, their Petition to your honourable House, and concur with them in the sentiments therein contained, earnestly desiring the attention of the honourable House to the weighty matters therein set forth. In addition to the several amendments proposed by the Privates to the Rules and Regulations relative to the Association, your Memorialists beg leave to subjoin the following, which they think of great importance :

"That numbers of the present Associators are people who have not heretofore associated, and therefore are, for the most part, undisciplined. Among these are a great many apprentices, and others, who, however desirous they may be of gaining military instruction, will not be permitted to turn out oftener than the Regulations require. And it is well known to persons of experience in this way, that it is impossible to train men so as to render them expert soldiers, without great assiduity and frequent exercise, and that the times mentioned in the Regulations are scarce sufficient to perfect a man even in his manual. Your Memorialists therefore request the honourable House would increase the number of days appointed for the general meetings of Associators, which, in the opinion of your Memorialists, should be at least once in every week.

"That the wages appointed for drummers and fifers are so extremely trifling, that no persons can be procured to do the duty, and our Battalions are almost totally deprived of their musick, as the drummers and fifers have left the Association, to get employ where they receive pay on which they can subsist. That the drummers and fifers are, in general, persons who have no other way of gaining a livelihood ; and as much time is taken up in perfecting themselves, they ought, as we conceive, instead of casual and uncertain pay, to have a permanent and settled support.

"Your Memorialists therefore pray the honourable House to raise the wages of the Drum and Fife-Majors, and allow the drummers and fifers reasonable and constant pay, that persons already taught may be induced to join the Association, and that others may be incited to qualify themselves for this part of military duty, which is not merely parade, but absolutely essential to the service.

"That the officers of the several Battalions experience many inconveniences from the want of a Sergeant-Major ; and as there are now in all the Battalions officers tolerably qualified, it is submitted to the honourable House, whether, instead of an Adjutant, it would not be better to appoint a Sergeant-Major on constant pay, and let a subaltern officer, in every Battalion, do the duty of an Adjutant.

"Your Memorialists beg leave to give it as their opinion to the honourable House, that the several alterations and amendments pointed out in the petition from the Privates, together with those before-mentioned, being made, the minds of the people will be entirely satisfied, and strength and vigour will be given to the Association, which, though now very extensively adopted, will then be more generally agreed to, and which persons in general signed, not because they esteemed the Regulations perfect, or in all cases proper, but from their zeal for the cause, and the confidence they had in the honourable House that you would be pleased to remedy all defects when applied to for that purpose.

"By order of a Board of Officers :

"DANIEL ROBERDEAU, President.

"Philadelphia, February 21, 1776."

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Remonstrance and Petition from the Committee of Inspection and Observation of the County of Chester, was presented to the House, and is as follows, viz :

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"The Remonstrance and Petition of the Committee of Inspection and Observation of CHESTER County, humbly sheweth :

"That your Remonstrants, in obedience to the resolves of this honourable House, and from zeal to the cause of their country, have, since your last session, used their best endeavours to prevail on the people of this County to adopt and sign the articles for the better government of the Military Association ; but we find them not so well received as the exigency of the times requires ; and are apprehensive, unless your Honours will, at this session, amend such parts thereof as are the most exceptionable they will not be generally signed but by those who think it better to adopt any government rather than none.

"Your Remonstrants beg leave briefly to mention some of the articles which the people most generally object to, viz : They say, 'that the burden of the Association falls chiefly on the poor and middling sort of the inhabitants, whilst the more opulent are, for the most part, exempt, they carrying on their business by bought servants and Negroes. On the contrary, those in low and middling circumstances are obliged to take in apprentices ; the arming of which, together with their loss of time, will be extremely burdensome ; so much so, that they cannot comply with the resolves of the House, without distressing themselves and families. But, were arms and accoutrements to be provided at the publick charge, they are ready to conform to the other parts as far as in their power.'

"Your Remonstrants are humbly of opinion, that the above objections are founded in justice ; and firmly believe that, was some measure taken to provide arms for the whole, at the publick charge, and all able-bodied men, from sixteen to sixty, obliged to associate or pay the fine, that then it would be generally adopted.

"Your Remonstrants therefore humbly request your Honours to take the premises under your serious consideration, and make such alterations in the present Association as to you may seem just and reasonable.

"In Congress, October 26, 1775.

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Provincial Assemblies, Conventions, or Councils or Committees of Safety of the United Colonies, to export to the foreign West-Indies, on account and risk of their respective Colonies, as much Provision or other Produce (except horned Cattle, Sheep, Hogs, and Poultry) as they may deem necessary for the importation of Arms, Ammunition, Sulphur, and Saltpetre.

"November 4, 1775.—Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Assemblies or Conventions of the Colonies, respectively, to set and keep their Gunsmiths at work, to manufacture good Fire-locks with Bayonets; each Fire-lock to be made with a good Bridle-lock, three-quarters of an inch bore, and of good substance at the breech; the Barrel to be three feet eight inches in length; the Bayonet to be eighteen inches in the blade; with a steel Ramrod, the upper end thereof to be trumpet-mouthed. That the price to be given be fixed by the Assembly or Convention, or Committee of Safety, of each Colony; and that, until a sufficient quantity of good Arms can be manufactured, they import as many as are wanted, by all the means in their power.

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Legislatures, Assemblies, or Conventions of the Colonies, to enact a law or pass an ordinance inflicting the following punishments upon such as harbour Deserters, knowing them to be such, viz: A fine upon all such offenders, not less than thirty nor more than fifty Dollars; and in case of inability to pay the fine, to be punished with whipping, not less than thirty-nine lashes for each offence. Also, that they empower the Commander-in-Chief, or the officer commanding a detachment or any out-post, to administer an oath, and swear any person or persons to the truth of any information or intelligence, or any other matter relative to the publick service.

"November 25, 1775.—Resolved, That all such Ships-of-War, Frigates, Sloops, Cutters, and Armed Vessels, as are or shall be employed in the present cruel and unjust war against the United Colonies, and shall fall into the hands of, or be taken by, the inhabitants thereof, be seized and forfeited to and for the purposes hereinafter mentioned.

"That all Transport Vessels in the same service, having on board any Troops, Arms, Ammunition, Clothing, Provisions, or Military or Naval Stores, of what kind soever; and all Vessels, to whomsoever belonging, that shall be employed in carrying Provisions or other necessities to the British Army or Armies, or Navy, that now are or shall hereafter be within any of the United Colonies; or any Goods, Wares, or Merchandise, for the use of such Fleet or Army, shall be liable to seizure, and, with their cargoes, shall be confiscated.

"That no Master or Commander of any Vessel shall be entitled to cruise for or make prize of any Vessel or Cargo before he shall have obtained a commission from the Congress, or from such person or persons as shall be for that purpose appointed in some one of the United Colonies.

"That it be, and is hereby, recommended to the several Legislatures in the United Colonies, whether Assemblies or Conventions, as soon as possible to erect Courts of Justice, or give jurisdiction to the Courts now in being, for the purpose of determining concerning the captures to be made as aforesaid; and to provide that all trials in such cases be had by a Jury, under such qualifications as to the respective Legislatures shall seem expedient.

"That all prosecutions shall be commenced in the Court of that Colony in which the captures shall be made; but if no such Court be at that time erected in the said Colony, or if the capture be made on open sea, then the prosecution shall be in the Court of such Colony as the captor may find most convenient. Provided, That nothing contained in this Resolution shall be construed so as to enable the captor to remove his prize from any Colony competent to determine concerning the seizure, after he shall have carried the Vessel so seized within any harbour of the same.

"That in all cases an appeal shall be allowed to the Congress, or such person or persons as they shall appoint for the trials of appeals, provided the appeal be demanded within five days after definitive sentence, and such appeal be lodged with the Secretary of Congress within forty days afterwards; and provided the party appealing shall give security to prosecute the said appeal to effect. And in case of the death of the Secretary during the recess of Congress, then the said appeal to be lodged in Congress within twenty days after the meeting thereof.

"That when any Vessel or Vessels shall be fitted out at the expense of any private person or persons, then the captures made shall be to the use of the owner or owners of the said Vessel or Vessels; that where the Vessels employed in the capture shall be fitted out at the expense of any of the United Colonies, then one-third of the prize taken shall be to the use of the captors, and the remaining two-thirds to the use of the said Colony; and where the Vessel so employed shall be fitted out at the Continental charge, then one-third shall go to the captors, and the remaining two-thirds to the use of the United Colonies. Provided, nevertheless, That if the capture be a Vessel-of-War, then the captors shall be entitled to one-half of the value, and the remainder shall go to the Colony or Continent, as the case may be, the necessary charges of condemnation of all prizes being deducted before distribution made.

"That in cases of recaptures, the recaptors have and retain, in lieu of salvage, one-eighth part of the true value of the Vessel and Cargo, or either of them, if the same hath, or have been, in the possession of the enemy twenty-four hours, and less than forty-eight hours; one-third part if more than forty-eight and less than ninety-six hours; and one-half if more than ninety-six hours; unless the Vessel shall, after the capture, have been legally condemned as prize by some Court of Admiralty; in which case the recaptors to have the whole. In all which cases, the share detained, or prize, to be divided between the owners of the Ship making the recapture, the Colony, or the Continent, as the case may be, and the captors, agreeable to the former Resolution.

"December 26, 1775.—Whereas the Congress, on the 29th day of November, resolved that a further sum of three millions of Dollars be emitted in Bills of Credit:

"Resolved, That the thirteen United Colonies be pledged for the redemption of the Bills of Credit so directed to be emitted.

"That each Colony provide ways and means to sink its proportion of the said Bills, in such manner as may be most effectual, and best adapted to the condition, circumstances, and equal mode of levying taxes in each Colony.

"That the proportion or quota of each respective Colony be determined according to the number of Inhabitants, of all ages, including Negroes and Mulattoes in each Colony.

"That it be recommended to the several Assemblies, Conventions, or Councils, or Committees of Safety, of the respective Colonies, to ascertain, by the most impartial and effectual means in their power, the number of Inhabitants in each respective Colony; taking care that the list be authenticated by the oaths or affirmations of the several persons who shall be intrusted with this service; and that the said Assemblies, Conventions, or Councils or Committees of Safety, do, respectively, lay before Congress a Return of the number of Inhabitants of their respective Colonies, as soon as the same shall be procured.

"That each Colony pay its respective quota in four equal payments; the first to be made on or before the last day of November, 1783; the second on or before the last day of November, 1784; the third on or before the last day of November, 1785; and the fourth or last on or before the last day of November, 1786.

"And that for this end the several Assemblies or Conventions provide for laying and levying Taxes in their respective Colonies towards sinking the Continental Bills. That the said Bills be received by the Collectors in payment of such Taxes, and be by the Collectors paid into the hands of the Provincial Treasurers, with all such other moneys as they may receive in lieu of the Continental Bills; which other moneys the Provincial Treasurers shall endeavour to get exchanged for Continental Bills; and where that cannot be done, shall send to the Continental Treasurers the deficiency in silver and gold, with the Bills, making up the quota to be sunk in that year; taking care to cut, by a circular punch of an inch in diameter, a hole in such Bills, and to cross the same, thereby to render them unpassable, though the sum or value is to remain fairly legible. And the Continental Treasurers, as fast as they receive the said quotas, shall, with the assistance of a Committee of five persons, to be appointed by the Congress then sitting, or by the Assembly or Convention of the Province of Pennsylvania, examine and count the Continental Bills, and in the presence of the said Committee, burn and destroy them.

"And the silver and gold sent them to make up the deficiencies of quotas, they shall retain in their hands until demanded in redemption of Continental Bills that may be brought to them for that purpose; which Bills, so redeemed, they shall also burn and destroy in the presence of the said Committee. And the Treasurers, whenever they have silver or gold in their hands for the redemption of Continental Bills, shall advertise the same, signifying that they are ready to give gold or silver for such Bills, to all persons requiring it in exchange.

"Resolved, That the Inspectors of the Press deliver the proof-sheets and checks of the Continental Bills to the Continental Treasurers, and that they deliver one of each to the Delegates of every Colony, to remain with the Provincial Treasurer to be appointed in such Colony, and to retain the rest in their hands.

"Whereas there is reason to believe that divers persons, either from inattention to the publick good, or with design to retard the recruiting service, have arrested and imprisoned, for very trifling debts, many Soldiers who had engaged to risk their lives in defence of the rights and liberties of America; and as it has always been found necessary, in time of war, to regulate and restrain a practice of such pernicious tendency, and in such cases to abate the rigours of law:

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Legislatures in these Colonies, whether Assemblies or Conventions, to pass Acts or Ordinances prohibiting the arrests of Continental Soldiers for small debts. And in order that the same rule may pervade all the Colonies, that no such Soldier be arrested at the suit of any of his creditors, unless the said creditor make oath that the said Soldier is justly indebted to him in the sum of twenty-five Dollars over and above all discounts; and that the estate of no such Soldier be liable to attachment at the suit or for the benefit of all his creditors, unless their debts in the whole, on being ascertained by their oaths, shall amount to more than one hundred and fifty Dollars.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

The Committee of Accounts, to whom the Barrackmaster's Account was referred for consideration, reported they had examined the same, and are of opinion it ought to be immediately paid.

And an Order being drawn at the table on Michael Hillegas, Esq., for two hundred and eleven Pounds seventeen Shillings and six Pence, in discharge of the said Account, the same was signed by the Speaker, and delivered to Mr. Hillegas.

A Petition from John Marshall, Threadmaker, from Eng- land, was presented to the House and read, setting forth, That the Petitioner, emboldened by the laudable attention of the honourable House to the promotion and encouragement of useful manufactures in this Province, begs leave to represent that, at a considerable expense, and after several years' close application, he hath made himself perfect master of the aforesaid business in all its branches, according to the best established and approved methods practised in the most noted manufacturing towns in England. That about sixteen months ago, the Petitioner arrived in this city, and engaged with the Managers of the House of Employment, at a small annual salary, where (by their permission, at his own risk, and at a very considerable cost) he erected several useful implements and machines, the whole of which are now in use there. That the most material machine is a twisting and throwing-mill, entirely of the Petitioner's own invention, which is a most excellent improvement upon any heretofore known, and answering every purpose that was expected; greatly forwarding the business, by lessening the labour that was otherwise necessary for carrying it on, and such an one as he apprehends was never known before in any part of the world. That the Petitioner hath, in the said House of Employment, brought the thread manufactory to a perfection before unknown in this Province, or, as he is informed, in America, it being generally allowed by the consumers (the only true judges) that the threads he manufactures there are vastly preferable to any imported or elsewhere had. That the Petitioner, far from wanting to make any secret of his business or machine, is willing to instruct any proper or capable persons in the whole business, and to do everything in his power to establish the manufacture in this Province, the great utility of which, on many accounts, is universally acknowledged, and more particularly at this time necessary.

That the Petitioner therefore prays the honourable House to take the premises into consideration, and hopes they will consider him as an useful manufacturer, as also the first inventor and introducer of a most excellent machine into this Province, not applied to his own benefit by the partial or exclusive use of it, but that it is of a publick benefit and utility, being, as aforesaid, now in use at the House of Employment; and that the honourable House will grant him such bounty or encouragement as he may be judged to merit.

Ordered to lie on the table.

Upon motion, the Memorial from the Managers of the United Company of Philadelphia, for promoting American Manufactures, was again read; and, after some debate thereon, Ordered, That Mr. Miles, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Reed, Mr. Brown, Mr. Pennock, Mr. Grubb, Mr. Swoope, Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Chreist, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Dougherty, and Mr. Hunter, be a Committee to consider of, and report to the House, the best mode of encouraging the culture of Flax in this Province.

The Governour, by Mr. Secretary, returned the Bill intituled "An Act to enable the Keepers of Records, in the Counties of Philadelphia and Chester, to remove them to more safe and convenient places," and acquainted the House he should be ready to pass the said Bill into a law whenever presented to him for that purpose.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Post Meridian.

The House resumed the consideration of the Resolutions of the Continental Congress, laid before them on Thursday, the 22d instant; and, after some time spent therein, Ordered, That Mr. Gray, Mr. Reed, Mr. Rodman, Mr. Gibbons, Mr. Slough, Mr. Swoope, Mr. Chreist, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Dougherty, Mr. Hunter, and Mr. Thompson, be a Committee to make inquiry what part of the Arms and Accoutrements, directed by the late Assembly to be provided for publick use, are now completed, and when the whole will probably be procured; and that the said Members use their utmost endeavours to forward this necessary business in their respective Counties.

The House being informed by a Member, who is also a Member of the Committee of Safety, that the Committee have diligently applied themselves to the promoting the manufacture of good Arms in this Province,

Resolved, That the Resolution of Congress of the 4th of November last be transmitted to the Committee of Safety, and that they be directed to prosecute their measures for the procuring good Arms with the utmost industry.

Ordered, That Mr. Gray, Mr. Miles, Mr. Morris, Mr. Reed, Mr. Wynkoop, Mr. Pyle, Mr. Ross, Mr. Taylor, and Mr. Thompson, be a Committee to prepare a Resolve inflicting the following punishments upon such persons as harbour Deserters from the Continental and Provincial Forces, knowing them to be such, viz: A fine upon all such offenders, not less than thirty nor more than fifty Dollars; and in case of refusal or inability to pay the fine, to be punished with imprisonment, not exceeding . . . months for each offence; and that such Resolve do also extend to institute some proper Court or authority for the trial of such offenders, with suitable powers, and under proper limitations.

Ordered, That the Resolution of Congress, respecting the delegation of power to the Commander-in-Chief, or officer commanding a detachment or out-post, to administer an Oath, be referred to the said Committee, and provision made accordingly.

Ordered, That the Resolution recommending to the Legislatures of the several Colonies to erect Courts of Justice, for the purpose of determining concerning Captures, be adopted, and referred to the said Committee.

Ordered, That the Resolution for ascertaining the number of Inhabitants in each Colony, be recommended to the attention of the said Committee; and that this service be performed by the Township and Ward-Assessors within their respective Districts.

Ordered, That the Resolution recommending to the several Assemblies to pass Acts or Ordinances for prohibiting arrests of Continental and Provincial Soldiers, be complied with, and referred to the said Committee.

A Petition from William Scout, of Moorland, in the County of Philadelphia, Fugleman, complaining that he had not received the wages due to him for his services, was presented to the House and read.

Ordered to lie upon the table.

The House adjourned to to-morrow.

Friday, March 1, 1776.

A Petition from the Committee of Inspection for the County of Bucks, was presented to the House, and is as follows, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"The Petition of the Committee of Inspection for the County of Bucks, humbly sheweth:

"That as a general uneasiness prevails among the Associators in this County, on account of the late Military Resolutions of this honourable House, and many persons have signed them under a full persuasion that amendments would be made therein; and as there are many able-bodied men, between the age of fifty and sixty years, possessed of large estates, who are entirely exempt from military duty and expense, your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that the Association may be extended to the age of sixty.

"And as the tax upon Non-Associators is confined merely as an equivalent for personal services, and the Associators have no compensation for their arms and accoutrements, not to mention the dangers they will be exposed to when called into actual service, your Petitioners pray, that an additional tax be laid upon the estates of Non-Associators proportionate to the expenses of the Associators necessarily incurred for the general defence of property.

"And as, by marching whole Battalions or Companies of Militia, large tracts of country will be left destitute of men, except those who either hold all resistance unlawful, or such as are disaffected to the present measures; your Petitioners therefore beg leave to submit it to the consideration of the House, whether it would not be better to direct the Colonels to draft from their Battalions such number as shall, from time to time, be requisite; thereby affording an opportunity for those whose circumstances will not always admit their going to get volunteers in their stead, and, at the same time, leaving sufficient force in every part of the country to quell any local insurrections.

"All which your Petitioners humbly pray may be taken into the consideration of the House, and such amendments made as you in your wisdom shall see meet.

"Per order of the Committee:

"JOSEPH HART, Chairman.

"Bucks County, in Committee, February 27, 1776."

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Petition from divers Inhabitants of the Township of New-Britain, concerning the settlement of the account of expenses exhibited to the Committee for Captain William Roberts's Company, in the said Township, was presented to the House, and read, praying the said Account may be re-examined.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Petition from a number of Freholders and Inhabitants of the County of Northampton; a copy of a Memorial from the said Freholders and Inhabitants, delivered to Congress in December last, and several Affidavits taken in the said County, were presented to the House, and read.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Post Meridian.

The Committee appointed to prepare and bring in an Answer to the Governour's Message, reported an essay for that purpose; which, being read and agreed to by the House, was ordered to be transcribed.

A Memorial from the Committee of Safety was presented to the House, and is as follows, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met: The Memorial of the Committee of Safety.

"The Committee have, ever since their appointment, applied themselves with the greatest zeal and fidelity to the important trust confided to them, in providing means for the defence of this Province; they were, however, such means only as were thought more immediately requisite for our security against the attempts made by a Naval Armament, and were, besides, necessarily confined within the limits of the funds allotted to them by your honourable House; but they beg leave to represent that, as every day brings with it fresh proofs of the violence of the British Ministry, and of their fixed purpose to subdue the free spirit of America, that has yet given such obstructions to all their schemes of tyranny and despotism—a purpose assisted, too, by an obsequious Parliament which may not speak the genuine sense of the nation, though it has unhappily the direction of its force, it truly becomes us to prepare seriously for the storm gathering over the Colonies, and which, in the uncertainty of its course, may, in a few weeks, fall upon this Province. This being the idea of the Committee, they have come to the following Resolution, claiming the most earnest attention of your honourable House thereto:

"Resolved, That application be made to the honourable the House of Representatives, praying that they will take order for the raising of two thousand Men, to act in the defence of this Province; and this Board will represent it as their opinion, that it will be most for the publick service, that one Battalion of Regular Troops be formed out of that number, and the remainder be a body of Riflemen.

"The Committee beg leave to solicit your attention to another object, also of extensive importance—the Military Association; the general sentiments concerning which, they have, in the recess of Assembly, had an opportunity of collecting. And though such numbers already have, and, we hope, will still engage in it, under its present form, as may prove a considerable addition to our strength; yet, as there are material objections made to it, and, as they understand, are to be laid before your honourable House by divers respectable bodies of men, they submit to you whether it will not be highly expedient and consistent with good policy, immediately to remove every cause of discontent on this head from the minds of the Associators, who, under an apprehension of partial and unequal burdens imposed on them, have nevertheless, had the virtue not to refuse their services to their country, in confidence that your honourable House will reconsider the several provisions and regulations complained of, and give them satisfaction therein.

"By order of the Committee:

"ALEXANDER WILCOX, Chairman.

"In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, February 22, 1776."

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. V.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House, being informed by the Speaker that the Indians now in town request to be supplied with a Horse, a Beaver-Trap, and some other necessaries, Ordered, That Mr. Hillegas and Mr. Parker provide the said Indians with the articles they mention, and such other little matters as the Members think expedient.

The Answer of the House to the Governour's Message being transcribed, according to order, was signed by the Speaker, and follows in these words, viz:

May it please your Honour:

We have taken into our consideration your Message of the 22d instant, respecting the expenses incurred, in obedience to your order for carrying into execution the laws of this Province, in the County of Northumberland, and request your Honour would be pleased to furnish the House with a copy of the orders given on that occasion; and, also, that you will direct a particular account to be laid before us of the expense which has accrued, to enable us to judge of the propriety and amount of the provision expected from us.

Signed by order of the House:

JOHN MORTON, Speaker.

March 1, 1776.

Ordered, That Mr. Rodman and Mr. Hunter wait on the Governour with the foregoing Answer to his Message, and deliver the same.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

Monday, March 4, 1776, P. M.

Upon motion, the House took into consideration the Petition of John Marshall, Threadmaker; and after some debate, Ordered, That Mr. Gray, Mr. Parker, Mr. Pearson, Mr. Swoope, and Mr. Dougherty, be a Committee to view the Machines contrived by the Petitioner for throwing and twisting of Thread, and report their opinion thereof.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

Tuesday, March 5, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

By the Return of the Sheriff of the County of Philadelphia, produced at the table, it appearing that David Rittenhouse, Esq., was, on the 2d instant, elected a Representative in Assembly for the City of Philadelphia; and the said gentleman this day attending the House, he was qualified as a Member, and took his seat accordingly.

Upon motion, Ordered, That this House will, on Friday next, take into consideration the great number of Petitions lately presented from the several back Counties, for an increase of Members to represent the said Counties, respectively, in Assembly.

The Governour, by Mr. Secretary, sent down to the House a copy of his Letter to the Magistrates of Northumberland County, on the 25th of November last, which was read by order, and follows in these words, viz:

"Philadelphia, November 25, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: I have just now received a Message from the Assembly, founded on a letter addressed to them from the County of Northumberland, respecting the Connecticut settlers at Wyoming, requesting me to give orders for a due execution of the laws of this Province in the Counties of Northumberland and Northampton. In consequence thereof, I do most cheerfully order you to use your utmost diligence and activity in putting the laws of this Province in execution throughout the County of Northumberland; and you may depend on the faith of the House, and my concurrence with them, that every proper and necessary expense that may be incurred on the occasion shall be defrayed.

"I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

"JOHN PENN.

"To William Phunket, Esq., and his Associates, Justices of the Peace for the County of Northumberland."

On delivery of the above, Mr. Secretary informed the House his Honour had not yet received a proper account of the expenses attending the late expedition to Wyoming; but would give immediate orders to have such account laid before him, and communicate the same to the House.

Upon motion, the House resumed the consideration of the Memorial from the Committee of Safety, respecting the raising of Troops for the defence of this Province; and after some debate, Ordered, That Mr. Hillegas, Mr. Miles, Mr. Humphreys, and Mr. Thompson, be a Committee to prepare and bring in an estimate of the expense of levying a body of fifteen hundred Men, and victualling and paying them for one year.

A number of Petitions from the Counties of York, Cumberland, Berks, and Bedford, for more Members to represent the said Counties, respectively, in Assembly, was presented to the House, and read.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Petition from the Committee of Officers and Privates belonging to Colonel Richard Thomas's Battalion of Chester County, was presented to the House, and read; setting forth, That the Petitioners, apprehending themselves aggrieved by several of the Regulations of the honourable House for the better government of the Associators of this Province, beg leave to represent that it is their opinion there is a necessity of an amendment to the said Regulations in the following particulars, viz:

First. They imagine it would be more equitable, in itself, and advantageous to the publick, if the Arms and Accoutrements were provided at the expense of the Province, and made Provincial property.

Secondly. They apprehend the present Fines and Taxes upon both Associators and Non-Associators to be considerably too low.

Thirdly. They are of opinion that the limitations, with regard to the age of those who come under the notice of the Regulations, whether as Associators or Non-Associators, ought to be extended; that the Petitioners, confiding in the regard of the honourable House to the welfare and safety of the Province, humbly refer these matters to their serious consideration, and hope for redress in the above particulars, or such other relief as may be thought proper.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Petition from the Inhabitants of the Town of Reading, in the County of Berks, was presented to the House, and read; setting forth, That a number of the Regulars, who were taken Prisoners at Fort St. John's, are confined in the said town; that, having no Barracks, such of the Petitioners, to whom it was the least inconvenient, were obliged to lodge the said Prisoners in their Houses; that, in all probability, from the situation of the said town, the Petitioners will have more inconveniences of the same kind to labour under from the billeting of Continental Troops, as well as Prisoners; that, from the idleness of the said Prisoners' manner of living, they will probably become disorderly, and they may be more easily restrained from mischief by being all confined to one place in the night time; that the Petitioners, therefore, pray the honourable House will take the premises into consideration, and erect Barracks in the said town, capable of containing four or five hundred men.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Post Meridian.

Wednesday, March 6, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Petition from divers Inhabitants of the County of Northumberland was presented to the House and read, setting forth, That many of the Petitioners have taken money from the Province upon loan; and, as a security that such money should be refunded at different times, agreeable to an act of Assembly of the said Province, have mortgaged their landed estates; that, at the time the Petitioners gave such security, they were by no means apprehensive of the troubles which have since arisen on the Continent, but hoped they would have been able to make their payments according to their contracts; that the total stagnation of trade, and, of consequence, no moneys circulating, especially in such an infant County, at present prevents their being able to comply with the terms upon which they have received money out of the Loan-Office; that the time at which the first payment ought to have been made, as well as the time of indulgence allowed by the Trustees since the day of payment, are expired; that, if sale should be made of the estates of such of the Petitioners as have received money in the present situation of affairs, they would not bring one-sixth part of their real value; that, in case a sale should be ordered of such estates as are so mortgaged, a taxation of the County will ensue, which must unavoidably, amidst the variety of other taxes, involve the whole country in ruin; that the Petitioners are willing to do every act in their power, by their industry, to pay off and discharge on their parts what is required of them; and pray the honourable House will grant them such indulgence and relief, as the particularity of their case may appear to deserve.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Representation from John Secord, in behalf of himself and other Inhabitants of Pennsylvania, at or near Wyoming; a Memorial from a number of Inhabitants of the County of Northumberland, respecting the Wyoming disputes, and sundry other papers relative to that subject; were presented to the House, and read.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House resumed the consideration of their vote of yesterday, for levying and taking into pay fifteen hundred men for the defence of this Province; and having spent some time therein,

Resolved, That one thousand of the said Levies be Riflemen, and divided into two Battalions, of five hundred men each.

Resolved, That the remaining five hundred of the said Levies be a Battalion of Musket-men.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Post Meridian.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the Officers requisite for the three Battalions to be raised in this Province, and

Resolved, That the two Rifle Battalions have one Colonel, and that each Battalion consist of six Companies, to be officered with one Lieutenant-Colonel, one Major, six Captains, eighteen Lieutenants, twenty-four Sergeants, six Fifes, six Drums, one Adjutant, two Surgeons, and one Quartermaster; seventy two Rank and File.

Resolved, That the Battalion of Musket-men consist of eight Companies, to be officered with one Colonel, one Lieutenant-Colonel, one Major, eight Captains, eight Lieutenants, eight Ensigns, sixteen Sergeants, sixteen Corporals, eight Fifes, eight Drums, one Adjutant, two Surgeons, and one Quartermaster; fifty-two Privates.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

Thursday, March 7, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Petition from the Committee of Correspondence of the County of Bedford, was presented to the House, and is as follows, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met."

"We think it our duty, as Members of the Committee of Correspondence of the County of Bedford, humbly to represent to the honourable House the peculiar situation of that County; by reason of which, we flatter ourselves that the unusual request which we, in behalf of the Associators within the same, are now going to make, will not appear altogether unreasonable.

"Our County is new, and on the frontiers; its inhabitants few, and scattered amongst the mountains; by reason of which, they are under much greater inconveniences and difficulties in associating and mustering than those of the more interior parts of the country, having frequently twenty or thirty miles to ride for that purpose. This must necessarily take up much of their time, which, on account of their being mostly new settlers, is a peculiar loss and hardship on them, as it is almost their only treasure. Yet, notwithstanding these circumstances, we can, with great truth and pleasure, assure the honourable House that they are not only as unanimous in their patriotick principles, but as constant at their exercise as any in the Province, who have none of their disadvantages to encounter; besides, several of the officers and Companies have been at a pecuniary expense in paying fuglemen, drummers, fifers, and for drums, &c., which they could ill afford; and others of them, for this reason, have not yet been able to procure these articles, nor to be taught the exercise so completely as they could wish. By reason of our remote and scattered situation, it is often impossible for us to receive the necessary information in time to enable us to regulate ourselves according to the modes recommended to the Counties to transact their business in; to this cause it is owing, that we could not comply with the advertisement published some time ago respecting these articles. It will, perhaps, be said, Let them (such as have not already done it) buy and supply themselves with such articles in the same manner the other Counties have done, and then let them deliver in their accounts of the expenses incurred, and they will be paid in the same regular manner. However trifling such expense may appear, yet we are well convinced that it is out of the power of many of them to advance money sufficient for such purpose. By this confession, our County will perhaps appear too insignificant to merit any attention or encouragement. To those altogether unacquainted with the situation of a frontier and new settlement, this would appear to be the case; but when it is remembered that, upon a late demand, we, in a few days, raised and sent off a Company of Riflemen; that the greatest number of our inhabitants are inured to hardship, and that many of them were in the service in the late war, particularly against the Indians; these circumstances will, we believe entitle us to some regard. We, therefore, beg leave to submit to the honourable House, whether it would not be expedient to empower the Committee appointed to settle the accounts of the Associators within the Province, to draw on their Treasurer in favour of your Petitioners, or of such other persons in the County as may be thought most proper, for such a sum of money as will answer in some measure these necessary purposes; the persons to whom it is delivered to be answerable for it; the accounts sent down properly authenticated, in a limited time, and subject to the same control as the other Associators' accounts have been; and if it appear that the persons who shall receive the money have paid it where they ought not, they to be answerable in the first instance. We should not think it necessary that much more than half the sum paid to an equal number of Companies in any other part of the Province should be advanced, as we think that will answer every valuable purpose. We hope our request will appear the more equitable, when (added to the reasons arising from our situation) it is considered that, at a future day, we will have to pay our proportional part of the very large sums paid to most of the other Associators in the Province; and, indeed, our people will urge this point so strongly to us, that it will be impossible to keep up that spirit of unanimity, and that readiness to lend their little aid in time of need, in conjunction with their more powerful compatriots; but they will become languid and indifferent, if they see that no regard is paid to their situation, when they feel that those advantages are denied to them, which it is out of their power to obtain by the same method which those did who were not under their local and other disadvantages. We had twenty Companies returned to us, which are to be formed into two Battalions; the reason this was not sooner done, was, that we delayed it till we should receive the Articles of Association for them to sign, which they are now doing.

"As we have no other view in this representation than a faithful discharge of the trust reposed in us, we pray the honourable House will not construe the only means we could think of to answer the end, into an offence. We shall be ready, to the utmost of our power, to do our parts in carrying into execution any other method that may be proposed, if the prayer of our Petition shall be thought improper; which the honourable House will be pleased to take into their consideration. And their Petitioners, as in duty bound, will pray, &c.

"GEORGE WOODS, Chairman.

"THOMAS SMITH."

Sundry Petitions and Recommendations from the Counties of Lancaster and Northumberland, having been presented at the table in behalf of John Morrow, William Hay, James Crouch, William Mackey, Hawkins Boon, William Caldwell, and Robert King, as persons suitable for Officers in the Rifle Battalions to be raised for the service of this Province; the House took the same into consideration; and, after some time spent therein,

Resolved, That John Morrow, of Lancaster County, be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in one of the Rifle Battalions to be formed for the above service.

Resolved, That the settlement of rank in the Battalions to be raised for the service of this Colony, be referred to future consideration.

— Friday, March 8, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Petition, signed by a great number of the Inhabitants of the City of Philadelphia, was presented to the House, and read, praying a more adequate representation in Assembly. Ordered to lie on the table.

The Order of last Tuesday being read,

The House took into consideration the Petitions before them from the City of Philadelphia, and several of the back Counties, for an increase of Members to represent them in the Assembly of this Province; and, after a debate of considerable length, adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

— Post Meridian.

The House proceeded in the consideration of the subject before them in the morning; and, after further debate thereon,

Resolved, (upon the question,) That four additional Representatives in Assembly be allowed to the City of Philadelphia; two additional Representatives to each of the Counties of Lancaster, York, Cumberland, Berks, and Northampton; and one additional Representative to each of the Counties of Bedford, Northumberland, and Westmoreland.

Ordered, That Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Reed, Mr. Rodman, Mr. Jacobs, Mr. Ross, Mr. Ewing, Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Christ, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Dougherty, Mr. Hunter, and Mr. Thompson, be a Committee to prepare and bring in a Bill for allowing to the City of Philadelphia, and certain Counties of this Province, such additional Members in Assembly as are mentioned in the foregoing Resolve.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

— Saturday, March 9, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment; and resuming the consideration of Officers for the new Levies,

Resolved, That William Rankin, of York County; William Peoples, of Cumberland County; Henry Christ, Jun., of Berks County; Henry Shade, of Northampton County; Richard Brown, of Bedford County; Caspar Weitzell, of Northumberland County; and Joseph Irwin, of Westmoreland County, be, and they are hereby, appointed Captains in the Rifle Battalions to be formed for the service of this Province.

Ordered, That Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Miles, Mr. Grubb, and Mr. Montgomery, be a Committee to prepare and bring in a draft of Instructions for Recruiting Officers.

The House adjourned to Monday next, at four o'clock, P. M.

— Monday, March 11, 1776, P. M.

The Committee appointed to prepare and bring in a Bill to increase the number of Representatives in Assembly for the City of Philadelphia, and the Counties of Lancaster, York, Cumberland, Berks, Northampton, Bedford, Northumberland, and Westmoreland, reported they had essayed a draft for that purpose, which they presented to the Chair; and the same being read the first time, was ordered to lie on the table for a second reading.

Upon motion, the Petition from the Committee of Correspondence for the County of Bedford was again read; and, after some debate,

Resolved, That the Committee for settling the Battalion Accounts draw an order on Michael Hillegas, Esq., for the sum of two hundred Pounds, payable to Barnard Dougherty, Esq., to be applied to the purchase of Drums and Colours for the use of the Association in the said County of Bedford, and to be accounted for with said Committee by the Field-Officers of the said Association.

It being represented to the House by the Speaker that some doubts have been entertained by the Commissioners and Township and Ward Assessors of the several Counties, whether they are to proceed to the execution of the duties enjoined by the Resolves of Assembly of the 25th of November last, respecting their making out lists, and levying Taxes on Non-Associators in this Province,

Resolved, That the Commissioners and Assessors within this Province proceed with all diligence and fidelity in the execution of the respective duties required of them by the above-mentioned Resolves, without waiting for any further notice.

A Petition from the Privates of the First Battalion of Militia in the County of Cumberland, was presented to the House, and follows in these words, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"The Petition of the Privates of the First Battalion of Militia in CUMBERLAND County, most humbly sheweth:

"That your Petitioners, desirous of exerting themselves in defence of American liberty against the tyranny of a cruel and desolating enemy, beg leave to lay before the honourable House some amendments, which they wish to have made in the Articles of Association framed at your last sitting, in order that they may sign them with that freedom which every true patriot and friend to American liberty ought to feel himself possessed of: without which amendments, the liberties of the Privates of the Association appear to be, in a great measure, taken away.

"First. The time of keeping the Associators out on actual service is nowhere limited, either in the Rules or Articles of Association; which, your Petitioners apprehend, puts them in a worse situation than the enlisted Troops. We submit it to the wisdom of the honourable House whether two or three months are not sufficient to keep out any party of Associators at one time, until relieved by others at the call of the Assembly, or Committee of Safety.

"Secondly. The Articles, as they now stand, establish all the officers of the Association during life, or until otherwise removed by resignation, promotion, or broken by the sentence of a General Court of Associators. We would pray the honourable House to reconsider this matter, and see if it is not more agreeable to the rights of freemen and the Constitution of this Province, that all Military Officers, not exceeding the rank of a Colonel of a Battalion, should be voted in by ballot annually, in the same manner as Members of Assembly, Sheriffs, and other civil Officers; the Field-Officers, Standard-bearer, and Adjutant, by the Battalion at large; and the Officers of a Troop or Company by the Troop or Company. Your Petitioners are of opinion that officers voted in in this manner would by no means be liable to disgrace upon the promotion of others in their room, as their going out of office might not be for any bad conduct alleged against them, but in order to serve others equally worthy of notice; for annual election is so essentially necessary to the liberty of freemen, that your Petitioners hope the honourable House will be careful not to deprive their constituents of it.

"Thirdly. Your Petitioners humbly conceive that the Regimental and General Courts of Associators should consist of an equal number of Officers and Court-Associators, (one of the said officers to be President,) as we can see no reason why there should be a superior number of officers in the said Courts; because officers and privates of the Association, being engaged in the same cause, ought to have the same mode of trial, be the offence what it will.

"Fourthly. The thirty-first article of Association enjoins the Associators to be subject to all the Rules and Articles already made by the honourable Continental Congress for the government of the Continental Troops when called by the Assembly, or the Committee of Safety in recess of Assembly, into actual service. Your Petitioners pray that the honourable House would please to amend said article by allowing the Associators to be tried for all offences and crimes, of which they may be guilty, as mentioned in the said Rules and Articles when on actual service, in the same way as is proposed above, viz: by an equal number of their own officers and court-associators; and, where the punishment directed by said rules and articles is to be whipping, and the crime not made felony by the civil law, that the delinquent shall have it in his power to evade such whipping by paying a certain fine—such as the wisdom of the honourable House shall point out, and in such time as shall be thought proper after conviction. This indulgence, your Petitioners apprehend, will not be attended with any bad consequences to the Army, as the Associators are on a different footing from the Continental Troops, and may, through inadvertency or ignorance, be guilty of an offence that would subject them to a punishment which would be a lasting stain to them and their family, more especially if they have been of any repute at home.

“Lastly. Your Petitioners pray the honourable House to consider the inequality of fines respecting Non-Associators; the grievances whereof are so great and many, that it would be giving you too much trouble to enumerate them, as we are well assured they are fully laid before the honourable House in a Petition from the Committee of Privates of the City and Suburbs of Philadelphia, and, perhaps, by other Committees.

“Your Petitioners most humbly pray the honourable House to take these matters into their most serious consideration, and grant the amendments herein proposed, or such redress of the grievances we complain of as to their wisdom shall appear right. And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will pray.

The Committee appointed to prepare and bring in a draft of Instructions for Recruiting Officers, reported an essay for that purpose; which was read by order, and referred to further consideration.

— Tuesday, March 12, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a Letter (dated the 6th instant) from the Committee of Berks County, respecting the Arms directed to be provided for the use of the said County, and some other publick matters; which was read, and ordered to lie on the table.

Upon motion, the Petition from the Privates of the First Battalion of Militia in the County of Cumberland was again read, and referred to the Committee appointed to revise the Rules and Regulations formed by the House for the better government of the Military Association.

The House resumed the consideration of the draft of Instructions for Recruiting Officers; which, being read by paragraphs, and agreed to by the House, was transcribed, and follows in these words, viz:

Instructions for recruiting Riflemen in the service of PENNSYLVANIA.

1st. You are to inlist no man who is not able-bodied, healthy, and active; nor any whose attachment to the rights and liberties of this Province, and of America in general, you have any cause to suspect.

2dly. You are to have great regard to sobriety and moral character in general.

3dly. You are to take the utmost care, as you value your office and the esteem of your country, that you inlist no man who is not provided with a good rifle-gun, perfectly fit for service, and very expert in the use of it.

4thly. You are not to inlist any indented servant, nor, without the leave of his master or mistress, any apprentice.

5thly. You will take notice that the Colonel of the Battalion, or some person to be appointed by him, is to inspect your men, and to reject such as do not answer to your instructions.

6thly. Every man is to be inlisted by his taking and subscribing, before some Justice of the Peace, an oath or affirmation in the following words, to wit: “I, A B, voluntarily inlisted a soldier until the 1st day of January, 1778, unless sooner discharged, in the Troops ordered to be raised by the Assembly of Pennsylvania, and subjecting myself to such rules and articles as are, or shall be, made or directed by the said Assembly for regulating and governing the said Troops, do solemnly — that, in this service, I will truly and faithfully obey the present and any Assembly of this Colony, and, in their recess, any Committee of Safety by them appointed, for the time being, and, in pursuance of their direction and command, such officers as shall be placed in authority over them; that I will, to the utmost of my power, defend the rights and liberties of this Province, and of America in general; and will oppose and resist any force or enemies that shall act or be employed against them.” So help me —.

7thly. You are to use all diligence in completing your company, and report to your Colonel.

8thly. You shall be allowed ten shillings per week for the subsistence of every recruit till they arrive at their stations, and ten shillings for every man you inlist who shall be approved on inspection, besides such subsistence money and your pay.

9thly. You are to furnish each of the subalterns of your company with a copy of these Instructions, who are to exert themselves in recruiting.

10thly. That each soldier, when inlisted, and having taken the foregoing qualification, shall receive a month's pay advance.

11thly. That the men be inlisted to serve till the 1st day of January, 1778; to find themselves arms and clothing; and to be subject to be discharged at any time, upon the advance of a month's pay to each man, over and above the sum that may be due to him.

Signed by order of the House:

JOHN MORTON, Speaker.

To . . . . . Esq., Captain of the . . . . Company of Riflemen, in the Province of Pennsylvania.

A Petition from divers Inhabitants of the County of Cumberland, was presented to the House, and read, setting forth that the Petitioners, last year, mortgaged their lands in the General Land Office of this Province, with a prospect of repaying the money they borrowed, agreeable to the terms stipulated; but that the distressing situation of publick affairs (which prevents selling the produce of their plantations, their stock, or other property, whereby they expected to raise money) has put it out of their power to comply with their contracts within the times limited by law; that the Petitioners, therefore, pray the House will suspend the execution of the law till a revival of trade shall enable them to dispose of their effects, when they will most cheerfully, without any compulsion, perform their respective agreements.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Petition from divers Inhabitants in and near the Townships of Whitehall and Salisbury, in the County of Northampton, was presented to the House and read, setting forth that the Petitioners conceive the articles for regulating the Associators in this Province are very unequal, as those who do not join with them are put to no expense in providing themselves with arms and accoutrements, and have only the trifling sum of fifty shillings to pay yearly; that, for this reason, many of the inhabitants still neglect to sign the Articles of Association, by which means the publick cause suffers. That the Petitioners therefore humbly pray the honourable House to take the premises into consideration, and make such further Rules and Regulations as shall render the publick defence less burdensome to individuals.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

— Post Meridian.

The House resumed the consideration of the appointment of Officers for the new Levies in the Rifle service.

And Resolved, That Andrew Long, of Bucks County, Peter Grubb, Jun., of Lancaster County, and Lewis Farmer, of the City of Philadelphia, Esquires, be, and they are hereby appointed Captains in the said service.

"SIR: A company of soldiers being on their march to the southward, General Lee, under whose orders they are, has applied to this Board to settle the rates they are to pay for their accommodation on the road. The Board dismissed the application, as not being competent to the business; but as such cases will frequently happen in the course of the war, and the unsettled prices be a fruitful source of contention between landlords and soldiers, they submit to your honourable House whether it is not an object worthy of their attention to determine what rates are reasonable to be paid by all the American Troops on their march through this Province. I am, sir, your very humble servant.

"By order of the Committee:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"The Petition of the Committee of Privates of the Military Association for the City and Liberties of PHILADELPHIA, humbly sheweth:

"That your Petitioners, observing that this honourable House had, in the introduction to the Articles of Association, expressed an intention of altering such articles, rules, and resolutions, respecting the Military Association, as should be found inconvenient; and being desirous of obtaining such alterations as would give general satisfaction throughout the Province, and to save this honourable House the trouble of repeated applications for amendments, opened a correspondence with the country Battalions, to know what objections they had to the Resolutions of this honourable House; designing, if possible, to express the sense of the whole Province in their Petition. But as these objections did not come to hand in time, your Petitioners request this honourable House to take the amendments proposed in the enclosed papers into their serious consideration, and grant redress in such manner as shall appear most consonant to their wisdom and justice. They particularly recommend the article to your Honours respecting the provision which ought to be made for the support of the families of such Associators during their absence on actual service, whose maintenance depends on their labour; as no man who is able, by his industry, to support his wife and children, could ever consent to have them treated by the Overseers of the Poor as the law directs; we therefore pray, that such a fund be fixed for their supply as may be more worthy of men who are risking their all in defence of their country.

"And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will pray, &c.

"Signed by order of the Committee of Privates:

"WILLIAM ADCOCK, Chairman."

Twentieth. The Standard-Bearer of each Battalion to rank as eldest Lieutenant of the Battalion.

Twenty-first. All national distinctions in dress or name to be avoided, it being proper that we should now be united in this General Association for defending our liberties and properties under the sole denomination of Americans.

Twenty-third. For the better order and government of Companies which may be raised after the completion of the several Battalions already formed in the City and Counties, such Companies are not to be admitted as independent, but are to be annexed to the most convenient Battalion, until a sufficient number of Companies are raised to form a new Battalion; and no number of Associators are to be considered as a Company, unless they consist of at least forty privates; but it is recommended that, till that number be completed, the Associators join the most convenient Company, and exercise and do duty with such Company.

Twenty-fourth. That all commissions to officers of the several Battalions of Associators in this Province, be issued and signed by the Speaker of the Assembly for the time being. That all Battalions now formed, as well as those hereafter to be formed in the City of Philadelphia, be desired to make returns of their officers, with their respective ranks, to the Committee for the said City; and the Battalions in the several Counties are desired to make returns, in like manner, to their respective Committees; which Committees are desired to certify such returns, with the respective rank of each Battalion in their Counties, to the Assembly of this Province, or, in the recess of the House, to the Speaker thereof, that commissions may be issued for every officer, as above directed.

Twenty-fifth. Every Associator (except Riflemen) is required to furnish himself with a good and sufficient firelock fit for actual service, a bayonet fitted thereto, steel-ramrod, worm, priming-wire and brush, a cartridge-box that will contain twenty-three rounds of cartridges, twelve flints, a knapsack, a sufficient powder-horn, and a pouch at the bottom of his cartridge-box, or a strong bag that will hold four pounds of ball.

Twenty-sixth. The Commissioners and Assessors of the several Counties within this Province shall deliver the firelocks, bayonets, cartridge-boxes, and knapsacks directed to be provided by the Resolutions of the late House of Assembly, to the Commanding Officers of the several Battalions in their respective Counties, in due proportions, according to the number of men in each Battalion, for the use of such Associators in their Battalions as are unable to supply themselves, taking receipts for the same, which they shall immediately transmit to the Committee of Safety, having first entered the accounts of the same in their respective Minute Books; and the said commanding officers shall be accountable for the delivery of such arms and accoutrements, unless lost in actual service, whenever they shall be called upon by the Assembly or Committee of Safety.

Twenty-seventh. That the publick arms delivered to Associators be not subject to any distress for rent or execution for debt; that any Associator who shall sell such arms, or by any means defraud the publick thereof, or endeavour so to do, shall forfeit six pounds, and be held up to publick infamy and disgrace; and any person who shall detain, buy, or exchange such arms, knowing them to be publick property, shall forfeit ten pounds, and be held up in like manner.

Twenty-eighth. Every Associator is required to attend constantly, with his arms and accoutrements in good order, on the last Monday in the month of February; the last two Mondays in the month of March; the last three Mondays in the month of April; the four Mondays in the month of May; the first two Mondays in the month of June; the last Monday in the month of July; the first three Mondays in the month of August; the last three Mondays in the month of September; and the second Monday in the month of October, at the places appointed by their commanding officers, to be trained and exercised in Companies or Battalions, as the officers shall direct.

And it is also recommended to such Associators as are not sufficiently expert in the exercise, to meet as frequently as they conveniently can, at other times, to perfect themselves in the same. It is also directed, that the commanding officers respectively shall give due notice to the Associators of the places and hours of meeting, either in Companies or Battalion; and if the Associators are prevented from meeting on any of the days herein appointed, by the inclemency of the weather, they are to meet on the next fair day.

Twenty-ninth. No Company or Battalion shall meet at a Tavern on any of the days of exercise; nor shall march to any Tavern before they are discharged.

Thirtieth. The Associators, on days of exercise, may be detained under arms, on duty in the field, any time not exceeding six hours, provided they are not kept above three hours under arms at any one time, without allowing them a proper time to refresh themselves.

Thirty-first. The Sergeant or Clerk of any Company, to be for this purpose appointed by the Captain, Lieutenants, and Ensigns of the Company, is required, at the end of one hour after the time appointed for the meeting of the Company or Battalion, to call over the Muster-Roll of the Company, noting those who are absent, and that day to make return, in writing, to the Captain of such absentees; and all persons so absent at the time of calling over the roll, are to be liable to the fines hereafter mentioned in the articles for non-attendance.

Thirty-second. The Captain of every Company, as soon as he is supplied by the publick with powder and lead for the purpose, is to take especial care that twenty-three rounds of cartridges are properly made up, and suited to the bore of each firelock respectively belonging to his Company, and shall keep all the cartridges that are so made up in some dry and convenient place, with the name of the private affixed for whose firelock they are fitted, ready to be delivered out when occasion requires.

Thirty-third. Adjutants, Drummers, and Fifers, shall receive the following pay for every day of service they attend their respective Battalions or Companies by order of the commanding officer: An Adjutant, seven shillings and six pence; a Drummer, three shillings; a Fifer, three shillings; the Drum-Major and Fife-Major of every Battalion shall receive each a sum not exceeding fifteen shillings per week, and be continued in pay as long as the Colonels of the several Battalions shall think necessary; and it is required, that such Drum-Majors and Fife-Majors when not in service on days of exercise, shall be diligently employed in instructing a proper number of persons for Drummers and Fifers of the several Battalions. That, instead of an Adjutant on pay, there be a Sergeant-Major to each Battalion of the City of Philadelphia, who shall receive a sum not exceeding eight dollars per month, and be continued in pay as long as the Colonels of the several Battalions shall think necessary, provided the same be not extended beyond the second Monday in October next.

Thirty-fourth. All officers and soldiers of the Association, when employed on military watch and ward, or when called into actual service, in case of an invasion or insurrection, or imminent danger of either, by this House of Assembly, or, in their recess, by the Committee of Safety, shall, while on such watch, or in such service, be entitled to and receive the same pay that the officers and soldiers of the Continental Troops receive.

Thirty-fifth. If any officer or soldier, not labouring under any infirmity incapacitating him to serve, shall, when so called into actual service, refuse to appear and march with his arms, ammunition, and accoutrements, or (if a soldier) shall refuse to provide a suitable person well clothed, armed, and accoutred, to march in his stead, such person to be approved by the commanding officer of the Battalion; or if any officer or soldier, having entered on such service, shall depart without leave of such commanding officer, he shall be held up to the publick as a coward and betrayer of his country; provided always, that no Associator be detained in actual service longer than two months at one time, without his free consent.

Thirty-sixth. If any Associator, so called into actual service, shall leave a family not of ability to maintain themselves in his absence, the Overseers of the Poor, with the concurrence of one Justice of the Peace of the City or County where such Associator did reside, shall immediately make provision by way of out-pension for the maintenance of such family; and a true and proper account being kept thereof shall be returned to the Assembly, in order that the same may be made a Provincial expense, and paid accordingly.

Thirty-seventh. When any of the Associators shall be so called into actual service, the Commissioners of the respective Counties, or any one of them, shall immediately provide such carriages as may be necessary for their accommodation, at the expense of the publick.

Thirty-eighth. As there may happen occasions wherein it may be necessary to call out a part of the Associators to actual, though temporary, service, and not the whole body, and it would be inconvenient and burdensome, if, upon every alarm, where the assistance of part only may be wanted, the whole should come together, or a much greater number than the occasion required,—it is recommended, that orders may issue from the Assembly, or, in their recess, the Committee of Safety, to the Colonels, either to march their whole Battalion, or to send to an appointed rendezvous one or more Companies, as they may be wanted; and, in the latter case, such Company to be formed by drafts out of the Companies, and to be commanded by an officer out of each Company, on the tour of duty, each Company serving on such calls, in its turn, and for such proportion of time as shall make the burden nearly equal; and if the Associators who are called forth, are not all provided with good arms, it is recommended to all those who have such, and are not called out, to lend the same for that occasion, at the risk of the publick.

Thirty-ninth. The Field-Officers of every Battalion shall appoint some person in each Company of their respective Battalions, in whom they can confide, and the officers in every Troop of Horse and Company of Artillery, shall, in like manner, choose some person in their Troop or Company respectively, whose names shall be returned by the said officers respectively to the County Treasurers for the Provincial taxes in their several Counties; which persons so appointed shall, from time to time, collect all fines incurred by the Associators for non-attendance, and shall severally pay the same to the said County Treasurers respectively, first deducting a commission of five per cent. for their trouble, which said County Treasurers, respectively, shall pay the same to Michael Hillegas, Esquire, Treasurer, after deducting a commission of one per cent. for their trouble; and then the said moneys shall be appropriated in the following manner: 1st. To the support and relief of such poor Associators as, being called out to actual service, shall be maimed and wounded therein, so as to be in any respect unable to support themselves or families. 2d. For the support and relief of the widows and children of such poor Associators as, being called into actual service, shall be killed therein. The surplus of said moneys to be applied as this or any future Assembly shall direct. And the said Michael Hillegas shall be allowed for his trouble herein, five shillings for every one hundred pounds so received and paid by him. It is directed, that the said Collectors shall account with the officers who severally appointed them, as often as such officers shall require them so to do; and the said officers shall, in due time, transmit the accounts of the said Collectors to the respective County Treasurers for the Provincial taxes.

Lastly. This House having drawn up the following Articles of Agreement for all the Associators in the Province, they do earnestly recommend the same to be adopted, signed, and agreed to, by all the said Associators, in order that one general system may prevail in Pennsylvania.

Articles of Association in PENNSYLVANIA.

We, the Officers and Soldiers engaged in the present Association for the defence of American liberty, being fully sensible that the strength and security of any body of men acting together, consists in just regularity, due subordination, and exact obedience to command, without which no individual can have that confidence in the support of those about him that is so necessary to give firmness and resolution to the whole, do voluntarily and freely, after consideration of the following Articles, adopt the same as the Rules and Regulations by which we agree and resolve to be governed in all our Military concerns and operations, until the same, or any of them, shall be changed or dissolved by the Assembly of this Province, or a happy reconciliation shall take place between Great Britain and the Colonies:

1. If any officer make use of any profane oath or execration when on duty, he shall forfeit and pay for each and every such offence, the sum of five shillings; and if a non-commissioned officer, or soldier, be thus guilty of cursing or swearing, he shall forfeit and pay for each and every such offence, the sum of one shilling.

4. Any officer or soldier who shall strike his superior officer, or draw, or offer to draw, or shall lift up any weapon, or offer any violence against him, being in the execution of his office, shall, upon a conviction before a General or Regimental Court of Associators, be dismissed, and shall be deemed thereby disgraced as unworthy the company of freemen.

5. Any commanding or other officer who shall strike any Associator when on duty, shall, upon conviction before a General Court of Associators, suffer such punishment as the said Court shall inflict.

6. Any officer or soldier who shall make use of insolent, provoking, or indecent language, while on duty, shall suffer such censure or fine as shall be inflicted by a General or Regimental Court of Associators, according to the nature of the offence.

7. If any officer or soldier shall think himself injured by his Colonel, or the commanding officer of the Battalion, and shall, upon due application made to him, be refused redress, he may complain to the General or Commander-in-Chief of the Pennsylvania Associators, or to the Colonel of any other Battalion, who shall summon a General Court of Associators, that justice may be done.

8. If any inferior officer or soldier shall think himself injured by his Captain, or other superior officer, in the Battalion, Troop, or Company to which he belongs, he may complain to the commanding officer of the Battalion, who shall summon a Regimental Court of Associators for the doing justice according to the nature of the case.

9. No officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier, shall fail of repairing with his arms and accoutrements, on any of the days appointed by the Assembly for exercising, to the place of parade, or other rendezvous appointed by the commanding officer, if not prevented by sickness, or some other evident necessity, of which the commanding officer of said Battalion shall judge; or shall go from the place of parade or rendezvous without leave from the said commanding officer, before he shall be regularly dismissed, on penalty of three shillings and six pence.

13. Every non-commissioned officer or soldier who shall be convicted at a Regimental Court of Associators of having carelessly lost, wilfully spoiled or wasted, any ammunition, arms, or accoutrements, belonging to this Province, shall be dismissed his Battalion, Troop, or Company, as an unworthy member, and be prosecuted as the law directs.

14. All disorders and neglects which officers or soldiers may be guilty of, to the prejudice of the good order and military discipline of the Association of this Colony, are to be taken cognizance of by a General or Regimental Court of Associators, according to the nature and degree of the offence; and such officers or soldiers shall be fined or censured, at the discretion of the Court.

15. That, on the first meeting of every Company after subscribing these Articles of Association, and from thence forward, on the first meeting of every Company, after the last Monday in February, annually, there shall be chosen by the non-commissioned officers and privates out of each Company in the respective Battalions, two persons who are entitled to vote for Members of Assembly, whose duty and office shall be, for the year following, to sit and join with the officers in Courts of Association, which persons so chosen shall be styled Court-Associators.

of Associators shall think proper, upon being convicted of having transgressed any of these regulations.

21. All Associators called as witnesses in any case before a Court of Associators, who shall refuse to attend and give evidence, shall be censured or fined, at the discretion of the Court.

22. No officer or soldier being charged with transgressing these rules, shall be suffered to do duty in the Battalion, Company, or Troop to which he belongs, until he has had his trial by a Court of Associators, and every person so charged shall be tried as soon as a Court of Associators can be conveniently assembled.

28. Upon the determination of any point by a Regimental Court of Associators, if the officer or soldier concerned on either side thinks himself still aggrieved, he may appeal to a General Court of Associators; but if, upon a second hearing, the appeal appears groundless and vexatious, the person so appealing shall be censured, at the discretion of the said General Court.

If any Assessor shall neglect or refuse to perform the duty aforesaid, the Commissioners of the respective Counties, or any two of them, are hereby required and enjoined to fine him in any sum not exceeding ten Pounds, unless such Assessor's refusal proceeds from conscientious motives; and such fine shall be levied and recovered in the same manner as is directed by the laws of this Province for levying and recovering fines imposed on Assessors refusing or neglecting to perform the duties therein required of them, to be paid into the hands of the respective County Treasurers, to be by them delivered to the same person, and applied to the same use, as the other moneys directed to be levied by the Resolves of this House in their present sitting.

3. The Commissioners of the respective Counties, or any two of them, are hereby required and enjoined to appoint some proper person to make out the list aforesaid, in the place of the Assessor so refusing or neglecting; which person, so appointed, shall make out and return such list to the Commissioners on or before the 1st day of May next ensuing.

9. If any Apprentice is willing to associate, and his Master or Mistress will not permit him so to do, or detains him from the parade on any of the days of exercise herein appointed, such Master or Mistress shall be liable to the payment of three Shillings and six Pence for each time he or she shall detain his or her said Apprentice; and if any Apprentice of suitable age shall neglect or refuse to appear on any of the said days of exercise, not being detained by his said Master or Mistress, such Apprentice, if of estate, shall, by his Guardian, pay such penalty.

10. If any Commissioner shall neglect or refuse to perform any of the duties required of him by these resolutions, such Commissioner shall forfeit and pay the sum of ten Pounds for every such offence, unless such refusal proceeds from conscientious motives; such fine to be recovered, levied, and applied in the same manner, by the same persons, and for the same uses, as the fines arising from the delinquency of the Assessors; and in such case, the Prothonotaries of the several Counties of this Province, respectively, or their immediate Deputies, are hereby enjoined, by and with the concurrence of any two Magistrates of said County, to appoint some suitable and proper person in the place and stead of such Commissioner so refusing or neglecting as aforesaid; which person, so appointed, shall have the same power and authority, and perform the several duties hereby required of the said Commissioner; or, on failure thereof, shall forfeit and pay the sum of ten Pounds, to be applied as aforesaid; and the said Prothonotary and Justices shall proceed to appoint another, and so as often as it shall become necessary.

11. If any person charged by the Commissioners as a Non-Associator, shall, at the day of appeal, produce to the Commissioners a certificate from the Commanding Officer of any Battalion, Troop of Horse, or Company of Artillery, that he has become an Associator in such Battalion, Troop, or Company, the Commissioners, or any two of them, shall make an allowance in favour of such person of three Shillings and six Pence for each of the days of exercise appointed by this House, after such person became an Associator, on which he attended his Battalion, Troop, or Company, or has been fined for non-attendance.

12. If any person charged by the Commissioners as a Non-Associator, shall die before the day of appeal, or if, before that day, an accommodation shall be made between Great Britain and the Colonies of this Continent, and, in consequence thereof, the Military Association in this Province shall be dissolved; in either of those cases, the Commissioners, or any two of them, shall make an abatement in the assessment charged as aforesaid, of three Shillings and six Pence for each of the days of exercise aforesaid, after the death of such Non-Associator, or the dissolution of the Association.

13. If any Non-Associator, or the Parent, Guardian, Master, or Mistress of any Non-Associator, between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years, or any other Non-Associator, shall think him or herself aggrieved by the assessment aforesaid, he or she may appeal to the Commissioners of the County wherein he or she resides, who, or any two of them, shall meet together on the 10th day of October next ensuing, and so, from day to day, as long as may be necessary, and at such place or places as the Commissioners, or any two of them, shall appoint; of which days and places of meeting they shall cause the Collectors to give due notice to the inhabitants, and then and there the said Commissioners, or any two of them, shall hear such appeals as may be made to them, and may discharge such assessment, or lower the same, as to them, on consideration of inability of person or estate only, shall appear just and equitable.

14. The said Commissioners of the respective Counties, or any two of them, within ten days after hearing and determining the appeals made to them, shall rectify and adjust the lists returned to them as aforesaid, and the assessments thereon, and deliver to the Treasurers of the respective Counties a true account of the sums total which every Collector shall be charged with, in pursuance of these Resolves; and shall cause their Clerks to make out and deliver fair duplicates thereof to the respective Collectors of the Townships, Boroughs, Wards, and Districts within their respective Counties, who shall collect the said sums, keeping exact and separate accounts of the sums so charged on Non-Associators, and shall pay the same into the hands of the respective County Treasurers, who shall pay the same into the hands of Michael Hillegas, Esquire, to be applied to the same purposes as the fines and penalties collected from the Association are limited and directed. All and every person and persons who are required or enjoined by these Resolutions, or any of them, to discharge or perform any of the offices or duties herein before mentioned, are hereby further earnestly and solemnly required and enjoined, with all diligence and fidelity, strenuously to exert themselves in discharging and performing such offices and duties, and every part thereof, as they regard the freedom, security, and happiness of their country.

Whereas a number of spirited Germans, and other foreigners, not entitled to the privileges of freemen of this Province, have cheerfully associated in its defence, and shown a readiness to expose their lives therefor, if necessary:

Resolved, therefore, That every such person producing a certificate, under the hand and seal of the commanding officer of any Battalion in the Military Association of this Province, signifying that such person has signed the Articles of the Association, and served pursuant thereto, and, in case of an invasion or alarm, has, upon his own account, gone forth into actual service, such person shall be, and is hereby, recommended to the special notice and encouragement of this and any future Assembly, in order to his being put in the same condition, and entitled to the same rights and privileges, as natural-born subjects within this Province now are.

Upon motion, Resolved, That the Committee of Safety procure a sufficient number of complete copies of the "Rules and Regulations for the better government of the Military Association in Pennsylvania," "The Articles of the said Association," and the "Resolutions directing the mode of levying Taxes on Non-Associators in Pennsylvania," as amended at this sitting, to be immediately printed in the English and German languages, and transmitted to the Commanding Officers of the several Battalions, and to the Commissioners of the several Counties in this Province.

Article 54. All crimes not capital, and all disorders and neglects which officers and soldiers may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, though not mentioned in the articles of war, are to be taken cognizance of by a General or Regimental Court-Martial, according to the nature and degree of the offence, and to be punished at their discretion.

The Committee appointed to inquire who first introduced in this Province the Spinning Machine claimed by Christopher Tully and Joseph Hague, reported, "That, upon examination, they find the said machine was made and used in this Province by both the persons above named nearly at the same time, but unknown to each other; and that the Committee think they are therefore alike deserving of reward from the publick, the machine being really useful, as it despatches business much faster than the common spinning-wheel."

The House adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Saturday, April 6, 1776.

The House resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee appointed to essay a draft of Resolutions directing the mode of disarming disaffected persons, and procuring the Arms of Non-Associators in this Province; which being gone through, and after some alterations agreed to, was transcribed by order, and is as follows, viz:

Whereas the honourable the Continental Congress did lately recommend to the several Assemblies, Conventions, Councils, and Committees of Safety of the several United Colonies, to cause all persons to be disarmed within their respective Colonies who are notoriously disaffected to the cause of America, or who have not associated, and refuse to associate, for the defence of these Colonies, by Arms, against the hostile attempts of the British Fleets and Armies; and such Arms, having been duly appraised, to be applied to the arming the Continental Troops raised in this Colony, the Troops raised in its own special defence, and the residue for the use of the Associators; the said appraisement to be paid by the Congress, Assemblies, Conventions, and Committees of Safety, respectively, as the said Arms should be appropriated:

And by a further Resolve it was declared, that the appraisement of the Arms of disaffected persons, so taken as above, should not be paid unless for such Arms as were fit for the use of the Troops, or could be conveniently made so; but that all defective Arms should be safely kept by the Assemblies, Conventions, Councils, and Committees of Safety, to be delivered to the owners when the Congress should direct:

The House, taking into consideration the said recommendations, and the very great difficulty of procuring Arms to put into the hands of Continental and Provincial Troops, and the Associators within this Province, for the defence of the liberties of America,

Therefore Resolved, That it be earnestly recommended by this House to all well-affected Non-Associators who are possessed of good Arms, to deliver them to the Collectors hereafter directed to be chosen, as they regard the freedom, safety, and prosperity of their country.

Resolved, That the Freeholders and Freemen of every Township, Borough, Ward, and District, within this Province, qualified to vote for Members of Assembly, shall respectively meet together at some convenient place within their several Townships, Boroughs, Wards, and Districts, on the 25th day of this month, and then and there choose, by ballot, three persons for Collectors of Arms; which persons, so chosen, shall meet the persons chosen by the next two adjoining Townships, Boroughs, Wards, or Districts; and the said persons, or a majority of them, shall collect and receive all such Arms of Non-Associators as are fit for use, or can be conveniently made so, within their respective Townships, Boroughs, Wards, and Districts, and shall appraise, or cause the said Arms to be appraised, according to the true and real value, which they shall pay to the owners, and then shall deposite the said Arms in some dry, safe, and convenient place, in the several Townships, Boroughs, Wards, and Districts, subject to the orders of Assembly, or, in their recess, of the Committee of Safety.

Resolved, That the said persons so chosen, or a majority of them, shall disarm all disaffected persons before described, and shall appraise, or cause the Arms taken from them to be appraised as aforesaid; and shall pay to the owners the value of such Arms as are fit for use, or that can be conveniently made so, depositing all the Arms in the manner before-mentioned.

Resolved, That if any Townships, Boroughs, Wards, or Districts, shall neglect or refuse to choose such persons as aforesaid; or if the persons so chosen shall neglect or refuse to perform the duties hereby required of them—in such case, the Committee of Inspection and Observation, in each County respectively, shall immediately proceed to carry the foregoing recommendation of Congress effectually into execution.

Resolved, That the persons so chosen shall immediately make returns of all Arms fit for use, or that can conveniently be made so, which they shall take, collect, or receive, with the value thereof, to the Assembly, or in their recess to the Committee of Safety, who may draw orders for the amount thereof, in favour of such persons, on Michael Hillegas, Esq., Treasurer, who is hereby required to pay the same out of the moneys directed to be emitted by this House.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Post Meridian.

Upon motion, Resolved, That an Agent be appointed to provide necessary Clothing and Accoutrements for the Troops ordered to be raised for the service of this Province, the expense to be deducted out of the pay of such Troops; that such Agent be allowed two and a half per cent. for his trouble, and that he make no other profit or emolument whatever, by contracts with the tradesmen he may employ, or in any other manner whatsoever.

Resolved, That Matthias Slough, of Lancaster, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed Agent for the purpose aforesaid.

Resolved, That the said Agent supply every Private, in pay of this Province, with a good Blanket, at the expense of the Province.

Upon motion, Ordered, That Mr. Reed be added to the Committee appointed to revise and correct the Minutes of this House, previous to the publication thereof.

The House, taking into consideration that the publick service will require the issuing a further sum of Money in Bills of Credit, before the time of their next meeting,

Resolved, That the sum of eighty-five thousand Pounds be forthwith struck in Bills of Credit, for answering the present exigencies of this Province.

Ordered, That Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Hillegas, Mr. Reed, and Mr. Rittenhouse, be a Committee to prepare and bring in a draft of Resolves for striking the said eighty-five thousand Pounds in Bills of Credit.

The Committee for Battalion expenses reporting to the House that Captain Josiah Hart, in pursuance of the order to the Sergeant-at-Arms, had attended the Committee, and paid all the expenses incurred by his late misconduct,

Ordered, That the said Hart be dismissed, without appearing at the bar of the House.

Upon motion, Ordered, That the several Petitions from a number of the inhabitants of the City of Philadelphia, relative to the setting Negro Slaves at liberty, be referred to further consideration at the next meeting of the House.

Present: Alexander Wilcocks, Chairman, George Clymer, Samuel Howell, Owen Biddle, John Cadwallader, Joseph Parker, Thomas Wharton, John Nixon.

Upon application of Captain N. Falconer, for two Swivels on board one of the Guard-Boats, by order of the Board Captain Hazlewood was directed to deliver them for the use of the Congress.

In consequence of the intelligence received that the Roe-buck Man-of-War is aground upon Brandywine, Captain Reed was ordered with the Provincial Ship Montgomery to proceed down the river and bay, and join the Commodore, who is already on his way with the Armed Boats, in order to take or destroy her. Captain Reed was also ordered to make up his complement of Seamen out of the Floating Battery, and to take a detachment of Captain Proctor's Artillery.

In Committee of Safety, April 30, 1776.

Present: John Nixon, Chairman, John Cadwallader, Daniel Roberdeau, Owen Biddle, George Gray, James Mease, George Clymer, Samuel Howell, Joseph Parker, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Samuel Morris, Jun.

A Letter was this day written to the Commodore, acquainting him that this Board had directed Mr. James Mease and Mr. Samuel Morris to inquire into the cause of the Armed Boats returning; and if those gentlemen should think proper to order them down again, the Commodore is to proceed back until he is fully satisfied that the Roe-buck has got off.

In Committee of Safety, May 1, 1776.

Present: John Cadwallader, Chairman, James Mease, Samuel Miles, Owen Biddle, George Clymer, Joseph Parker, Samuel Howell, Alexander Wilcocks, Samuel Morris, Junior.

Resolved, That Mr. John Reed be appointed Clerk to the Commissary of Stores and Barrackmaster at Fort-Island, and that he be allowed five Pounds per month for his services, to commence at the time of his being first employed at the Fort.

Upon application of Colonel Samuel Miles, for Medicines for the use of three Battalions of Pennsylvania Land Forces, by order of the Board Dr. Rush and Dr. Duffield were required to furnish the Surgeons of the said Battalions with the necessary Drugs and Medicines.

The Sisterhood of Bethlehem having presented this Board with a quantity of Linen rags for the benefit of such as may be wounded in the service of their country,

Resolved, That this instance of their humanity be thankfully acknowledged.

Resolved, That Mr. Howell and Mr. Mease be a Committee to inquire if two of the Armed Boats can be fitted out in order to go down to the Bay of Delaware, to be there stationed for the protection of the Commerce of this Province; and if they find that it is practicable to fit or alter two for that purpose, that they employ proper persons to carry the same into execution.

By Order of the Board the following Notice was ordered to be published in the Papers:

"All persons who are now Prisoners on parole in the different parts of this Province are strictly enjoined not to leave the District that has been appointed for their residence without the written permission of this Board; and all Prisoners who come into this City by the license of the Congress are directed, upon their arrival, immediately to communicate such license to this Committee; and if any Prisoners shall be found trespassing against this order, their persons will be immediately seized and imprisoned."

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO MESSRS. CHARLES BEATTY AND BAKER JOHNSON.

[No. 100.]

Annapolis, April 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Sixty pounds currency were sent by Mr. Ford, the 23d January, by order of our Board, to Mr. Thomas Johnson, at Fredericktown, and, in his absence, to you, to be expended in the purchase of gun-locks for the use of the Province; but as we have not heard anything from him or you upon the subject, and are in very great want of that article, we desire you will inform us how many were bought, and where they are; or if there have not been any purchased, whether there is a probability of applying the money to that use in your County.

We are, &c.

To Messrs. Charles Beatty and Baker Johnson.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO TALBOT COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 101.]

Annapolis, April 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of an information we received that there were one or two barrels of bullets, and a quantity of gun-flints belonging to this Province, in the possession of Mr. Leeds, we wrote to you the 14th February, requesting that you would make inquiry into that matter, and if you found it true, that you would take them under your care, and send them to the Council of Safety by the first safe conveyance; but as we have not received any answer to our letter, we presume it must have miscarried, and therefore we send you this, and beg that you will immediately examine into the truth of the above information.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Talbot County.

HENRY FISHER TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Lewes, April 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: On Monday evening last a man-of-war and her tender came within the pitch of our cape, and anchored, as you have been informed by last express. The pilot-boat stationed near Lewes-Creek's mouth, did not discover the signal at the Light-House, nor see the ship that evening, as it was near dark before she came to the pitch of the cape; and when the alarm-guns were fired the people on board the boats, although they heard them very plainly, imagined, as they said, that we were cleaning the guns with a proof charge.

Tuesday morning the man-of-war's boat took my pilot-boat, the wind being light and northerly, and ebb tide. But before they boarded her the hands in the pilot-boat left her, and rowed on shore at the Broad-Kill in their skiff. The same day the man-of-war, with her tenders and boats, took a small sloop, then lying in the road, belonging to Egg-Harbour, in ballast, the people of whom left her first in their boat. They also took two other small sloops from Philadelphia—one to Sinepuxent, the other to North-Carolina; and on Wednesday sent them on shore in their own small boats. Stripped and scuttled the aforesaid three sloops, and set them adrift. By these people we learned that it was Captain Hammond, of the King's ship the Roe-buck, of forty-five guns.

They made another tender of the pilot-boat; sent her out, took a New-England sloop bound to Philadelphia for corn; and that night, lying too near the cape, the hand at the helm falling asleep let the pilot-boat run on the beach, when the Third Lieutenant, their pilot, and two sailors, left her, went on the cape, and were taken on Thursday by our men. We stripped the pilot-boat of everything of value, and found ten muskets and five pistols, which had been thrown over the side where the boat lies. On Friday and Saturday they took nothing. On Friday the sloop Hornet appeared near Indian-River, and sent on shore and got a pilot, but we have not seen her since; and the same evening the brig Captain Barry came down under Cape-

May, and on Sunday morning went out. The ship and tender put out to sea also after the brig, but returned on Sunday evening into the road. We have been day and night on guard, both on the cape and at Lewes and Pilot-town.

The several companies of Militia from all parts of the country who live within twenty, or five-and-twenty miles of Lewes, came in as soon as they could be expected, seemed all unanimous and hearty in the cause, determined to defend their country. There have been near one thousand men in at times the last week, so that we were obliged to discharge many of them, not having occasion for half the number. We prevailed on those who lived at a distance to leave some of the best of their arms, (for numbers of them want fire-locks,) which are not to be purchased.

On Saturday last Captain Pope's Company, of the Delaware Battalion of regular soldiers, came down from Kent, all well equipped. How long the ship intends to stay we cannot learn. If anything material should happen I shall endeavour to let you know it.

I am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

HENRY FISHER.

To the Committee of Safety of Philadelphia.

P. S. From what I can learn from the prisoners that we have got, you may daily expect several large ships; therefore, I hope that you may be upon your guard, as, from what I can learn, they are to come up your river. The Lieutenant and other prisoners will be sent up to you tomorrow by land, or else it shall cost me a fall.

HENRY FISHER.

Lewestown, April 2, 1776—four o'clock.

To the Gentlemen that keep the Stage-horses:

You are required to let the bearer (Mr. Samuel Edwards) have them; as he is one of the stationed pilots, therefore can relate matters more particular than I can write.

HENRY FISHER.

CEDAR-CREEK, April 2, 1776—six o'clock.

THOMAS EVANS.

DOVER, Tuesday, ten minutes after nine o'clock, arrived; despatched at ten o'clock, April 2.

BATTILL.

CANTVILLE BRIDGE, Tuesday, fifty-two minutes after one; despatched ten minutes after two.

MATTHEW DELANY.

WILMINGTON, Tuesday, thirty-eight minutes after seven o'clock, arrived express, and despatched fifty-five minutes after seven o'clock, April 2, 1776.

THOMAS KEAN.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, April 3, 1776.

Resolved, That the Letter received from Henry Fisher, of Lewes, be immediately sent to the Delegates of this Province, to be laid before the Congress; and the said Delegates be requested to represent it as the sense of the Committee, that if two or more fast-sailing Vessels, of small draft of water, were properly equipped, they might protect the trade of this and the neighbouring Colonies in the Bay of Delaware, now infested with Tenders and small Armed Vessels of the enemy, and secure the supplies of Military Stores expected from abroad, and to apply to the Congress to take speedy measures for that purpose; and also to suggest the propriety of ordering back to this port the several outward-bound Vessels now lying on the Rivers, and employing the Seamen in this service until the trade of the Bay is more secure.

Extract from the Minutes:

WILLIAM GOVETT, Secretary.

VALENTINE STANDLEY TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

April 1, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: Extremely sorry am I to think, that so near a relation as Mr. Richard Standley is to me, should have so far sunk himself beneath the dignity of a man, as to chose rather to throw up his commission than fight in this so glorious a cause. I now humbly beg leave (for the honour of the family, as well as that of myself) to retrieve his spotted and blemished character, by offering myself as a candidate for that or any other office you may think me capable of. Should I meet with your approbation, my highest ambition will be to honour my station.

VALENTINE STANDLEY.

To the Honourable Continental Congress.

JOHN ADAMS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, April 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The bearer of this letter (Francis Dana, Esq., of Cambridge) is a gentleman of family, fortune, and education, returned in the last packet from London, where he has been about a year. He has ever maintained an excellent character in his country, and a warm friendship for the American cause. He returns to share with his friends in their dangers and their triumphs. I have done myself the honour to give him this letter for the sake of introducing him to your acquaintance, as he has frequently expressed to me a desire to embrace the first opportunity of paying his respects to a character so highly esteemed, and so justly admired throughout all Europe as well as America. Mr. Dana will satisfy you that we have no reason to expect peace from Britain.

I congratulate you, sir, as well as all the friends of mankind, on the reduction of Boston—an event which appeared to me of so great and decisive importance, that the next morning after the arrival of the news, I did myself the honour to move for the thanks of Congress to your Excellency, and that a medal of gold should be struck in commemoration of it. Congress have been pleased to appoint me, with two other gentlemen, to prepare a device. I should be very happy to have your Excellency's sentiments concerning a proper one.

I have the honour to be, with very great respect, sir, your most obedient and affectionate servant,

JOHN ADAMS.

To General Washington.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL CHARLES LEE.

Philadelphia, April 1, 1776.

SIR: The Congress having appointed Mr. Dohicky Arundel Captain of an Artillery Company in the Continental service, and directed him to repair to the Southern Department, and there to put himself under your command, I have it in charge from that body to inform you that you are directed to set on foot the raising a Company of Artillery. This you will endeavour to accomplish as early as possible, being sensible the service calls for such a company, that we may be the better enabled to defend ourselves and annoy our enemies.

The Convention, or Committee of Safety of Virginia, to whom I write by this conveyance, are requested to appoint the other officers of the said company.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Major-General Lee.

I have paid Captain Arundel sixty dollars, which you will please to have stopped out of his pay.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO VIRGINIA CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, April 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Dohicky Arundel, being appointed a Captain of an Artillery Company in the Continental service, and directed to repair to the Southern Department, to put himself under the command of General Lee, who is directed to set on foot the raising such a company, I have it in charge from Congress to inform you, that it is recommended to you to appoint the other officers in the said Artillery Company.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Convention or Committee of Safety of Virginia.

SAMUEL TUCKER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Trenton, April 2, 1776.

SIR: Since writing last, I find we shall have considerable difficulty in getting entertainment at Mount-Holly for the officers and soldiers now prisoners in this town. Two of the officers, viz: Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Shuttlesworth, have been there, and complain of the quarters, and are very desirous that they may be removed to Burlington, where all may be well provided for; which, as our Committee of Safety meets on Monday next at New-Brunswick, I shall lay before them, and hope Congress will have no objection to their being quartered in Burlington, as I find the New-Yorkers have taken every place in Boundbrook, which I passed through last Saturday, and many have moved from Philadelphia to Mount-Holly, as I am informed.

Enclosed you have a return of the First and Second Battalions, which Mr. Lowrey informed me you wanted. As the several officers received their commissions, the date of passing muster, &c., in the First Battalion was transacted, in part, by Mr. Fisher, the Vice-President of our Convention, who has not yet informed me so minutely as I could have wished.

Our Committee of Safety have directed me to send you the enclosed list of wearing apparel, said to be lost or stolen on the road from Chambly, laid before the Committee by order of Major Stopford, as improper for them to determine upon.

I have the pleasure to inform you that I saw part of our Militia pass Brunswick Ferry on Saturday morning last, on their way to New-York.

I have the honour to be, your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL TUCKER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

NEW-BRUNSWICK (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Observation for the South Ward of New-Brunswick, County of Middlesex, New-Jersey, the 1st day of April, 1776:

Whereas William Steele, an inhabitant of this Ward, having heretofore been cited to appear before this Committee in consequence of a charge exhibited against him, that he had not subscribed the Provincial Association, and had, in the most publick manner, set himself against the measures taken for the defence and security of the just rights and privileges of America, did refuse to appear, and did, moreover, by letter, insult this Committee in the most haughty and insolent terms, for which they were under the necessity of ordering him arrested and confined; and whereas the said William Steele, having, in the most solemn manner, by word and writing, engaged and obligated himself to use all means, by a quiet, peaceable, and orderly behaviour, to convince his country and this Committee of his better intentions towards the cause of publick freedom, hath, notwithstanding, disregarded his engagements, violated his obligations, and persisted, by misrepresentations, artifice, and treachery, to discourage and dispirit his neighbours from taking an active and cordial part in behalf of their suffering, oppressed, and bleeding country, and to speak in opprobrious terms of this Committee, and to show himself, in his general conduct, disaffected and opposed to the liberties of his country;—this Committee, therefore, in conscientious discharge of their duty, and the trust reposed in them by their constituents, do publish and hold up to the world as an unworthy member of the community, and an inveterate, obstinate, incorrigible enemy to his country, the said William Steele; and do hereby express their belief and expectation, that all persons in whose hearts the sentiments of justice, honour, virtue, and patriotism, have any place and influence, will discountenance, avoid, condemn, and have no connection or intercourse whatever with the said William Steele; to the end that he may feel the sad effects of rising up against the rights of human nature, and that others who may, perhaps, have it in their power to do more prejudice to their country, may see and fear, and avoid the rock on which he has split; for, weak and unimportant as he is, this Committee are not at all apprehensive he will ever be able to effect the mischief to which his heart would prompt him. And this Committee do resolve and declare, for the satisfaction of their countrymen, that if what they have done is found insufficient to reclaim the said William Steele, they will then proceed to take such further steps in discharge of their duty as the circumstances of the case may require.

Signed by order of the Committee:

ABRAHAM TERHUNE, Clerk.
J. WETHERILL, Chairman.

LORD STIRLING TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, April 1, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I am honoured with your letter of the 24th. Brigadier-General Heath arrived here on Saturday last with the five regiments that marched from camp with him. The Riflemen came in a day or two before. The Connecticut Militia, detached by Governour Trumbull, are also chiefly arrived. These, with what are constantly coming in from the westward, will put us on such a footing as to numbers, that I think we have little to fear from General Howe, should he attempt anything in this quarter. Staten-Island is still open to their invasion, and I should be glad we were so possessed of it that we could prevent their making any lodgment in it. For this purpose I will endeavour to get General Heath's leave to go over there on Wednesday next, to set the Militia of New-Jersey at work on it. I shall only add, that I could wish General Howe would come here in preference to any other spot in America, as I believe it would now be of least detriment to the American cause; besides, then I should have the honour of serving under your immediate command.

I am, very sincerely, your devoted, humble servant,

STIRLING.

To General Washington.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of the City of NEW-YORK.

The humble Petition of ABNER BRIGGS sheweth:

Whereas your Petitioner, some time past, did apply to this Congress for leave to export a cargo of provisions to the Island of Nantucket, for the use of the inhabitants thereof, which was accordingly granted him on conditions that he bring a certificate of the performance of the said conditions: your Petitioner, therefore, agreeable thereto, now waits upon this honourable body with the said certificate; and humbly prays for leave to purchase another cargo of provisions, as the inhabitants of Nantucket are greatly distressed. From the Selectmen of which said place, he hath a permit, specifying the quantity and articles that are most necessary, and certifying that the same are wanted absolutely for the use and consumption of the said inhabitants of Nantucket. Your Petitioner, since his arrival, understands that pork and beef are prohibited for exportation, and prays he may have liberty to purchase an equivalent in any other sort of provisions or produce.

April, 1776.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress of NEW-YORK:

GENTLEMEN: Whereas your Petitioner, being very desirous of serving his country against the arbitrary and lawless attempts of a designing Ministry to banish freedom from this once happy and free land, and erect the standard of despotism in its stead,—and as your Petitioner has ever been distinguished as a hearty friend and well-wisher to the American cause, and is now actually in the service as a Sergeant, in Captain Johnson's Company, of Colonel McDougall's Regiment, and a native of this city, of parents ever distinguished as friends to the privileges of this city, and to the American cause in general—(when your Petitioner entered the service, it was in expectation of being promoted; but finding that impracticable without the assistance of this honourable Congress)—he has thought proper, with the advice of his friends, to make this humble application; praying that your Honours may be pleased to appoint him to such vacant commission that may happen, as your Honours, in wisdom, may think fit.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, shall every pray, &c.

ISAAC RYCKMAN, JUN.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

COLONEL HASBROUCK TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: I herewithin enclose you a return made to me respecting the choice of an Ensign to Captain Jacob Concklin's Company, where they have, by a plurality of voices, elected John Crowel Ensign to the aforesaid company, in lieu and stead of one Roger Barton, who was first elected and commissioned, but since has acted inimical to the good cause we are contending for with our mother country, by inlisting in the Ministerial service, and is now confined in jail. I therefore pray that you will favour the aforesaid Crowel with a commission as Ensign, as soon as possible; and am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JOHN HASBROUCK.

CHARLES SMITH TO CAPTAIN VANDEPUT.

Bridewell, Monday, April 1, 1776.

SIR: I take this opportunity of doing myself the honour of acquainting you with my disagreeable situation, having been a close prisoner ever since I have been in New-York. I must do the New-England people justice, under whose care I have been, that they behaved extremely well. Since their departure, the Yorkers took possession of the barracks, kept me much closer confined, and on Saturday afternoon gave me three days' allowance that was due, of pork and bread only, and conducted me safe to Bridewell. Since, I understand, my allowance is to be five pence sterling per day—Bridewell allowance. I am beholden to the goodness of the jailer for my bed and blanket, or else I believe I might perish.

I shall not, sir, trouble you with a detail of all my misfortunes, as they are in no wise pleasant, but take the liberty to subscribe myself, your obedient servant,

CHARLES SMITH.

To Captain Vandeput, of his Majesty's Ship Asia.

P. S. King Sears, on my first arrival, called me rascal, and pushed me on to jail with his sword. As to the sailors, I am sorry to inform you they are gone to Philadelphia to go on board the privateer.

GENERAL HEATH TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

New-York, April 1, 1776.

SIR: A sloop is arrived here from Albany, with a number of women and children and baggage, taken at St. John's, and sent here by General Schuyler, in their way to New-Brunswick. The Captain of the sloop is fearful of going to New-Brunswick, as, in his way back, he may be stopped and detained by the men-of-war. It will be proper, therefore, to obtain from Captain Vandeput a free pass for the sloop to and from Brunswick, which, no doubt, he will readily grant, as it obtains every convenience for those prisoners, who must otherwise undergo a fatiguing march by land; and I must beg the favour of your Committee of Safety to take the management of this matter.

I am, sir, with respect, your most humble servant,

W. HEATH, Brigadier-General.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

COLONEL HAZEN TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Head-Quarters, Montreal, April 1, 1776.

SIR: General Wooster left this place for Quebeck, the 27th last month. He has honoured me, though unequal to the task, with the command of this District. I shall, therefore, to the utmost of my abilities, do for the best; and I conceive it my duty, as well as inclination, to inform you of every material circumstance as they occur to me, as well as to give you a particular account, from time to time, of this important District; and perhaps it may not be thought amiss if I add my own ideas of the whole country, and affairs in general. You are not unacquainted with the friendly disposition of the Canadians when General Montgomery first penetrated into the country. The ready assistance which they gave on all occasions, by men, carriages, or provisions, was most remarkable, even when he was before Quebeck; many Parishes offered their service in the reduction of that fortress, which was at that time thought unnecessary. But his most unfortunate fate, added to other incidents, has caused such a change in their disposition, that we no longer look upon them as friends, but, on the contrary, waiting an opportunity to join our enemies. That no observations of my own may remain obscure, I beg leave to observe, that I think the clergy (or guardians of the souls, and conductors of the bodies) of these enthusiasts have been neglected, perhaps in some instances ill used. Be that as it will, they are unanimous, though privately, against our cause; and I have too much reason to fear many of them, with other people of some consequence, have carried on a correspondence the whole winter with General Carleton in Quebeck, and are now plotting our destruction. The peasantry in general have been ill used; they have in some instances been dragooned, with the point of the bayonet, to furnish wood for the garrison, at a lower rate than the current price; carriages, and many other articles furnished, for which certificates were given, not legible and without signature—the one half of consequence rejected by the Quartermaster-General. It is true, they have been promised payment, from time to time; yet they look upon such promises as vague, their labour and property lost, and the Congress and the United Colonies as bankrupt; and (what is a more material point) they have not seen sufficient force in the country to protect them. These matters furnish very strong arguments to be made use of by our enemies.

To take a view of our little Army here, I have pretty good information that our strength in camp before Quebeck did not, on the 18th of March, much exceed that of the day after General Montgomery's fall. General Arnold had at that time about four hundred men in a small-pox Hospital. Neither order nor subordination prevails, and of course shortly no soldiers. On the 15th of this month, those who wintered in the country are free, and, in my opinion, neither art, craft, nor money, will prevail on any of them to reinlist to serve in Canada. Colonel Livingston's Regiment, consisting of about two hundred, will be free on the same day; very few, if any of them, will re-engage. Of my intended regiment I have about two hundred and fifty. The want of money obliges me to stop; where I shall remain until matters take a change, if ever, in our favour, as not a man more will now engage, and those which I have inlisted will go to the right about in case the Canadians in general join against us; at least such is my opinion. With respect to the better sort of people, both French and English, seven-eighths are Tories, who would wish to see our throats cut, and perhaps would readily assist in doing it.

The taking of Quebeck is altogether casual. The keeping of the country, according to the present appearance of affairs, is totally against us. No preparation has, is, or can be made to guard the river, for a very good reason—no money or men of skill to do it; the whole country left without any other kind of law than that of the arbitrary and despotick power of the sword in the hands of the several commanding officers—too frequently abused in all cases of this nature.

You may remember, sir, in a conversation with you, at Albany, I urged the necessity of sending immediately to Canada, able Generals, a respectable Army, a Committee of Congress, a suitable supply of hard cash, a printer, &c. Indeed, I had before represented those measures in person to Congress—at least to the Committee of Congress—and we have since been flattered, from time to time, with one or all those essentials.

The Savages hereabouts are cool; they keep aloof from us; we are to expect little or no friendship from them, and, indeed, little or no precaution has been taken for that purpose. It is expected by some that numbers will come from the interior country, and fall on our frontiers, early in the spring.

Enclosed I transmit you extracts from some private letters, which accidentally came to hand from the camp before Quebeck. I believe the contents, as the news has come to town several ways. The Canadians taking up arms so early against us is of the most important consequence. We have brought about ourselves, by mismanagement, what Governour Carleton himself could never effect.

Having endeavoured to lay before you a true state of facts as they occur to me, if I have done my duty thereby, I shall be happy; if I have exceeded, I beg you will impute it to pure zeal in my country's cause, and the ardent desire I have, on all occasions, to contribute all in my power for the interests of the United Colonies. And should you be of opinion that any of my remarks are worthy the attention of Congress, you will please to communicate them.

I am, sir, with true respect, your most obedient servant,
MOSES HAZEN.

To Major-General Philip Schuyler.

Head-Quarters, before Quebeck, March 26, 1776.

The contents of your last favour I have not time to answer by this conveyance. This is only to give you some idea of some late interesting transactions.

The Priests in two or three Parishes below Point-Levi having been brought to Head-Quarters some weeks since, on account of their diabolical conduct, and were released on solemn promises of amendment, have, in conjunction with a party sent from town, imbodyed several hundred Canadians, and, it is said, have two twelve-pounders. Against this body, our men from the Point (two hundred in all) marched yesterday morning, engaged the enemy, took thirty prisoners; how many killed cannot learn. We had one man wounded. This was not the enemy's main body. This account is, as I am informed, from Major Dubois, who commanded on the occasion. Aaron Platt and Philadelphia Hughes were in the party. We impatiently wait the issue of this affair, as much depends on it. One hundred and fifty Jerseymen and Pennsylvanians are to march for Point-Levi this day. I have only time to add that I am, &c.,

GERSHOM MOTT.

To Captain Goforth, commanding at Three-Rivers.

Camp before Quebeck, March 26, 1776.

I have just time to let you know that I and my family arrived at Head-Quarters on Saturday, 23d instant, in good health. I am informed that five hundred Canadians, and a few Regulars from the garrison, have assembled together, twelve leagues below Quebeck, with two twelve-pounders, and are getting more formidable every day; and have intercepted some provisions of ours. We have sent a party of men after them, to take their standard and bring it to Head-Quarters. For my part I dread the consequence, as our own party does not amount to one hundred men. God (and he only) can determine our fate. I think we have sent one gondola and some armed batteaus in order to intercept an armed schooner from Quebeck; and they are cutting more out of the ice—I mean the Regulars.

Excuse haste. I know your prudence will know how to handle this dangerous news.

JOHN BROGDEN.

To Captain Goforth, commanding at Three-Rivers.

P. S. Nothing shall escape my notice to you of all that passes; and if you think me worth your notice, let me have your opinion. Thanks be to God, this moment, as I was concluding this letter, news came in that Major Dubois had sent a letter to General Arnold that our men met with the advanced party of the enemy, killed and wounded a good many, and took thirty prisoners, and routed the rest, and are advancing to the main body. A party of one hundred and fifty men is gone to reinforce our party. We expect further news very soon. If we carry our point, I think Quebeck will soon be our own.

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER OF CAPTAIN GOFORTH.

Reports are various with respect to Indians. Some say five thousand are coming down to cut off Montreal; others say they are to pass Montreal, come to Three-Rivers, and hasten to Quebeck to the relief of their father, (Carleton.) who is now confined within the walls, and must be relieved, or they will lose all their trade. Whether reality or fiction, time will soon discover. Should have written to the General before now about some flagrant abuses that have been committed by the private soldiers on their march to Quebeck, had I not expected to have had the honour to receive him at this place before now. A Priest's house has been entered with great violence, and his watch plundered from him. At another house they run in debt about twenty shillings, (English.) and, because the man wanted to be paid, run him through the neck with a bayonet. Women and children have been terrified, and forced, with the point of the bayonet, to furnish horses for private soldiers without any prospect of pay. I have not had it in my power to discover the offenders, but have issued a proclamation. Captain Stout, of the Jersey Forces, left with me a silver tablespoon, which he thinks was taken by one of his men from some inhabitants of Montreal. Please to advertise, that the owners, sending the marks, may have it again.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 10, 1776, and referred to the Committee of the Whole.]

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, April 1, 1776.

SIR: This letter will be delivered you by Jonathan Eddy, Esq., the gentleman from Nova-Scotia, who I mentioned to you in mine of the 27th ultimo. He seemed desirous of waiting on the honourable Congress, in order to lay before them the state of publick affairs and situation of the inhabitants of that Province; and as it might be in his power to communicate many things personally, which could not be so well done by letter, I encouraged him in his design, and have advanced him fifty dollars to defray his expenses. The Acadian accompanies him; and as they seem to be solid, judicious men, I beg leave to recommend them both to the notice of Congress.

And am, most respectfully, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, April 1, 1776.

SIR: An express arrived here this morning with a letter from Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island, of which the enclosed is a copy. In consequence of this important intelligence, I immediately despatched an express after General Sullivan, who is on his march to Norwich with six regiments, and ordered him to file off to Providence, if he should be so desired by Governour Cooke, to whom I have written on the subject.

General Greene was to have marched this morning with five more regiments, by way of Providence. I have ordered him to hasten his march for that place, and hope to collect a force there sufficient to prevent the enemy from effecting their purpose.

Whether this movement be only a feint, to draw our attention from their principal object, or not, is at present impossible to determine. I momentarily expect further intelligence from Governour Cooke. If the alarm should be well-grounded, I shall hasten to Providence, and make the necessary dispositions for their reception. I beg you to assure the honourable Congress I shall exert myself to the utmost to frustrate the designs of the enemy.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

Providence, March 31, 1776.—Five o'clock, P. M.

SIR: I am to inform your Excellency that I have this moment an express from Newport, informing me that a ship-of-war hath arrived in the harbour of Newport, and that twenty-seven ships, undoubtedly having the Ministerial Troops on board, are within Seconet Point. Upon this most alarming occasion, when we have not more than four hundred soldiers upon Rhode-Island, and not above seven or eight hundred more in the whole Colony, (besides the Militia, not more than half armed,) I must use the most pressing instances with your Excellency, to forward sufficient succors to the Colony with all possible despatch. I am about issuing the necessary orders for calling the whole Militia together, and taking other proper measures.

I am your Excellency's most obedient servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, Cambridge.

Providence, March 31, 1776.—Five o'clock, P. M.

SIR: I have just received an express from Colonel Belcher, of the Regiment of Militia on Rhode-Island, that one ship-of-war hath got into the harbour of Newport, and that twenty-seven more, undoubtedly having the Ministerial Troops on board, are within Seconet Point, within a few hours sail of Newport. As they are undoubtedly destined for this Colony, I must urge the necessity of your altering your route, and marching into this Colony to oppose the enemy. The absolute necessity of this step will justify you.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To the Commanding Officer of the four Regiments of the Continental Troops, on their march to New-York.

will give the marching orders to the Colonels commanding the divisions.

The Field-Officers of Regiments and Captains of Companies will be answerable for any damage done to the Barracks, upon their men's removing out; therefore it behooves them to see no wanton destruction is committed, as they will be charged with a sum sufficient to pay for repairing the mischief done.

The remainder of the Regiment of Artillery, (except the Company that is to remain in Boston.) with such pieces of artillery and stores as Colonel Knox shall think necessary, are to march with the above Brigade. The Quartermaster-General's Assistant to pay particular attention to the providing the teams for the Regiments, and the Artillery above-mentioned. The commanding Officers of these five Regiments may each of them have a warrant for five hundred Pounds, upon application at Head-Quarters, and they are to credit the Pay Abstract, for the month of February, for that sum.

All the Ammunition, and other articles which have been delivered to the Regiments of Militia, out of the Continental Stores, are to be carefully returned, or the value will be deducted out of the Pay Abstract. The Assistant Quartermaster-General and Commissary of Stores are to take care that this order be fulfilled.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, April 1, 1776.

(Parole, Chester.)

(Countersign, Ohio.)

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOSEPH REED.

Cambridge, April 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 15th ultimo contained a very unfavourable account of the Carolinas; but I am glad to find, by the subsequent one, that the prospect brightens, and that Mr. Martin's first attempt has met with its deserved success. The old proverb, of "the first blow being half the battle," cannot better apply than in these instances; the spirits of the vanquished being depressed in proportion as the victors get elated. I am glad to find my camp equipage in such forwardness. I shall expect to meet it, and I hope you, at New-York, for which place I am preparing to set out on Thursday or Friday next.

The accounts brought by Mr. Temple, of the favourable disposition in the Ministry to accommodate matters, does not correspond with their speeches in Parliament. How, then, does he account for their inconsistency? If the Commissioners do not come over with full and ample powers to treat with Congress, I sincerely wish they may never put their feet on American ground, as it must be self-evident, in the other case, that they will come over with insidious intentions to distract, divide, and create as much confusion as possible. How, then, can any man (let his passion for reconciliation be ever so strong) be so blinded and misled as to embrace a measure evidently designed for his destruction? No man does, no man can wish the restoration of peace more fervently than I do; but I hope, whenever made, it will be upon such terms as will reflect honour upon the councils and wisdom of America. With you, I think a change in the American representation necessary. Frequent appeals to the people can be attended with no bad, but may have very salutary effects. My countrymen, I know, from their form of Government and steady attachment heretofore to royalty, will come reluctantly into the idea of independence; but time and persecution bring many wonderful things to pass; and, by private letters which I have lately received from Virginia, I find "Common Sense" is working a powerful change there in the minds of many men.

The four thousand men destined for Boston on the 5th, (if the Ministerialists had attempted our works on Dorchester-Heights, or the lines at Roxbury.) were to have been headed by General Putnam. But he would have had pretty easy work of it, as his motions were to have been regulated by signals, and those signals by appearances. He was not to have made the attempt unless the town had been drained, or very considerably weakened in its force.

I am, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Cambridge, April 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed you have a copy of a letter I received from Governour Cooke, to the contents of which I refer you.

General Greene will march with his Brigade, this day, for Providence; and if I find that the enemy are at Rhode-Island, I will soon join him. Governour Cooke will forward this to you, and will inform you whether this alarm is well-founded or not. If it is, you must repair to Providence with the troops under your command. If it is not, you will proceed on your march to New-York.

I am, sir, yours, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General Sullivan.

ADDRESS OF THE SELECTMEN OF THE TOWN OF BOSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The Selectmen of Boston, in behalf of themselves and fellow-citizens, with all grateful respect, congratulate your Excellency on the success of your military operations in the recovery of this town from an enemy, collected from the once respected Britons, who, in this instance, are characterized by malice and fraud, rapine and plunder, in every trace left behind them.

Happy are we, that this acquisition has been made with so little effusion of human blood, which, next to the Divine favour, permit us to ascribe to your Excellency's wisdom, evidenced in every part of the long besiegement.

If it be possible to enhance the noble feelings of that person who, from the most affluent enjoyments, could throw himself into the hardships of a camp to save his country, uncertain of success, it is then possible this victory will heighten your Excellency's happiness, when you consider you have not only saved a large, elegant, and once populous city, from total destruction, but relieved the few wretched inhabitants from all the horrors of a besieged town, from the insults and abuses of a disgraced and chagrined army, and restored many inhabitants to their quiet habitations, who had fled for safety to the bosom of their country.

May your Excellency live to see the just rights of America settled on a firm basis, which felicity we sincerely wish you; and, at a later period, may that felicity be changed into happiness eternal.

JOHN SCOLLAY,
TIMOTHY NEWELL,
THOMAS MARSHALL,
SAMUEL AUSTIN,
OLIVER WENDELL,
JOHN PITTS,

Selectmen of Boston.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., General of the United Forces in America.

HIS EXCELLENCY'S ANSWER.

GENTLEMEN: Your congratulations on the success of the American arms, gives me the greatest pleasure.

I most sincerely rejoice with you on your being once more in the quiet possession of your former habitations; and (what greatly adds to my happiness) that this desirable event has been effected with so little effusion of human blood.

I am exceedingly obliged by the good opinion you are pleased to entertain of my conduct. Your virtuous efforts in the cause of freedom, and the unparalleled fortitude with which you have sustained the greatest of all human calamities, justly entitle you to the grateful remembrance of your American brethren; and I heartily pray that the hand of tyranny may never more disturb your repose; and that every blessing of a kind Providence may give happiness and prosperity to the Town of Boston.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Selectmen and Citizens of Boston.

NARRATIVE OF CAPTAIN DANIEL LUNT.

On the 25th of February last, on my homeward bound passage from Point-à-Petre, on Grand Terre, about two leagues distant from Cape-Ann, I fell in with and was taken by the Lively sloop-of-war, and was carried into Boston; the next day I was put on board the Renown, — Banks, commander. As we came on board, Captain Banks ordered us, with what bundles of clothes, bedding, &c., we had with us, on the quarter-deck; then called for and ordered the Second Lieutenant and Master-at-Arms to search our beds, overhaul all our bundles of clothes, to see if there was any money amongst them; then turning to us, said, I will search you myself, and that well, too, you scoundrels. Whilst they were opening and searching our bundles, agreeable to Captain Banks's directions they began their searches upon us, under his immediate inspection, by stripping off our clothes, and critically searching every place in the linings, and left no place unsearched where a farthing might be concealed, and continued the whole time breathing out slaughter and death upon us, for no crime, or supposed crime, unless our being born in America can be esteemed such. After getting through with this branch of his inhuman and unnatural procedure, and robbing me of fourteen johannes, and Captain Ephraim Little of about one hundred more, he called for and delivered us up to the Boatswain, with an express injunction to take us to the main deck, and see to it that we were kept constantly at hard labour; adding, if we made the least difficulty about complying with this his command, the Boatswain must inform him, and he would order us immediately to be flogged. His commands in this matter were strictly complied with. We (I mean all the Masters of American vessels who have of late unfortunately fallen into their hands) were constantly kept at the hardest and most ignominious services on board, and were from day to day loaded with curses and reproaches from the principal officers; and that whilst there was constantly a ready compliance with his unrighteous and inhuman commands, and as though it were not a sufficient punishment for having been born in America, and not found in arms against our country, to be reduced from comfortable circumstances, our families robbed of all means of subsistence, and we pillaged of the last farthing which might serve to supply our present necessary expenses, or replace our clothing, of which we were in a great measure robbed. We are commanded and constantly insulted, without reply, by men far inferior to those formerly under our command, having the breath of hell continually flaming about our ears, and this unequal to vent the malignity of their souls, informing us our torments were to be perpetual, by assuring us we should never again set our feet on American ground. Thus they continued tormenting us, till by these devices, and being constantly kept on short allowance, several of our people judged themselves excusable in yielding to their solicitations, by entering on board their ships. We who refused were sent on board an East-Indian, with an assurance of being sent to that country, and there kept at hard service during the remainder of our lives. Being worn out by continued fatigue and constant reproaches, I grew sick of a life not worth enjoying. I resolved to attempt an escape at all hazards, and in the night, between the 20th and 21st of March last, finding the watch on deck asleep, I cut away a boat from alongside, and got ashore on Point-Shirley; and am influenced to publish this narrative, not only that the truth might appear, but at the earnest desire, and in consequence of an agreement of a number of American ship-masters, who still labour under these distressing circumstances.

DANIEL LUNT.

Newburyport, April 1, 1776.

N. B. In consequence of an agreement with my brethren whilst under this more than Egyptian bondage, whoever of us should be fortunate enough to make his escape, was to proceed immediately to Head-Quarters, and give General Washington an account of the matter; but by the many hardships I endured whilst under the control of these deserters from the infernal pit, I was so far reduced as to be by no means able to comply with this part of our agreement; and since I have got home, I have been for the most part confined to my house, and not able to write, which may apologize for my neglecting this publication so long. Let not the friends of those now in their hands fear more severity from this publication falling into the hands of our enemies; greater severity is impossible. Our friends in their hands will find a sure asylum in death, which they will at any one day meet with pleasure. Will not God avenge our righteous cause?

P. S. In justice to Captain Bishop, commander of the Lively, I would inform the publick that I was treated with kindness and humanity all the time I was with him.

In Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, }
Newburyport, April 19, 1776. }

Voted, That the several Printers on the Continent be, and hereby are, desired to publish the foregoing Narrative of Captain Daniel Lunt. And we do hereby certify, that the said Captain Lunt was born and brought up among us, and is esteemed a man of truth, and we think full credit may be paid to the said Narrative.

By order of the Committee:

JONATHAN TITCOMB, Chairman.

GEORGE MASON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Virginia, Gunston Hall, April 2, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We have just received the welcome news of your having, with so much address and success, dislodged the Ministerial Troops, and taken possession of the town of Boston. I congratulate you most heartily upon this glorious and important event—an event which will render General Washington's name immortal in the annals of America, endear his memory to the latest posterity, and entitle him to those thanks which Heaven appointed as the reward of publick virtue.

It is the common opinion here that we shall have a visit from General Howe in some of the Middle or Southern Colonies; but it does not seem well-founded. I am very unable to judge of military affairs; but it appears to me that if General Howe acts the part of a wise man and an experienced officer, he will not venture a sickly, worn-out, disgusted, and disgraced Army, in a country where he must meet immediate opposition, and where any misfortune might produce a mutiny or general desertion. I think it much more probable that he will retire to Halifax, give his troops a little time, by ease and refreshment, to recover their spirits, and be in readiness, as soon as the season permits, to relieve Quebeck; keeping some ships-of-war cruising off Boston harbour, to protect and direct the transports which may arrive. New-York, or any of the Northern United Provinces are too near Cambridge; for, if he could not maintain the advantageous and strongly fortified post of Boston, what reasonable hope has he of gaining and maintaining a new one, in the face of a superior Army?

You will perhaps smile at these speculative and idle suggestions upon a subject which will probably be reduced to a certainty, one way or other, long before this reaches your hands; but when I am conversing with you, the many agreeable hours we have spent together recur upon my mind. I fancy myself under your hospitable roof at Mount Vernon, and lay aside reserve. May God grant us a return of those halcyon days, when every man may sit down at his ease under the shade of his own vine and his own fig-tree, and enjoy the sweets of domestic life! Or, if this is too much, may he be pleased to inspire us with spirit and resolution to bear our present and future sufferings becoming men determined to transmit to our posterity, unimpaired, the blessings we have received from our ancestors.

Colonel Caswell's victory in North-Carolina, and the military spirit which it has raised, will be an obstacle to any attempts in that quarter. Maryland and Virginia are at present rather unprepared, but their strength is daily increasing. The late levies here have been made with surprising rapidity, and the seven new regiments are already in a manner complete, except as to arms, in which they are very deficient; but arms are coming in, in small quantities, from different parts of the country, and a very considerable manufactory is established at Fredericksburgh. Large ventures have been lately made for military stores; for which purpose we are now loading a ship for Europe, with tobacco, at Alexandria. Her cargo is all on float, and I hope to have her under sailing in a few days. Notwithstanding the natural plenty of provisions in this Colony, I am very apprehensive of a great scarcity of beef and pork among our troops this summer, occasioned by the people's not expecting a market, until the slaughter season was past. I find it extremely difficult to lay in a stock for about three hundred men, in the Marine department of this river.

Ill health, and a certain listlessness inseparable from it, have prevented my writing to you so often as I would otherwise have done; but I trust to your friendship to excuse it. The same cause disabled me from attending the Committee of Safety this winter, and induced me to entreat the Convention to leave me out of it. I continue to correspond constantly with that Board, and I hope am no less usefully employed—thinking it, in such times as these are, every man's duty to contribute his mite to the publick service. I have, in conjunction with Mr. Dalton, the charge of providing and equipping armed vessels for the protection of this river. The thing is new to me, but I must endeavour to improve by experience. I am much obliged to the Board for joining Mr. Dalton with me. He is a steady diligent man, and without such assistance I could not have undertaken it. We are building two row-galleys, which are in considerable forwardness; and have purchased three sloops for cruisers, two of them being only from forty to fifty tons burden, are to mount eight carriage-guns each, three and four-pounders; they are not yet fitted up, and we are exceedingly puzzled to get cannon for them. The other, the American Congress, is a fine stout vessel, of about one hundred and ten tons burden, and has such an easy draft of water as will enable her to run into most of the creeks, or small harbours, if she meets with a vessel of superior force. She mounts fourteen carriage-guns, six and four-pounders, though we have thoughts of mounting two nine-pounders upon her main beam, if we find her able, as we think she is, to bear them; her guns are mounted, and to be tried tomorrow. We have twenty barrels of powder, and about a ton of shot ready—more is making; swivels we have not yet been able to procure, but she may make a tolerable shift without, until they can be furnished. We have got some small-arms, and are taking every method to increase them, and hope to be fully supplied in about a week more. Her company of marines is raised, and have been for some time exercised to the use of the great guns. Her complement of marines and seamen is to be ninety-six men. We are exerting ourselves to the utmost, and hope to have her on her station in less than a fortnight, and that the other vessels will quickly follow her, and be able to protect the inhabitants of this river from the piratical attempts of all the enemy's cutters, tenders, and small craft.

Immediately upon receipt of your former letters, I applied to some of the Maryland Committees, as well as those on this side; in consequence of which, the several most convenient places on this river were sounded, and thoroughly examined; but effectual batteries were found, in our present circumstances, impracticable. Mr. Lund Washington tells me he sent you the drafts and soundings taken upon this occasion. A regiment, commanded by Colonel Mercer, of Fredericksburgh, is stationed on this part of the river, and I hope we shall be tolerably safe, unless a push is made here with a large body of men. I think we have some reason to hope the Ministry will bungle away another summer, relying partly upon force, and partly upon fraud and negotiation.

The family here join with me in presenting their best compliments to yourself and lady, as well as to Mr. Custis and his. If in any of your affairs here I can render you any acceptable service, I beg you will use that freedom with which I wish you to command, dear, sir, your affectionate and obedient servant,

GEORGE MASON.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, at Boston.

JOHN DALTON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Alexandria, April 2, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed is a letter for a gentleman over the Bay. As I have often experienced letters wet, and letters which I have sent by post to that part of the country have miscarried, I am induced to take the liberty to enclose this to you, requesting the favour of you to forward it, by some safe conveyance, the freedom of which I hope you will excuse.

We find it difficult the fitting out the cruising vessels here; the scarcity of sail duck and proper sized cannon plague us much in getting; indeed, am apprehensive we shall not be able to procure light duck for the small sails, and must endeavour to make up the deficiency from old sails, rather than none. The two row-galleys go on very well, and will soon be built, though I am apprehensive of being at a loss for heavy cannon: our choice would be one eighteen-pounder, the other twenty-four. Colonel Mason and myself in particular, and the community at large, thought ourselves highly obliged by the kind indulgence of your Committee of Safety, in lending us ten barrels of powder; it happened just as we had got it down. One ton came from Philadelphia for us; that we immediately returned in the same order.

I am, with regard, sir, your most humble servant,

JOHN DALTON.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

WILLIAM LUX TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, April 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer, John Henderson, came from Point-Comfort, in an oyster boat, and another vessel with corn; and having no permit from any Committee in Virginia, we have detained his boat agreeable to your order, until he produce one. He thinks it necessary to make application to your honourable Board for a release, and has desired a line from our Committee to inform you of his situation.

Per order of the Committee:

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM LUX, Deputy-Chairman.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO ST. MARY'S COUNTY COMMITTEE.

Annapolis, April 2, 1776.

[No. 102.]

GENTLEMEN: We have heretofore written you with regard to the station of Captain John Allen Thomas's Company. Not receiving any answer, we expected the station allotted him at Leonardtoun would have been agreeable to you and him, and, indeed, to everybody else, as being the most central place, and from whence the company might march on short notice to any part of the County. He informed us by his letter of the 18th of March, "that he is positive that it is the opinion of every gentleman in the County that the troops should be stationed at or near the mouth of Patuxent and Potomack;" which we are surprised at. This would not only divide the company, but leave a very great extent of country along the water in a manner defenceless. What is to become of Wicomico, Clement's and Briton's Bay, and all down to the mouth of the St. Mary's River, in case the men-of-war should pass unnoticed in the night, or in foggy hazy weather? When the company gets well disciplined, perhaps some of them may be stationed to advantage at or near the mouth of Patuxent. We think best to keep them together at present, till further advanced in military knowledge, and that Leonardtoun is the proper station. Should you think otherwise, we should be glad to know your reasons, that we may concur with you. We wish to harmonize in everything that is for the good of the country.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for St. Mary's County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN THOMAS.

Annapolis, April 2, 1776.

[No. 103.]

SIR: Yours of the 18th ultimo we only received the 30th. We cannot conceive that any letter that we wrote to you can justify the inference you have drawn, that, if your station is to be at Leonardtoun, your Company is to defend that place only. It was preferred, because it was more central than any other in the County, that you might be within a day's march of any part of it. But if the Committee of Observation should be of opinion that any other station is more convenient, we shall readily confirm and order you to it; or if they should be of opinion that your Company should be divided, and stationed at the mouth of the Patuxent and Point Look-Out, we shall concur with them, when we know their reasons for it, if we approve of them. But we presume that, let your station be where it may, you will nevertheless march to any other part of the County, whenever its defence requires it. And why you should want positive orders to do your duty, we cannot conceive; if you take care to walk within the line of it, you need not be under any great difficulty to excuse yourself to the people of St. Mary's, or the publick in general, or to justify yourself to the whole world. Our care has and shall be as diffusive and extensive all over the Province as its funds and our abilities will allow, and, therefore, we are not under the least apprehension but that our endeavours will meet with the approbation of our constituents.

We sent you by Lieutenant Stewart one hundred and fifty pounds. If that sum is short of what ought to have been sent, you have only to make up your accounts to the 3d of this month, and every shilling that will be due to that day shall be paid. We are determined to have vouchers for whatever sums of money we may pay of the publick stock, and, therefore, you will excuse us in not advancing large sums in gross.

We are surprised that the contractor has not employed some persons before this to furnish your Company with its rations. Surely he will soon do it; in the mean time, you must do as well as you can towards supplying them.

We expect to receive hats and breeches every day. We ordered two and a half barrels of powder to you from Charles County, which we suppose you have received. Lieutenant Stewart had fifty muskets and bayonets delivered to him, with one hundred cartouch-boxes, &c., and as soon as we get more arms, you shall have your proportion.

We are, &c.

To Captain John Allen Thomas.

MARYLAND DELEGATES TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, April 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Archibald Buchanan could not take the money as he expected, and promised. Mr. Ringgold collected and brought up here one hundred and sixty pounds seventeen shillings and six pence. It has been delivered into the Treasury. Besides the change for that sum, we have delivered four thousand dollars to Mr. Ringgold, who sets out in a few days. He will take with him the rest of the money, and we hope the plates and the paper may be sent off about the same time.

We have nothing that can be depended on as to the extent of the powers the Conventions are to be invested with. Whilst we are in suspense on this head, we think no step of consequence could be prudently taken; and, therefore, do not expect our Convention will continue long, or go fully into business. We could wish, if agreeable to them, that there might be an adjournment till about the 20th of May, with a continuance of the present existing powers, if they think proper.

We shall be obliged to you if you will cause affidavits to be made, and transmitted to us, of the time of the capture and recapture of Hudson's ship, that we may get the salvage (the quantum of which depends on the time she was in possession of the tender) ascertained and paid. We were desired to let the claim which we made of salvage, rest till the event of another effort was known. We hope the ship is now out of the bay.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN. R. ALEXANDER,
WILLIAM PACA, T. STONE.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, April 2, 1776.

SIR: It gives me the most sensible pleasure to convey to you, by order of Congress, the only tribute which a free people will ever consent to pay—the tribute of thanks and gratitude to their friends and benefactors.

The disinterested and patriotick principles which led you to the field, have also led you to glory; and it affords no little consolation to your countrymen to reflect, that, as a peculiar greatness of mind induced you to decline any compensation for serving them, except the pleasure of promoting their happiness, they may, without your permission, bestow upon you the largest share of their affections and esteem.

Those pages in the annals of America, will record your title to a conspicuous place in the temple of fame, which shall inform posterity that, under your directions, an undisciplined band of husbandmen, in the course of a few months, became soldiers; and that the desolation meditated against the country by a brave army of veterans, commanded by the most experienced Generals, but employed by bad men, in the worst of causes, was, by the fortitude of your troops, and the address of their officers, next to the kind interposition of Providence, confined for near a year within such narrow limits as scarcely to admit more room than was necessary for the encampments and fortifications they lately abandoned.

Accept, therefore, sir, the thanks of the United Colonies, unanimously declared by their Delegates to be due to you, and the brave officers and troops under your command; and be pleased to communicate to them this distinguished mark of the approbation of their country.

The Congress have ordered a golden medal, adapted to the occasion, to be struck, and, when finished, to be presented to you.

I have the honour to be, with every sentiment of esteem, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COMMITTEE OF PRIVATES OF THE ASSOCIATORS TO PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

In Committee, April 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your constant and unwearied application to the duties of your very important station, and your earnest endeavours to serve your country, and prevent the cruel attempts of interested persons to distress us, while they call for our gratitude and approbation, and strongly solicit us to lay no unnecessary burden upon you, yet give us the pleasing assurance that you will omit no means in your power effectually to remove our present distresses.

The scarcity of materials, the difficulty of procuring manufacturers, and the prospect we have before us of being obliged to neglect matters of great importance, and principally to attend to warlike defence, all point out the necessity of making timely provision against our future demands. For what by monopolizing in some instances, and a real scarcity in others, the country begins already to suffer, and the poor are exceedingly distressed. And if the case is so now, in the very opening of the spring, what will it be a few months hence, when the season for importation is wholly over. It becomes us, while we are wielding the sword of self-defence against an inhuman invader, to take effectual care that we distress not ourselves by unnecessary difficulties. It is not in our power to provide effectually against the necessities of the people, without some foreign trade. The scarcity of almost every species of goods which we have been accustomed to look upon as necessary to clothing and support, the consequent high price of them, and, above all, the small remaining demand for the produce of this country, which is now entirely cut off by the Prohibitory bill, all conspire to distress and discourage the people; and while it is of advantage to none but a few adventurous merchants, who run great hazards to serve us, and certain monopolizers, (whose prosperity arises from the miseries of mankind,) it can only be effectually removed by opening a free trade.

It is unnecessary to point out any particular instances to this Committee. The universal complaints of both town and country are well known to every one whose ears are not stopped by the prospect of private emolument arising from our necessities. Foreseeing the many calamities which must follow a neglect of the measure, we earnestly request you, gentlemen, either directly to apply to the honourable Continental Congress, in the name of the inhabitants of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, whom you represent, praying them to take every measure necessary to open and secure an immediate trade with such countries as can supply us with what we most stand in need of, and to export the produce of this country; or by some means or other, to procure an application from the city at large on this head, as to you may seem best calculated to answer the purpose. We view it as a matter of very great consequence, seeing were there ever so much money struck for the publick exigencies, while the country is debarred of the means of handling it through the want of a market for their produce, it can be of very little advantage to them, and will in the end affect its value. And while every mode of introducing gold and silver is totally cut off, and we stand in need of so many articles which must be procured by paying in specie, we are not only in danger of a scarcity of such articles, but also of having our currency depreciated; as it will be very difficult, if not impossible, to support its credit without introducing real cash into the country nearly in the same proportion to the sums we are obliged to strike. It is now in our power to provide against these evils; we therefore entreat you to fall on some effectual means for the purpose, and to take such measures as will for the future prevent forestalling, and oblige the present monopolizers to sell their stock on hand at the generous prices you have allowed them; and in doing of this, you may rest assured of our strenuous support. We are happy in assuring you that, as far as we have an opportunity of conversing with our fellow-citizens, it is what they greatly desire, and that it can meet with no opposition except from disaffected persons. We beg leave to conclude with thanking you in the warmest manner for the memorial you have sent into the House of Assembly to induce them to rescind their instructions to our Delegates in Congress, as we are persuaded that, from the delicate situation of our affairs, any instructions which may prevent them from uniting with a majority of the Colonies, must be of very dangerous consequence.

Signed on behalf of the Committee of Privates.

WILLIAM ADCOCK, President.

To the Committee of Inspection of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia.

Moved, That a vote of thanks be given to the Committee of Inspection for the steps they have taken to prevent the monopolizing and too high price of Goods, and to assure them that this Committee will support them as far as in their power in every measure for the publick safety and welfare.

Moved, That Messrs. Simpson and Shubart be a Committee to deliver this vote to the Committee of Inspection

WILLIAM ADCOCK, President.

CHESTER COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Chester, April 2, 1776.

Information being lodged with this Committee that a certain Abel Green, of this County, had expressed himself in terms inimical to America, and against the measures adopted for the protection of the liberties of these Colonies,

Resolved, That Mr. Green be immediately sent for to appear before this Committee.

Mr. Green attended accordingly, and made the following concessions, viz:

"Whereas, I, the subscriber, have expressed myself in terms inimical to American liberty, derogatory to the Continental Congress, and injurious to the character of the Committee of Chester County; but being now conscious of my error, do thus publicly acknowledge my fault, and do solemnly promise to avoid in future all ungenerous reflections upon, or opposition to, such measures as are or may be adopted for the protection of the liberties of these Colonies.

"Witness my hand, this 3d day of April, 1776.

"ABEL GREEN."

Extract from the Minutes:

CALEB DAVIS, Secretary.

REPRESENTATION TO COLONEL JOHN STARK, FROM THE OFFICERS OF HIS REGIMENT.

New-York, April 2, 1776.

SIR: We, the officers of your regiment, are continually importuned by the rank and file for cash, which we have often promised, and as often disappointed them of, owing to the failure of payment agreeable to the encouragement in General Orders issued from Head-Quarters last fall. We have, however, so flattered the men with a prospect of immediately receiving their wages, or at least a part thereof, that we have got them (though not without difficulty) to this place, where both they and we are in want of the necessities of life, for want of that money which is justly due to us, and which, in our present situation, we cannot comfortably subsist without. We therefore pray you would represent to his Honour the General our pitiable case, and endeavour that some money may be procured, or that we may be disbanded from that service, which we should leave with the greatest reluctance, and, from Revolution principles, would willingly risk our lives in.

We are, with great respect to you, sir, and our other Field-Officers, your obedient humble servants,

GEORGE REID,	MICHAEL McCLEARY,
SYLVANUS WALKER,	ROBERT BARNETT,
JOSHUA ABBOTT,	JESSE KAN,
ELISHA WOODBURY,	HENRY JENKINSON,
SAMUEL RICHARDS,	ABIEL CHANDLER,
AMOS MORRILL,	JOHN PATTIN,
THOMAS HARDY,	TIMOTHY BLAKE,
JOSEPH SOPER,	EPHRAIM COLBY,
DANIEL LIVERMORE,	THOMAS RICHARD.

To Colonel John Stark.

GENERAL HEATH TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

New-York, April 2, 1776.

SIR: It appears necessary that some persons who, it is said, are aiding and assisting our unnatural enemies with provisions, and even recruits, should be detected and secured. I therefore request that, with the greatest secrecy, you would furnish me by eleven o'clock this day with three or four guides, well knowing the houses and persons of one Justice Hulet and Thomas Cornel, of Rockaway, (Long-Island;) Isaac Denton, of Hog-Island Inlet, and one Lieutenant Thomas Hulet, whose place of abode I do not know.

I am, sir, with respect, your most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety of New-York.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany Committee-Chamber, April 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Of the four battalions intended to be raised for the defence of this Colony, five companies are now recruiting in this City and County. But the officers of those companies meet with great difficulties in completing their respective complements of men, through want of cash. As we have understood that certain sums have been allotted for this necessary service, we therefore apply to you to take this matter into consideration, and transmit to the Colonel of the battalion (if known) or to the General, or this Committee, the money you deem necessary for this service.

We are, gentlemen, your very humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

ABRAHAM YATES, JUN., Chairman.

To the President of the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York.

COLONEL NICOLL TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Fort Constitution, April 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This day Captain Harmanus Cuyler stopped here, laden with peas; and, by my order, had one hundred bushels taken out for the use of this and the other fortifications in the Highlands, and have given him my receipt for them. Gentlemen, as necessity has no law, I hope you will not blame me. And as you are well acquainted with the state of this garrison, where we have a number of people sick, and no vegetables, to prevent mutinies, desertions, and for the good of the cause, by the advice of the Commissioners and officers, I have done it, and hope you will be pleased to order them paid for, and my receipt taken up.

I am, gentlemen, with great esteem, your humble servant,

ISAAC NICOLL.

To the New-York Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 15th April, 1776, and referred to Mr. Wythe, Mr. Harrison, Mr. S. Adams.]

Albany, April 2, 1776.

SIR: After an absence of five days, I yesterday returned from the northward. Nine of the cannon are arrived at Fort George, the remaining five will reach it on this day or to-morrow.

The weather is now become much more moderate, so that I hope the troops, who are daily filing off from hence, will meet with little, if any, detention at Lake-George.

General Thomas arrived here on Thursday, and will move in a very few days. As the season is so far advanced that it might be possible for the enemy to reinforce Quebeck before he could reach it, unless he goes by water, we have both concluded that it will be most prudent to take as many batteaus as may be necessary to convey the troops, baggage, artillery, and stores, down the Sorrel and St. Lawrence: besides the despatch which this will give, it will relieve the men from the almost insuperable fatigue of a march of two hundred miles, in roads that will be extremely deep, and also save the heavy expense of the land transportation; nor can he do without a number of batteaus in the St. Lawrence, to bring provisions from Chambly. For all this service, about seventy batteaus may suffice, and we shall then have about an equal number left in the lakes—a number much too small, under the situation that our affairs will, in all probability, soon be in in Canada; for I can hardly doubt but that the enemy will send a very formidable body of troops into Canada, and the greater in proportion as they can have little or no hopes of aid from the Canadians; nor, indeed, do I expect that we shall have much from them. At all events, it would be imprudent to depend upon it; and, therefore, I most heartily wish to see a respectable body of troops immediately sent into Canada, in addition to those which Congress have destined to that service, which are so very incomplete that General Thomas will not have above five thousand men, exclusive of Canadians; and one thousand at least of these will be occupied in garrisoning Montreal, St. John's, &c., and in bringing on the provisions to the Army from Chambly. Five regiments would not be too many; for in that country our entire dependence must be on the soldiery; whereas, in these Colonies our armies can be almost instantaneously augmented out of the Militia, who will readily run to arms here; but I am confident that, should General Thomas call on me in an hour of distress for assistance, I should not be able to procure three hundred Militia to go into Canada. Permit me to suggest that, should Congress be convinced of the necessity of complying with my wish, some of the troops lately arrived at New-York from Boston might be sent by water. The four regiments raising in this Colony, if the terms of their enlistment were out of the question, would nevertheless be improper, as I do not suppose they will be completed in less than three weeks, if so soon, and after all will be most miserably armed. In this view of things, I have ordered thirty more batteaus to be constructed.

Enclose you, sir, a copy of a letter from Mr. Deane. I agree that a meeting with the Caughnawagas may be attended with happy effects; but as we shall in all probability have a conference with the Six Nations as soon as they have concluded their meeting at Onondaga, I shall, for the present, defer saying anything on the subject to him.

I also enclose copies of sundry affidavits that have been sent me from Tryon County. Though I am well aware that the Mohawks are, in general, unfriendly to us, yet I cannot imagine that there is any just cause of fear from the Indians in general. I am the more induced to this conclusion from the silence of Mr. Deane and Mr. Kirkland. I shall, however, keep a watchful eye, that we may not experience the disgrace and calamity of a surprise. As soon as I received General Washington's letters, advising me of the precipitate retreat of the Ministerial Army from Boston, I sent a message to the Six Nations, of which you have a copy enclosed. The indefatigable industry of the Tories, who pervert every account, made it necessary that I should invite a few of them, that they might have ocular demonstration of what I asserted respecting our armies. I have great hopes that this account, which they will receive whilst in conference at Onondaga, will have a good effect on their deliberations.

As I have heard nothing more of the pork General Lee ordered to be sent here, I have requested General Thompson to send me five hundred barrels, as what will suffice until I can have the determination of Congress respecting the pork I wrote for some time since.

I am, sir, with the most unfeigned esteem and respect, your most obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

Oneida, March 10, 1776.

SIR: Since I had the honour to address my last to you, which informed that Mr. Butler, in his late interview with the Six Nations, had spoken to them of nothing but peace, I have been fully persuaded that the information which the people of this place received respecting that interview, was not to be depended on; and that the Oneidas, on account of their well-known attachment to the Colonists, are not at present very likely to be rightly informed. There is now a large party of Onondagas and Quigogas in this town, who came down on pretence of condoling the death of the Cagg. After the ceremonies of condolence were finished, the Quigoga Sachem, in a long and very spirited speech, reproved the Oneidas for their late conduct in several instances; particularly their paying less attention to the ancient Council-fire at Onondaga than that lately rekindled at Albany; adding, that the people who conversed with them at the latter Council-fire, were very deceitful, and if ever they should overcome the King's Troops, would directly turn their force against the Indians. He observed that the white people were not to be depended on, but that their Indian allies to the westward, with whose disposition he was well acquainted, were ready for their assistance. His manner of expression seemed to raise a jealousy in the minds of our friends here, that some plan was formed to the westward, into the secret of which they had not been admitted. He likewise reproved them for their design of sending for Mr. Butler, in which he accused them of an inclination to intermeddle in the present quarrel; to which the Oneidas replied, that they had suspended that matter till they should see whether it met with the approbation of the whole confederacy, which would determine their conduct in the affair. They thanked their brethren for their care not to let them violate the firm agreement lately made with their brethren of the thirteen United Colonies, to maintain the strictest neutrality in the present dispute; and assured them that, though they had interested themselves in behalf of some of their old friends and neighbours who had involved themselves in trouble on account of the part they had acted against the liberties of the country, yet for the future that they would not do it again, in any, even the least instance, but would maintain the most punctilious neutrality. Observing further, that they thought it very likely that Sir John, on account of the deceitful part he had acted since his late engagements at Johnstown, would soon be removed; and should such a thing happen they hoped that none of the Six Nations would take the least notice of it, but let the white people conduct their own affairs as they pleased. But what offended the Quigogas most was, the conduct of the Oneidas in delivering up the hatchet, in which affair they accused them of acting without the concurrence of the rest of the confederacy, and contrary to a firm agreement, which they said had been made, to deliver it up to the party who gave it. They at the same time informed the Oneidas that they were then on their way to Albany, to recover the hatchet, with a view to deliver it up to Mr. Butler, and desired them to depute a number of their warriors to accompany them on the same errand. The Oneidas, in reply, not only explained, and justified their conduct in that affair, refused to send a deputation of their people with them, but also requested them to prevent those suspicions and jealousies which such a step would unavoidably create in the minds of their brethren, the Colonists, by immediately returning home. The disputes between the parties ran very high; at length, however, after much altercation and debate, the Quigogas agreed to return back, which they did with evident symptoms of disaffection and disgust.

The Oneidas look upon Niagara as the place from whence proceeds the cause of this sudden and unexpected change in the minds of their brethren; and some, in private conversation, declare it as their opinion that the capture of that fort is the only thing that will unite the minds of the Indians in their friendship to the Colonies. Several expresses have passed this place from Sir John Johnson to Niagara since the capitulation at Johnstown;—the first very soon after the above-mentioned transaction, who, when they passed this place, pretended they were only going to the Seneca country after horses; but, on their arrival at Onondaga, declared they were sent express by Sir John with a letter to Mr. Butler. The others passed this place within a few days after the return of the Oneidas, who were down at Albany on the affair respecting Colonel Butler, and, as I have since heard, conveyed letters to Mr. Butler from Sir John and some others. In short, the Mohawks are frequently passing and repassing, without any other apparent business than that of carriers to and from Niagara. A large party of the Senecas are already arrived at the central Council-House, and deputations from the several tribes in Canada are daily expected at the same place. One of the Quigoga Chiefs, who appears friendly to the country, and is a particular friend of Mr. Kirkland, has just now been here, and informs that about “one hundred Senecas have lately met Mr. Butler, at Niagara; that Mr. Butler told them that the Colonists had shut up the passes into the country, and assured them that the Indians would be undone, unless some way could be opened to admit Mr. Johnson into the country upon his return in the spring; and that he requested their assistance to do it, which they had promised to give him.” He further informs, “that, upon the return of the party, three of their principal men, who had not been down, and were displeased at what their people had done, were set out for Niagara to see Mr. Butler.” The principal Sachem of the Tuscaroras is lately dead. The Oneidas and Tuscaroras, therefore, cannot attend the grand meeting till his funeral obsequies are performed.

I would beg the favour of a line. The Indians are very hungry for news. I hardly need suggest, sir, that a word of encouragement to our friends in this place would, at this time, strengthen their friendship, and induce them to persevere in that line of friendly conduct which they have hitherto invariably pursued since the commencement of the present disputes.

I am, sir, with much respect, your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

JAMES DEANE.

To General Schuyler.

Oneida, March 18, 1776.

SIR: Some of the Sachems of this place were with me last evening, and desired me to write your Honour as followeth:

“BROTHER: It is with great pleasure we now inform you of the success of the message sent last summer from Albany to our brethren of Caughnawaga, and the seven tribes in Canada. They have at length arose from their seats, and directed their faces towards our central Council-House, and several days since entered our doors. Some of the Senecas now in Canada insisted upon their going directly to Onondaga; but they refused, alleging as a reason, upon their arrival, that they chose to come first to us, because we were of one heart and one mind with themselves, and as our people were sent to call them, they thought proper to follow the steps of our messengers, and to be led by us to the Council-House of the Six Nations. We are extremely glad to find such a disposition in our brethren, and are in constant expectation of a message from Onondaga to call us to the meeting; and we heartily wish for the Divine assistance to enable us to maintain peace and harmony in this quarter.

“Our brethren from Canada determine, after the meeting, to take the most direct course home, unless you should send and desire an interview with them at Albany. The Sachems and warriors at this place are all in health and peace, and take this opportunity to present our respects to you and Ojagegti, alias Mr. Douw.”

Thus far the Sachems.

The Canadian Indians, I believe, sir, have a desire to visit your Honour in their way home, had they but an invitation; and perhaps an interview with them might be improved to very good purpose, especially as the hatchets

(which the humane Mr. Johnson dispersed among them) are still in their hands, and some of their people are considerably influenced by the Senecas, who have ever been unfriendly to the Colonies.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,
JAMES DEANE.

To General Schuyler.

The Testimony of GODFREY SHEW.

TRYON COUNTY:

Personally appeared before me, Jellis Fonda, Esq., one of his Majesty's Justices of the Quorum for said County, Godfrey Shew, and being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, depose and saith:

That, on or about the 4th day of March instant, he, the deponent, was at his dwelling-house at Sacondaga, in company with three of the Mohawk Indians, when he, the deponent, heard them say that in about six weeks' time he, the deponent, would see a fine dance among the Yankees. Then the deponent replied, What will you do with them? The said Indians gave for answer, that they would kill, scalp, and burn them, the said Yankees. The deponent said, You will not hurt me and my family, will you? The Indians replied, No; we will give you notice time enough to go away. At the same time, Squire Collins was passing by with some of the New-England people in a sled, about a hundred yards distant, when the deponent saw one of the Indians cock his rifle and bring it up to his face, at the same time swearing he would shoot the said Collins through the left eye. Then the deponent took hold of the rifle and held it from his face; and when they went away, they shook hands with the deponent, and declared they would give him timely notice.

The deponent further saith, That he asked the Indians how strong they were. The said Indians informed the deponent that Colonel Croghan was coming with the Cherokees by the way of Niagara and Fort Stanwix, and would kill and burn the people from that place to Schenectady. Further saith not the deponent.

And the deponent further saith: That he heard a Mohawk squaw say, she wished all the Indians were as true to the country as she and her son, and then there would be no disturbance. The deponent said, He is a Whig. "Aye," says David, "you are all glad now, but in less than two months' time you will be sorry." The said David further informed the deponent, that Abraham, one of the Mohawk chiefs, was gone to a treaty at Onondaga; and that he, the said Abraham, gave orders to them, the said Mohawks, to stay at home, and not to go a hunting until he returned; and the said David said they should know what to do when he returned.

General SCHUYLER's Message to the SIX NATIONS, in consequence of the Enemy being driven out of BOSTON.

Brothers, Sachems, and Warriors of the SIX NATIONS:

I have heretofore promised that when I received any news of consequence, I should let you know it. I rejoice, therefore, that an opportunity offers to acquaint you that the Army of our enemies, which has so long kept possession of our town of Boston, has lately been driven out of it. Our enemy, knowing that we were loth to knock down so fine and large a town as Boston, especially as the houses in it belonged to our friends, thought themselves very secure until towards the latter part of winter, when they were informed that we intended to attack them; at which they were so much frightened that, in order to prevent it, they spread the small-pox through every part of the town, well knowing that the greatest part of our Army had never had it. This barbarous act so exasperated our Army, that they were resolved to drive such a wicked set away, although they should be obliged to burn the town; and therefore our chief warrior, Washington, on the 4th of this month, ordered his warriors to begin a cannonade, and to take possession of a place from whence he could more easily annoy the enemy; which he did, without opposition, as they were afraid to come out and fight him. No sooner had he erected batteries on this place, and brought our cannon there, which was on the 16th day of the month, but the enemy immediately went on board their ships, and ran away to sea on the 17th. But they went off in such a hurry that they left thirty large pieces of cannon, two mortars, a great many shot and shells, all the fine horses which they brought from England to mount their soldiers on to ride through our country, twenty thousand bushels of wheat, a great quantity of salt, and a great many other things. Thus, brothers, has the great God blessed our arms, and relieved the town of Boston from its oppressors.

Brothers, it is probable that these runaways will attempt to land on some other part of this great Island. We wish they may; for, wherever they go, they will meet a sufficient number of our warriors to withstand them. We have ten thousand men now at New-York.

Brothers, the King's evil counsellors, finding that they could not get warriors enough of their own in all England to fight us, applied to the Russians for twenty thousand men, to join them. When the French King heard this, he sent his Ambassador to England, to tell the King's evil counsellors, that if they carried any Russians to the great Island of America, he would send his warriors to oppose them and assist us; for that we were a good and a brave people, who only fought for our liberties, and he would not see us oppressed.

Thus, brothers, all goes well with us. The French King, who was formerly our enemy, is now our friend. He has already seven thousand warriors at Martinico. These may be easily brought here. But we believe we shall not want them, as we have men enough, great guns in plenty, and a sufficient quantity of powder and ball.

Brothers, I have formerly told you that you will never find us false or liars. I know that some of our enemies will send to you to contradict what I have said; but you can tell such people that I have invited you, as I now most sincerely do, to send two or three Sachems, or warriors, that have had the small-pox, to Boston and to New-York, to see with their own eyes, and be convinced of the truth.

Brothers, if you send any, I will take care that they shall be accommodated in the best manner, both going and coming, and whilst they stay there; and I doubt not but when these return, you will treat all liars as they deserve, and will have greater reasons than ever to rejoice that you have such good and such powerful brethren as the inhabitants of the Colonies.

Brothers, accept my best wishes for your health and your prosperity; and be assured you will be a happy people whilst you remain in love and friendship with us, and that I will do my utmost to make you love me as much as I do you.

Brothers of the Oneida Nation: I desire that you will send this speech forward to the other brothers of the Six Nations.

From the Rev. Mr. KIRKLAND to General SCHUYLER.

Oneida, March 12, 1776.

SIR: I am sorry to tell you the face of things among the Western Tribes of the Confederacy begins to change, and appears different from what our expectations promised at the last treaty, held in Albany. It is very evident their minds are poisoned by some enemy to the liberties of the Colonies. Such vile and iniquitous sentiments as these are still propagated and prevail among the Western Tribes, viz: "That the white people, particularly the Americans, are in nature treacherous and deceitful; have no true friendship for the Indians; and are not to be depended on for aid and protection. Should they conquer in the present contest, no sooner have they obtained victory but they will turn about and fall upon the Indians."

This, indeed, is no new, but the very same old tune which Colonel Johnson played so long upon, although he confined it chiefly to New-England and Virginia. One might think it would have become threadbare before this time. I am certain I have heard the governing notes, upon the same key, for several years past; but some one, it seems, has lately trumped it up so high, that it sounds very briskly in a savage ear.

Mr. Deane has given your Honour, in his letter of yesterday, a general account of what has lately taken place here in a meeting with the Onondagas and Cayugas. The Oneidas, in this affair, manifested an unshaken friendship for the Colonies, and a firm attachment to the Council-fire at Albany. Many of the Indians have observed to me, that they never knew debates so warm, and contention so fierce, to have happened between these two brothers (the Oneidas and Cayugas) since the commencement of their union. The disputes continued with great spirit for three days, successively, before the Oneidas prevailed.

By Mr. Deane's letter, your Honour will find that a correspondence has been carried on for some time past, and is still continued, between Johnstown and Niagara; and some of the Mohawks become news-carriers and propagators of injurious false reports among the upper nations. The pretended friendship and boasted fidelity of those Mohawks seem to turn out mere delusion and perfidy, at least in the most of them; and no marvel, they have so long been made use of as mere tools of State, and accustomed to such hackneyed service. We cannot expect to find in them even the remains of a principle of honour and virtue.

The Onondaga chiefs informed Mr. Deane that one Wil- liam, a natural son of the late Sir William, is now at Onondaga, the central Council-House, waiting for the result of the approaching meeting to be held there; that he was sent to said place by Colonel Butler, with orders to return immediately to Niagara, upon the breaking up of the Council.

Some of our most judicious and warm friends of the tribe have, in private conversation, expressed their fears of what might take place among the Western Tribes the ensuing spring, by means of Colonel Butler; and give it as their opinion, that your Honour will not be able to preserve, any long time, the union and friendship of the Six Nations, without the reduction of a certain post at the westward. However, they seem to think the result of the Grand Council at Onondaga will determine the expediency of such a measure.

Upon a third request of the Oneidas, in publick council, the Cayugas promised them that they would return, or at least proceed no farther than the German Flats, for some articles of trade; but some of their chiefs, at their departure, said they should go as far as the Mohawks, if not to Albany. Could the Oneidas believe they still persisted in their design of recalling Johnson's axe, Mr. Deane says they would send an express to General Schuyler, earnestly requesting the axe might not be delivered to them on any terms whatever.

There are various conjectures, if Mr. Butler can prevail with the Senecas, and some other remote tribes, to take up the hatchet, where it will be sent. Some say, upon the back parts of Virginia; others say at Canada, to open a passage for Mr. Johnson's return. Some of the Mohawks have affirmed that Mr. Johnson will return by way of New-York; and if there should be a passage, only two feet, he will beat his way through.

The Oneidas put great confidence in Mr. Deane, as your Honour's Deputy, and admit him into their cabinet councils. Had he not been on the spot at this juncture, to strengthen and encourage the Oneidas, and remove objections, the Cayugas would probably have carried the day; and had they brought back the axe, it is thought our frontiers would have felt it before many months.

The deputation from Caughnawaga and adjacent villages have just now arrived. Mr. Deane would have mentioned it, but his letter is sealed. They say they met with some Senecas at the village called Onoskwikisne, about thirty miles south of Caughnawaga, who told them they must proceed directly for the Central Council-fire, and not enter the territories of the Oneidas, for they were Bostonians. The delegation said they would first go to those by whom they were immediately invited, viz: the Oneidas—giving this further reason, that they were of one heart.

A certain paper your Honour committed to my care, when at Albany, cannot be forwarded at present.

Your Honour will be pleased not to disclose Mr. Deane's name or mine to the Indians, as having communicated such intelligence, at this juncture; for it would very much prejudice the Senecas and Cayugas against the Oneidas, as well as weaken our interest among them. A word to the wise is sufficient.

That your Honour may enjoy health, be long preserved, and, under God, be made an extensive blessing to the United Colonies, is the prayer of, sir, your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

SAMUEL KIRKLAND.

To the Honourable Philip Schuyler, Esq.

P. S. The Caughnawagas bring very favourable accounts of the situation of affairs at Quebeck. Mr. Deane has been several hours in council with them, but cannot write anything further by this conveyance.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Lebanon, April 2, 1776.

SIR: This will be delivered to you by Captain Noah Phelps. He is a gentleman who, as a principal, was concerned in the important seizure of the Northern Fortresses the last spring. After the reduction of those posts, he was employed as a volunteer in other important services before St. John's, and in Canada, where, for some time, by direction of General Montgomery, he acted as contractor for the Army, until he had the misfortune to fall grievously sick, whereby he suffered the loss of his business, and incurred heavy expenses. His absence at the time of our appointments has occasioned his being hitherto unemployed in such manner as I could wish. His own abilities, joined to his services already done, I think render him worthy of publick notice. The Military Department is his choice.

I am, with truth and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN BEALL.

SIR: You have our consent to discharge Mr. James Warren. We think he is entitled to pay. We are, &c.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

[No. 105.]

Annapolis, April 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You have done perfectly right in detaining Mr. Henderson. If he is friendly to America, he could have easily got a permit from the Committee of the County wherein he resides. As he has not done it, we think he ought to be at the expense of obtaining a certificate of his character before his boats are released.

We are, &c.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO FREDERICK COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 106.]

Annapolis, April 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We enclose you the judgment of our Board against Robert Gassaway, whom we were induced to treat with moderation, as he discovered a good deal of sorrow and contrition for his offences, which appeared to us to be, in a great measure, the effect of passion.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for the Middle District of Frederick County.

LETTER FROM PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, April 3, 1776.

SIR: I have it in command from Congress to direct that, upon the application of Silas Deane, Esq., you furnish him with a guard of twenty men, under a proper officer, to proceed with him to the Capes, from thence to be returned. You will therefore comply with this requisition immediately on his application.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Officer commanding the Continental Troops, or the Officer commanding where this letter shall be produced.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO COMMANDING OFFICER IN DELAWARE.

Philadelphia, April 3, 1776.

SIR: I have it in charge from Congress to direct that, immediately upon receipt hereof, you order two companies of the Continental Troops under your command to march to Lewestown, there to do duty, and promote the service of the Continent, until the further order of Congress.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Officer commanding the Battalion of Continental Troops in Delaware Government.

MASSACHUSETTS DELEGATES TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL.

Philadelphia, April 3, 1776.

SIR: The Congress being informed, by a letter from General Washington, that two thousand of the Continental Troops at Cambridge and Roxbury are deficient in fire-arms, and that he has not been able to purchase the same from the inhabitants, or obtain them from the Assemblies of the New-England Colonies, have directed the General to make, returns to the Assemblies of the number of men inlisted in their respective Colonies that are destitute of arms, and to dismiss from the service such of them as cannot be thus supplied. In consequence of this, the Delegates from Massachusetts-Bay think it their duty to write to your Honour on the subject, and, through you, to inform the honourable Assembly, that, for the better regulating the Army, and promoting the means of defence, the United Colonies are divided into districts, or departments, and are to supply with fire-arms the Continental Troops that shall be raised by them, respectively, and be in want thereof. The Eastern District consists of the Northeastern Colonies, who, during the whole of this conflict, have discovered the firmest attachment to American liberty, and the warmest zeal and ardour in its defence. Should they, at any time, fail in this, or neglect to supply their quotas of men and arms, they must, in consequence thereof, be the greatest sufferers, and may confer on themselves the censure of the rest of the Continent. We are fully persuaded that the late difficulties in raising men and procuring arms in the Eastern District are justly chargeable on the mode adopted for establishing the Army at Cambridge; but we hope for a different regulation in future, and shall use our utmost endeavours that, in any new levies of men, the General Assemblies may have the direction of the same, subject to the control of Congress.

We think it necessary to inform the honourable Assembly that, in some of the Colonies, all persons whatever are prohibited from purchasing or selling fire-arms to be carried from the same. The safety of the Eastern District may possibly require the like protection. We rejoice at the success attending the measures of the Massachusetts-Bay for promoting the manufacturing of military stores, and think that a steady perseverance in the same plan is the wisest mode that the Colonies can adopt for a permanent establishment of their rights and liberties. We therefore hope that diligent inquiry will be made for all the manufacturers of fire-arms in the Colony who, from want of means, or other circumstances, are unemployed in this business, and that publick works will be erected for them, with suitable encouragement to engage them in the service. We sincerely congratulate your honourable Assembly on the happy recovery of Boston from our enemies, and are fully assured that this opportunity of fortifying the harbour will be successfully improved, and thereby an asylum secured for the ships-of-war and other navigation of the Continent. We presume that General Washington will see the necessity of such a measure, and order some of the cannon brought from Ticonderoga to be appropriated to this purpose. But should it otherwise happen, we think there can be no objection to the Assembly's taking such of the cannon and carriages at Cambridge as they have supplied, and deducting from their accounts against the Continent the charge of any part thereof which they may have made in said accounts, more especially as New-York is better supplied with cannon than New-England; and the reason there is to expect another visit from the enemy in that quarter, renders every precaution necessary to receive them.

We have the honour to be, sir, with great respect, your most obedient and very humble servants,

JOHN HANCOCK,
SAMUEL ADAMS,
JOHN ADAMS,
ROBERT T. PAINE,
ELBRIDGE GERRY.

To the Honourable President of the Council of the Massachusetts-Bay.

GENERAL HEATH TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

City of New-York, April 3, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Having at present the honour to command the Army in the service of the United Colonies in North-America now quartered in this city, five regiments of which are lately arrived from the camp near Boston, whose necessities and complaints are so great as to make it my duty to crave relief from the honourable Continental Congress. These regiments were reluctant to leave the camp before they had received their pay; but the Treasury being bare, they could not have it. They suffered much on the road for want of money, and would have suffered more had they not been relieved by their officers, who spent all their money to relieve their men. Since their arrival in this city, their wants increase. Enclosed I send you the complaints of one regiment. Other Colonels acquaint me that they are discouraged. Three months' pay is due. I have been obliged to borrow a month's pay for three of the rifle companies. I have written to his Excellency General Washington on the subject, and am advised by Doctor Franklin to write immediately to the honourable Congress. I do, therefore, most earnestly request that you would please to lay the matter before Congress, and that the most speedy relief may be granted.

Colonel Mifflin arrived in this city on yesterday, with his lady. The Delegates from Congress, going for Canada, sailed in the afternoon with a fair wind. I have in this city, by the return of yesterday, five thousand two hundred and ten men, exclusive of the city Militia. We are fortifying the city as fast as possible. Governour Tryon having begun to throw up a work on a small Island in the harbour, about half a mile from the Asia man-of-war, I determined to drive him from every part of terra firma. Major De Hart, of the New-Jersey Battalion, offered, with two hundred men of that regiment, to dislodge them; accordingly, about twelve o'clock last night, they embarked on board several boats, and a little after one landed on the Island. The men were all on board the ships; but near forty women and children were in a house on the Island. They fired all the buildings, saving a cottage, in which they left the distressed women and children. They defaced the work, and brought off the intrenching tools. It is said near one hundred recruits, from Long-Island, have joined Tryon; but whether this be certain or not, I cannot tell.

My best respects to my worthy friends, Messrs. Adams, Paine, and Gerry; and believe me, with the greatest respect, to be your most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

CAPTAIN DAVIS TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Easthampton, April 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your warrant was handed me. I have endeavoured to inlist the men agreeable to the instructions contained therein. But as no time is limited for the men's inlistment, it much retards the business; and a very great uneasiness arises in the minds of some very good men, who would gladly enter the service, on account of the wages being reduced; and it is reported among them, that the wages given at Connecticut is the same this year as it was the last. If it had not been for the objections above, I should by this time have filled my company. The number I have inlisted is about seventy, and hope soon to complete the whole. I am your humble servant to command,

JOHN DAVIS.

To the Provincial Congress, or Committee of Safety, of New-York.

NATHANIEL FORDHAM TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Sag-Harbour, East end of Long-Island, April 3, 1776.

Pursuant to a vote of the County Committee, held at our County-Hall, in Suffolk County, on the 27th of March, we, whose names are hereunto subscribed, being appointed a sub-Committee to examine the contents of all the cannon within our respective Districts, and make return of said contents to the Provincial Congress or Committee of Safety, with a petition for a supply of ammunition and other warlike stores, suitable for the enclosed list of cannon, which we have examined agreeable to orders.

This petition humbly sheweth, that it is the opinion of this Committee, that we are much exposed to the ravages of the Ministerial Army, and look upon it highly necessary that we have a publick stock or quantity of ammunition, and other warlike stores, together with orders for mounting the enclosed number of cannon on proper carriages; and as the Ministerial Troops seem at this present juncture to be on the move, cannot tell how soon we may be invaded; therefore beg your speedy answer; which shall be gratefully acknowledged by your humble servants,

NATHAN FORDHAM, }
BURNET MILLER, } Sub-Committee.
THOMAS YOUNGS, }

To the Chairman of the Provincial Congress, or Committee of Safety, New-York.

WALTER LIVINGSTON TO PRESIDENT OF NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, April 3, 1776.

SIR: I have been informed that Mr. John Williams has reported to Congress that Colonel Warner's Regiment left Canada because I neglected to forward the clothing sent to me by order of Congress for that battalion. I wish the gentleman had spared his censure till he was convinced his tale was founded in truth. If he is a member of your House, be pleased to desire the Secretary to deliver him the enclosed; if not, commit it to the flames, for I know not where to direct to him.

The clothing, tents, &c., which came consigned to my care, were either delivered out here, or immediately sent forward to Fort George. My orders from General Schuyler were, to deliver such articles as I had in store to the troops who were on their march, paying no regard to what corps they were directed, unless they were in Albany, and stood in need of them. This order, I suppose, (for it was none of my business to inquire,) was given because the troops were exceedingly wanted at that time at St. John's. If I had not complied, I should not only have been guilty of a breach of orders, but, perhaps, the cause of that fortress not being reduced. This would have been a sufficient justification for my delivering the clothing sent for the Green Mountain Boys, to another regiment, who stood in need of them; though I had not an opportunity of doing this, for Mr. Curtenius did not ship them till the 18th of October. They were not detained, as alleged, but sent forward to Fort George, the 31st of the same month, unopened.

Captain Heman Allen's Company was the only one, belonging to that battalion, which went through this city, and they marched from this the 10th of September—six weeks before I received the clothing. If Mr. Williams had applied to me, and been made acquainted with these circumstances, I believe he would have spared his reflection. As the accusation was made to your House, I hope I shall not be deemed troublesome in stating the fact, to obliterate any prejudice which misrepresentation may have caused in the minds of the members.

I am, sir, with great esteem, your very humble servant,
WALTER LIVINGSTON, Deputy Com'y General.
To Colonel Woodhull.

STAMFORD (CONNECTICUT) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Inspection for the Town of Stamford, on the 3d day of April, 1776:

Munson Jarvis and David Picket being cited before the Committee for signing a seditious paper, the import of which was that they would assist the King and his vile minions in their wicked, oppressive schemes to enslave the American Colonies; and tending to discourage any military preparations to repel the hostile measures of a corrupt Administration; and likewise tending to dissuade persons from observing or regarding the resolves of the honourable Continental Congress,—they appeared, and acknowledged they had signed the paper above referred to, and were voted guilty of the crime alleged against them by the Committee.

Mr. Jarvis exhibited a confession, declaring himself sorry for what he had done, and promised “to adhere and abide by all the recommendations and resolves of the honourable Continental Congress, so far as he was not hindered by a religious tie of conscience.”

Mr. Picket likewise offered a confession, professing himself sorry for his mistake, desiring it might be overlooked, and promised “to conduct himself agreeable to the good and wholesome laws and rules that are in being now in the Colonies, which are or may be for the good of his country.”

Upon being asked what they meant by the reserve of “a religious tie of conscience,” and the “laws and rules that are in being now in the Colonies, which are or may be for the good of the country,” they declared that they could not join with the country in pursuing the measures adopted by the Congress in defence of the just rights and privileges of the United Colonies; which, taken in conjunction with their written confession, and what they further offered upon the occasion, was deemed an insufficient satisfaction for their offence.

It was therefore voted by the Committee, that they should be advertised as enemies to their country; and we hereby recommend it to all persons to break off all commerce and dealing with them, and to treat them agreeable to the resolve of the Congress for those who are declared enemies to their country.

A true copy from the Minutes. Attest:

JOHN HAIGHT, JUN., Committee Clerk.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, April 3, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I this day received your favour of the 27th ultimo, with a letter from General Arnold.

The enemy have quitted this harbour last week. We have no certain account of their destination. It is generally thought they have gone to Halifax. If this should prove true, it is probable they will attempt to penetrate into Canada when the communication by the river St. Lawrence is open.

By a late letter I received from Congress, I have it in command from them to detach four Battalions into Canada, as soon as I shall be of opinion that the safety of New-York and the eastern service will permit; of which I cannot be a proper judge until I have a certain account of the place where the enemy are retreated to.

I have despatched two Companies of Artillery, two thirteen-inch mortars, and military stores, (a list of which you have enclosed,) to the Army before Quebeck, in the last week; and if I can spare the four Battalions, or more, they will go from New-York, to which place the greater part of the troops are gone from hence. I shall set out to-morrow, and will be very happy to see you there after my arrival, if you can be spared from your present station, which I am sensible is a very important one.

I have no hopes of procuring the hard money I gave you expectation of. The possessors of it are not of late accustomed to a paper currency, and keep their gold and silver close.

Captain Lamb is appointed Second Major in the Regiment of Artillery commanded by Colonel Henry Knox. This promotion I thought due to his merit and bravery.

I am, with great esteem, dear sir, yours, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, April 3, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 27th February is come to hand. I much fear you will be much disappointed in the number of troops you expected in that month, as the lakes were impassable.

Major-General Thomas will, long before you receive this, have informed you of the success of our operations here. The enemy quitted this harbour last week. We have no certain accounts of their destination. It is generally believed they are gone to Halifax. If true, it is probable they will attempt to penetrate Canada on the opening of the St. Lawrence. I hope, before that happens, you will be in full possession of Quebeck, and have its avenues well secured, upon which depends the fate of this campaign in those parts.

I have despatched two companies of Colonel Knox's Regiment of Artillery to you, from hence, and two mortars, &c., as you will see at foot hereof. If anything else is wanting that cannot be had in Canada, and in my power to send, they shall be forwarded with all possible expedition, upon my being informed thereof.

The chief part of the troops are marched from hence towards New-York. I will set off to-morrow. If the enemy will not find us full employment, and it is necessary, you may expect a detachment from thence to your assistance.

I am very sorry that the gentlemen of New-York, and other officers, should think themselves neglected in the new arrangement. It is true that I reserved places in this Army for those officers who went from hence under your command. The Congress have since informed me that they would be provided for in the Army raised for Canada. I was not acquainted with the gentlemen who complain, nor with their circumstances. There is little doubt but their merits will be rewarded in due time.

I am very sensible of the many difficulties you have had to encounter. Your conduct under them does you great honour. As General Thomas will take the burden off your shoulders, I hope you will soon gather strength sufficient to assist in finishing the important work you have, with so much glory to yourself and service to your country, hitherto conducted.

As I am informed that there is a furnace somewhere near you, where shells and shot of any size can be cast, I would recommend to General Thomas to have what quantity of each that may be wanting, immediately prepared. The roads are so very bad that it is impossible to send you any great number of these necessary articles from hence.

I have appointed Captain Lamb, who is a prisoner in Quebeck, to be Second Major in the Regiment of Artillery, commanded by Colonel Henry Knox.

The gentlemen of this family return you their compliments; and I remain yours,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Arnold.

P. S. My best wishes and compliments attend General Thomas.

ORDERS AND INSTRUCTIONS TO MAJOR-GENERAL WARD.

General Ward will comply with any requisitions of the General Court or Council, respecting the troops, if not incompatible with any order received from me, or which may be sent him from Congress.

The stores of every kind, provisions and military, are to be drawn together and sufficiently guarded. Those at Beverly, with the vessels, are also to be protected.

If it should be found more convenient to have the Regiments quartered in the barracks at Roxbury, and it should be agreeable to the General Court or Council, I shall have no objection to it. Some men should be kept upon Bunker's Hill, and should be employed in levelling the lower lines of that work next to Prospect or Winter Hill.

All the troops are to be employed in completing such works as are already begun, and such as may be resolved on by the General Court or Council, for defence of the harbour, &c.

Colonel Gridley will be left to construct and see to the execution of these works. An exact account to be taken, and valuation made, of all the materials which are used in these works, and to be ready if and when it shall be called for.

The work upon Beacon Hill should be repaired, and, in my opinion, be made strong, as it commands Fort Hill and all lower works, and would endanger the loss of them if it should be possessed by the enemy.

All the lines upon Boston Neck ought, in my judgment, to be demolished, as it is a defence against the country, and no security to the town. So ought those flushes on the west of Boston.

No time should be lost in fixing with the General Court or Council upon proper signals for alarming the country upon the appearance of a fleet. For the purpose of gaining as much time as possible, I think the alarm ought to be given from Cape-Anne or Marblehead, and forwarded by agreed signals to Boston, and thence into the country. This matter should not be delayed.

A guard should be kept over the Powder Magazine, which I think will be safer in Boston. The powder should be often shifted. A Commissary or Conductor of Artillery Stores will be left, who is to deliver nothing without your or the commanding officer's order.

Mr. Parke will continue here till the affairs of that department are arranged, and some person fixed upon to do the duties of that office; and the Commissary of Provisions will do the like in his.

Mr. Warren will probably continue here till some regulation is adopted. In his hands money will be left to answer the pay of the troops and contingent expenses of this department, which may be drawn for by your warrant. But with respect to accounts and transactions of which you have had no knowledge, let them be specially reported, and paid by particular order.

All captures made by the Continental Armed Vessels are to be immediately libelled in the Court of Admiralty of the District where carried to.

All officers, soldiers, and men-of-war's men, are considered as prisoners; the former to be sent and confined to some town, upon their paroles; the others sent to such jails as the General Court shall direct.

No condemned property to be sold till the day of sale is three times advertised in the papers (with an enumeration of the cargo) of Boston, Cambridge, Watertown, and Worcester, and a special report thereof made to you, that if anything is wanted in the Commissary's or Quartermaster's Department, they may be notified thereof.

Every possible method is to be used for the preservation of the Barracks. If any of them are wanted for any of the new works, they may be taken after valuation thereof.

The vessels which were left in Boston by the enemy, some with and some without cargoes, (and which, I am told, various claims are laid to,) must not be delivered up, unless the person claiming will give some surety to abide the determination of Congress respecting them. In that case, an exact inventory to be taken, in order to ascertain the value.

The wheat left by the King's Troops is to be attended to, that no hurt comes to it. It ought either to be sold or converted into flour, for the use of the Army. The Quartermaster and Commissary may be consulted on this head.

The Regiments should be kept as much together as possible, for the purpose of disciplining the men when they are not upon fatigue duty. Discourage the granting of furloughs but in cases of necessity. Keep the officers and men strictly to their duty, and in all things consult frugality as much as possible.

In all matters not particularly specified in the foregoing instructions, your own judgment, prudence, and discretion, must be your guide. You will take care to advise me, by every opportunity, of your proceedings, and of every transaction, of a publick nature, that you may think worth communicating.

The flat-bottomed boats, whale boats, and floating batteries, are to be continued in the care of Captain Sylvanus Drew. They must be hauled into a convenient place of safety, and proper care taken to prevent their being destroyed, or suffering damage from the heat of the weather. Their oars, paddles, &c., are to be put into some safe store.

All officers and seamen, taken in transport vessels employed in the enemy's service, are to be released, on condition that they give a very strict parole not to act against the American Colonies during the present contest.

Yours, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Ward.

ORDERS AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR COLONEL HENRY KNOX, COMMANDING THE REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

It being of the utmost importance to the publick service that the main body of the Regiment of Artillery, together with the field-cannon, ammunition, stores, &c., should, as speedily as possible, be assembled at New-York, I have thought proper to give you the following orders and instructions:

The Legislature of this Colony having determined to assemble three hundred teams upon the Common in Cambridge, between this day and Saturday next, you will order the Commissary of Ordnance Stores, with the Conductors of Artillery, to be properly assisted in loading all the ammunition and ordnance stores into the teams allotted for the service of the Artillery.

You will send a Conductor, with every Brigade of thirty teams, to Norwich, in Connecticut, whom you will order to receive and obey such directions as the commanding officer at Norwich shall think proper to give.

In loading the teams at Cambridge, you will take particular care to direct the stores and ammunition, that will be first in demand at the general rendezvous, to be first sent forward; such as the fixed ammunition, the powder, musket-balls, buck-shot, laboratory stores, empty paper cannon-cartridges, flints, fuses, &c., &c. The heavy stores, (shot and shells,) not so immediately in request, may be sent the last, according as, upon the best information, you shall see proper to give directions.

The covered wagons, taken from the enemy, should carry all the powder that is to go from hence, and the tumbrils the fixed ammunition. With these it is my orders you send Mr. Commissary Cheever, in whose care and guidance it is proper to place your confidence for their security and preservation.

All the remaining field-artillery and brass mortars should march with the two remaining companies to Norwich, where they will find my orders for their further proceedings.

As soon as the whole of the artillery, ammunition, stores, &c., directed by the instructions to be sent forward, are upon the march, you will yourself proceed to Norwich, in Connecticut; and having seen everything before you from thence, you are then, with all despatch, to proceed to New-York.

Lieutenant-Colonel Burbeck should, without any delay, go the most direct road thither, and, as soon as Lieutenant-Colonel Mason is able to travel, he must follow.

Your Quartermaster should march with the two companies to-morrow; and your Adjutant you will do well to keep with yourself, to carry such orders as you shall at any time think necessary to give.

From the great variety of the stores and duties in your department, there is no such thing as giving all and every minute direction, necessary to be given upon this occasion. Trusting in your zeal, diligence, and ability, I remain confident of every exertion in your power for the publick service.

Given at Head-Quarters, in Cambridge, this 3d day of April, 1776.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Henry Knox.

ORDERS AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR JOHN PARKE, ESQ., ASSISTANT QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL.

It being found necessary for the publick service that the Quartermaster-General, Colonel Thomas Mifflin, should be despatched to New-York, and the command in his department devolving on you, be it your care to see that the Clerks, Commissaries, Wagonmasters, Armourers, Artificers, and the servants of the publick of every denomination within your inspection, are diligent in executing your commands and forwarding the publick service.

As a number of wagons will this day be sent by the Legislature of this Province, for the purpose of transporting stores, &c., to Norwich, those intended for the Quartermaster-General you will direct to be loaded with the articles first in request upon the Army's assembling at their general rendezvous: such as camp equipage, intrenching tools, cooking utensils, &c., with all the articles now in store belonging to the various branches of the Quartermaster-General's Department. A Wagonmaster and some of the clerks must accompany those teams to Norwich, and see that everything sent from hence is faithfully delivered there.

As some teamsters have lately dropped their lading upon the road at Waltham, you will order Wagonmaster Goddard to see it sent forward immediately, and be very strict, for the future, that every teamster is made answerable for the load he receives, by your ordering a clerk to enter in a book the teamster's name, place of abode, and bill of lading. A copy of the bill of lading must also be given to the teamster, upon the back of which the receiver of his load at Norwich should be directed to write the certificate for the payment; and unless a teamster can produce such certificate of delivery, he is not to receive any money for his services.

When all the stores in your department, directed to be carried from hence to New-York, are sent forward, and the necessary directions given to the person who remains as Assistant Quartermaster-General to the Troops in this District, you will then, without delay, proceed to New-York, by the way of Norwich, in Connecticut. Upon your arrival at Norwich, you will see that all the stores are sent before you from thence; and, upon your being certain that it is effected, you cannot get too soon to New-York, where you will report your whole proceedings to Colonel Mifflin, and produce and settle your accounts with him.

Depending much upon your diligence, activity, and fidelity, I rest satisfied that no part of the publick service, committed to your care and guidance, will be, in the least, neglected.

Given at Head-Quarters, in Cambridge, this 3d day of April, 1776.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To John Parke, Esq., &c.

ORDERS AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR DOCTOR JOHN MORGAN, DIRECTOR-GENERAL OF THE HOSPITAL.

As the grand Continental Army immediately under the command of his Excellency General Washington will, as soon as it is practicable, be assembled at New-York, you are, with all convenient speed, to remove the General Hospital to that city.

As the sick in the different houses cannot be removed, but must be attended until they are able to march, you will leave such Surgeons, Surgeons' Mates, Apothecary, and attendants, under the direction of ——— as are necessary for the care of the sick now in the General Hospital.

The medicines, stores, bedding, &c., not immediately wanted in the General Hospital, should be loaded in carts, that will be provided next Saturday, by the Assistant Quartermaster-General, and sent, under the care of a proper officer, or officers, of the Hospital, to Norwich, in Connecticut. Upon their arrival there, they will find his Excellency's orders how, and in what manner, to proceed from thence, whether by land or by water.

The medicines ordered, upon his Excellency's application, by the honourable the General Court of this Province, to be taken out of the town of Boston, should be sent with the first of the Hospital stores that go to Norwich, a careful person having orders to take charge of the same.

The fixing and completing the Regimental medicine-chests, according to your plan lately proposed, had better be deferred until your arrival at New-York, when that may be set about under your inspection.

As the removing the General Hospital must be attended with such a variety of duty and attention, I must refrain from giving more particular directions, leaving a latitude to your experience and knowledge in your profession to govern and direct all your motions.

Before you leave Cambridge, it will be necessary to see a proper Regimental medicine-chest provided and delivered to each of the Surgeons of the four Regiments left in garrison there under the immediate command of Major-General Ward; also, a chest for Colonel Glover's Regiment, on command at Beverly.

Reposing entire confidence in your care, diligence, and zeal for the service, I remain satisfied of your best exertions for the publick benefit.

Given at Cambridge, Head-Quarters, 3d day of April, 1776.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Doctor John Morgan.

COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS TO HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

The Council are informed that there are a number of cannon on Castle-Island, which have been no further injured by our enemies than having been spiked up; and as they may be immediately wanted for the defence of this Colony, the Council recommend to the honourable House that they take the earliest opportunity to employ some suitable persons to unspike the touch-holes; and that garrison-carriages and other necessary implements be provided for them, that they may be fit for use.

In the name, and by order of the Council:

JAMES OTIS, President.

To the Honourable Council and the Honourable House of Representatives, now sitting at WATERTOWN.

The Petition of the Selectmen of PROVINCETOWN, in behalf of said Town, humbly sheweth:

That on the 28th day of March last a sloop appearing near the shore on the back of said town, and to be in distress; on going on board, found her to be from Boston, with five men on board, and twenty-five women and children, in the most miserable condition. It seems they were bound for Halifax; but, having neither seamen nor water on board, they were unable to proceed on their intended voyage. And as we have reason to believe them to be some of those vermin which have been so destructive to the peace and good order of the Colony, we communicate their names to your Honours, viz: Robert Campbell,* Peter Harris, Patrick Trutt, Daniel Wissel, and the famous Jolly Allen, late of Boston. Said sloop's cargo consists of household goods, wearing apparel, and casks of delph and glassware.

And we humbly pray your Honours to give such directions as you shall think proper with the present vessel and goods now in our hands; and, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

NEHEMIAH NICKERSON,
STEPHEN ATWOOD,
SOLOMON COOK.

Provincetown, April 3, 1776.

COLONEL ANDREW REED TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Boothbay, April 3, 1776.

I beg leave to inform your Honours, that James Cargil, whom the honourable Court last year appointed a Colonel in the County of Lincoln, on the 23d day of March last **TRURO*, April 5, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE THE HONOURABLE COURT: I beg leave to inform your Honours I have a sloop on shore at Cape-Cod, put in there in distress, having thirty souls on board, and not one drop of water.

It was with the utmost difficulty I got clear of the fleet, without the loss of the sloop, as my intention was to part them, to put into some port to repair, and to proceed to the Province of New-York. I beg such directions as may enable me to dispose of the passengers and secure my property. Should it be suggested that I may be an enemy to my country, I can produce proper testimony, if required, I have not acted any part in favour of the Ministerial Troops; but my intention is, by means of the sloop, to be useful to my country, and provide for my family.

I should have been glad to have had it in my power to make myself better known, but cannot at present, as I am illy able to hold a pen, having frozen my fingers for want of help on board.

I beg leave to subscribe myself a friend, ROBERT CAMPBELL.

Th enames of the persons that arrived at this place on board the Sloop Sally, 28th March, 1776: Robert Campbell, Master; Peter Harris, Patrick Prout, Daniel Wisel, wife and child; Jolly Allen, wife and his seven children; Sally Bradford, servant maid; Lilla Coppinger, belonging to Mr. Allen's family; Mrs. Eleanor Barry, and her five children; Mrs. Nancy Crowfoot and child; Mrs. Joanna James and her son; Mrs. Dolly Stone, Mary Barrett, and Elizabeth Winslow—thirty persons in number.

came to this town of Boothbay, and, in my presence and hearing, began to rail at the Reverend John Murray, calling said Mr. Murray a liar and mischief-maker; then found fault with the Regulating bill, calling it a Tory bill; then proceeded to damn the General Court. In the next place, said Cargil (as far as his words could) damned all officers who had taken commissions under said honourable Court, in particular Colonel William Jones and myself, for reasons to me unknown; nor were his speeches in private, but in public company. Therefore, pray your Honours to give some directions concerning said Cargil, as his language may lead many weak minds out of the path of duty.

These are, gentlemen, from your most obedient, humble servant,

ANDREW REED, Colonel.

Halifax, Nova-Scotia, April 3, 1776.

The first division of the Fleet and Transports from Boston (containing chiefly the inhabitants, &c.) arrived here yesterday, after a passage of only six days; and the second division (containing the Troops) arrived this day, after a passage of only four days. They have little or no provisions, nor can this place supply them with any; neither are there conveniences on shore for this unexpected body of people.

It is fortunate for the King's Troops that the Provincials did not attack this place last summer, which they certainly intended; but General Preble, who was to have commanded the expedition, and had actually embarked one thousand five hundred New-England Troops in a large number of Marblehead Schooners for that purpose, hearing that the small-pox was very prevalent here at that time, the scheme was laid aside. The New-England people are incredibly afraid of the small-pox.

JOHN PAGE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Williamsburgh, Virginia, April 4, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have this moment received the enclosed packet, and forward it to you with all possible despatch. Its importance will be known by the following extract of the letter which enclosed it to us, dated Newbern, March 30, 1776:

"GENTLEMEN: I take the liberty to enclose to your care a packet from South-Carolina, containing despatches of the utmost importance to the Colonies, which I am directed by the Committee of Safety of that Province to send on to the Committee of Safety of the District of Newbern, requesting that you, gentlemen, will immediately forward it, by express, to the Committee of Safety of Virginia, and desire them to forward it, by express, to the Committee of Safety of Maryland, and to request that Committee to forward it, with the utmost expedition, to Philadelphia. I have given you their request in their own words, which will, no doubt, induce you to comply with their request." Signed "Cornelius Harnett," and addressed to the Committee of Safety of Newbern District.

For and by order of the Committee of Safety of Virginia, I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

JOHN PAGE, V. P.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

PLAN OF THE AMERICAN COMPACT.

New-York, April 4, 1776.

The capital subject of conversation throughout America, for these few weeks past, hath been excited by a pamphlet entitled Common Sense, the author of which endeavours to show the necessity of our final separation from Great Britain, as our rights and privileges cannot be properly secured by any mode of reconciliation whatever. None of the answers given to this ingenious pamphlet have sketched out any plan of settlement by which it might appear that our rights and freedom would be fully secured, though again united and harmonized with Britain. That such a compact or settlement is practicable, I think, ought to be made apparent to the people of America before they can be convinced of the propriety of reconciliation; and unless this can be effected, I never wish to see the union; preferring, beyond all comparison, the toils and dangers of erecting a free and independent fabrick, to the delusive promises of freedom, pregnant with the principles of servitude and oppression. But I think such a compact or act of Parliament may be framed as will secure to Americans the right of freedom, at the same time that it removes from them the horrors of war and the desolations with which even victory must be attended. I think no considerate person will deny that our truly honourable Congress were of opinion such a compact could be formed when they petitioned the King, addressed the people of Britain, and prayed to the Father of Peace for reconciliation with Great Britain, as the greatest blessing these Colonies could enjoy. If such a settlement, in the opinion of the Congress, could so lately have been framed, I think no good reason can be given why it cannot now be effected, since the same wise and salutary regulations which, six months ago, would have secured us against the inroads of tyranny, and the designs of a wicked Ministry, must, at this day, answer the same important purposes. What were the articles of this compact, which our Congress must have thought would be sufficient to secure our liberties, I do not know. It is impossible, therefore, for me to relate them; but sufficient it is, for the purpose of destroying the foundation of independency, to delineate the outlines of a compact which would reconcile us to Great Britain, and, at the same time, secure and preserve our rights and privileges. Such a general plan, or groundwork, is here offered to the publick for their consideration.

1. The British Parliament shall have no power to tax the Colonies.

2. The Parliament shall not intermeddle with the internal police of the Colonies. Let Britain provide for her own internal government, and the Colonies for theirs. By this clause, all disputes about invasion of charters, rights of trial by jury, manufactures of the Colonies, &c., will be rooted up at one stroke.

3. The Crown shall appoint the officers of Government in the Colonies during good behaviour, and the people of the Colonies pay them. By this means the officers become equally dependant upon Crown and people, as they always ought to be.

4. The Parliament shall have the regulation of our trade; but, lest they may lay heavy duties upon articles of our trade, under pretence of regulating it, and so raise a revenue out of the Colonies, they should have no right to the duties, but they should go to, and be for the benefit of, that Colony from which they were raised, to contribute in paying that Colony's taxes, &c.

5. As it is necessary there should be some general power to superintend and regulate the interest of the Colonies as connected with, and interfering with each other, which no Provincial Legislature is competent to; and as it would be dangerous to give the British Parliament that power, lest tyranny might enter in at so indefinite a passage, there should be a General Convention, consisting of Deputies from the several Colony Assemblies, or from the people, whose business should be to regulate the posts, the general currency, and the proportion of the forces of the Colonies, and all other matters in which the separate Colony Legislatures have not sufficient authority, and which are not contrary to the right herein allowed to the British Parliament. One special business of this Convention should be, to keep a vigilant and careful watch over the designs and transactions of the British Ministry and Parliament, that so, by an early watchword, it may prevent tyranny in its embryo. But, as absolute power might, in time, be assumed by this Congress were it without any check, its acts, therefore, should go home for the Royal assent; the Crown to have no power to reject them, or the Provincial acts, unless done within three years after passing here.

6. For our security against the introduction of British Troops to enslave us in times of tranquillity, when we had forgot the use of arms, a perpetual standing Militia bill should form part of the compact, by which means the people of the Colonies would keep up their martial spirit, and always be prepared against the attack of arbitrary power. But as it would be useful, in case of sudden invasion, to have a small number of troops at all times ready to repel such invasion, the King should have a right to send a certain limited number—for instance, ten or twelve thousand—upon the Continent, whose immediate exertions might be sufficient to prevent an enemy until the Militia could be assembled and brought up. Whoever asserts that ten or twelve thousand soldiers would be sufficient to control the Militia of this Continent, consisting of five hundred thousand brave men, pays but a despicable compliment to the spirit and ability of Americans. More than this stipulated number the Crown should not send, without the consent of the General Convention, or Congress.

7. In order to prevent bribery and corruption from sapping the foundation of the goodly fabrick, the compact should contain these three clauses, viz: That the Colonies should choose their Representatives and Convention every two years; that they should choose them by ballot; and that no officer or pensionary of the Crown should be elected.

8. As these Colonies would be protected by the power of Britain, and would receive all the duties arising from the regulation of trade, the Colonies should stipulate to allow them eight per cent. upon all merchandises imported from foreign countries. This would be the easiest of all methods for raising this sum. It would be paid invisibly, and we should even then be gainers, since we should receive a profit of twelve per cent. upon such foreign commodities. If the exigencies of the State should, at any time, require a further grant, the same should be obtained freely, by way of requisition.

These are the outlines of the compact of reconciliation, by which, it is apparent, our freedom may be amply secured. No doubt many additions may be made to it by the wisdom of our venerable Congress, and the observations of my countrymen. And since an honourable and secure harmony may again be established between Great Britain and these Colonies, who would prefer the horrors of war, the ruin of commerce, the destruction of private peace and happiness, and the loss of thousands of our countrymen in battle, to the blessings of peace and tranquillity, the enjoyment of plenty and abundance, the preservation of the lives of our fellow-creatures—and all these in the full possession of liberty? And for what are we to encounter all these evils and untried ways, which, like all novel experiments, must be attended with innumerable difficulties if they should happen to prove successful, and with dismal consequences should they miscarry? It is a form of Government which Baron Montesquieu, and the best writers on the subject, have shown to be attended with many mischiefs and imperfections, while they pass high encomiums on the excellency of the British Constitution. But why should I dwell upon the dangers of this scheme? The Continental Congress have never lisped the least desire for independency or republicanism. All their publications breathe another spirit; and in their justice, wisdom, and virtue, I can freely confide for a restoration of peace and tranquillity upon just and honourable conditions.

AN ENGLISH AMERICAN.

GENERAL PUTNAM TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, April 4, 1776.

SIR: Since my arrival at this place I have had abundant reason to be convinced that the Army here is in the highest need of an immediate supply of cash. I therefore now send Major Sherburne to Philadelphia, and I hope the Congress will despatch him as soon as possible, with at least three hundred thousand dollars for that purpose.

I am, with great regard and esteem, your most humble servant,

ISRAEL PUTNAM.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

ULSTER COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

Whereas the Provincial Congress have recommended that a number of Powder-Mills be immediately built within this Colony, with certain encouragements to such persons as will undertake to erect the same, provided such persons be recommended by the Committee of the County where such mills are to be erected; and application having been made to us, the Members of the Committee of the County of Ulster, by Henry Wisner, Junior, Esq., and Major Moses Phillips, both of the said County, for our recommendation of them as proper persons to build and carry on one of the Powder-Mills ordered by said resolutions, we, therefore, do humbly recommend the said Henry Wisner, Jun., Esq., and Major Phillips, in copartnership, as proper persons (having the convenience of a good stream, &c.) to erect one of said mills, and carry on the business of manufacturing Gunpowder, according to the direction of the Congress.

By order of the Committee, this 4th day of April, 1776.

JOHANNES HARDENBERGH, Chairman.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL THOMPSON.

Albany, April 4, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Since I wrote you this morning, I have received advice from Tryon County that some of the Indian tribes have unfriendly intentions towards us. This will oblige me to call out a body of Minute-men; and as I am altogether destitute of powder and ball, you will please to forward a ton of the former with all possible despatch, and as much of the latter as can be spared.

Will you be so good as to request the New-York Congress that the sailors may be sent up without delay.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To General Thompson.

WILLIAM McDERMOTT TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

April 4, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Not having had the honour of an answer from you to a letter of the 29th ultimo, which I took the liberty of subscribing my name to, induces me to a second application, which I flatter myself you will be kind enough to admit before your respectable House.

I have been a prisoner under close confinement near five weeks—for what, I am an utter stranger; therefore, shall esteem it a favour if you will be kind enough to order me before you, as I am fully conscious of my innocence of any charge against me, if any is laid before you.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

WILLIAM McDERMOTT.

To the New-York Committee of Safety.

J. WATERS, JUNIOR, TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-London, April 1, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: We have just received intelligence that twenty-one vessels were yesterday seen off Newport, Rhode-Island; that several had come up. The particulars your Honour will receive from Colonel Saltonstall. I have thought it my duty to acquaint you with the state of the fortresses: that upon Groton is carried up in part, and shall be completed with all possible despatch; that upon Shaw's Neck is not so far forward as I could wish. I have improved every moment since your Honour's departure to get it forward, and shall, if possible, complete a battery, which may contain a few cannon, (if we have them,) this week.

I could most ardently wish, upon this pressing necessity, to have more hands employed, which would much expedite the work; but in this case your Honour will be pleased to be mindful of working materials; and as they cannot be immediately ready, will be pleased to direct how I shall obtain them. You will be pleased to be explicit in any orders you may send me. I shall endeavour punctually to obey them.

I am your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

JOSI. WATERS, JUN.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, in Lebanon.

COLONEL SALTONSTALL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-London, nine o'clock, A. M., April 1, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: This moment Mr. Adam Babcock came in, (from Westerly this morning,) and advises that he there saw an order issued by Colonel Noyes to the several Militia Captains under his command, (dated twelve o'clock last night,) to march immediately to Newport, having received an express from Colonel Henry Babcock, at Newport, dated yesterday noon, advising that twenty-one ships had just arrived there, but did not say from whence they came. The Colonel at Newport says the ships are in the offing, and the express adds that four of the ships were got abreast Newport—some of the fleet standing in on the east side the Island, the others directly for the harbour. This I thought it my duty to advise your Honour of by express.

The two plans of fortifications that I showed your Honour, I left undesignated upon your desk; not supposing they would be of any advantage to you, and as they perhaps may be of some advantage here, I should be pleased to have them again, when you please.

I intended to have made a few observations on the plan for the Neck, viz: That to finish the work as it now stands, and described by the picket line, as it is much more extensive than the other, and the proposed one for ten heavy cannon, (in each case,) will be much more expensive than that proposed by the other plan—indeed, to remove the materials already used, to the other proposed work, will be fifty per cent. less than to proceed as the works are now begun. If the fort is to be enclosed, the first works will be vastly more expensive than necessary. It was ever my opinion to have the turret line east and west. Should, in future days, it be thought necessary to make a regular fort, with bastions, I conceive the corners of the plan are well calculated to be made into bastions; and if the fort should be thought best to be a square, it is only to extend the diameter north and south, so as to be equal to the east and west diameter; and if the barracks were sunk six feet under the surface, (as in the grand barracks,) the parapet would cover them from a cannon-shot; and if the fort should be made square, it would admit of a handsome parade between the barracks and platform.

I am, your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,
G. SALTONSTALL.

To Governour Trumbull.

COLONEL SALTONSTALL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-London, April 4, 1776, eight o'clock, A. M.

HONOURABLE SIR: Yesterday at six o'clock, P. M., Captain Henry Billings delivered me your Honour's orders of the 2d instant, to detach one-third of the Third Regiment in this Colony, to hold themselves in readiness for service at a minute's warning, &c.; and the vote of the Governour and Council of Safety, dated 1st instant, directing me to augment the company under my command to ninety men, to defend this and the neighbouring places from any invasion by the fleet your Honour supposed, by the intelligence received, were at Newport. The various accounts from Newport, since Tuesday noon, made it probable the account of a fleet being arrived there was premature, and last evening the post came in from thence and confirmed the matter that no fleet had been there, as your Honour was informed by express from Governour Cooke. The post tells me two men made oath, before Colonel Babcock, they saw a fleet, which I conclude was the foundation of Governour Cooke's intelligence. Enclosed you have the Newport paper, by which you will see that no ship but the Nautilus (of sixteen guns) had arrived there, and the accounts of the fleet were only report.

Matters relative to said fleet being thus situated, thought it my duty to send this express to your Honour for further orders. As to detaching one-third the regiment, and augmenting the company to ninety, and as it would be attended with no small expense to the Colony, and the occasion for so doing arose from an erroneous information your Honour and Council of Safety had received, shall therefore omit issuing any orders in the premises, until the express returns; and if, in so doing, omit immediately executing your Honour's orders, hope for forgiveness, and that you will attribute my conduct to a zeal for the Colony's interest, by avoiding a considerable expense that would unavoidably accrue if the orders received from your Honour were instantly executed.

The Honourable Samuel Ward died at Philadelphia the 31st ultimo. My friend at Philadelphia, the 28th ultimo, writes, "our fleet is at South-Carolina." I heartily congratulate your Honour on the success of the American Troops to the southward against Regulators and Tories. General Heath, with the troops, arrived at New-York Saturday afternoon.

I am, with the greatest esteem, your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,

G. SALTONSTALL.

To Governour Trumbull.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL SALTONSTALL.

Lebanon, April 4, 1776, two o'clock, P. M.

SIR: I have your favour of this morning before me. Your company to be augmented to ninety men was intended had no misinformation been received. The addition of one company from your regiment, and another from Colonel Coit, for the service at Mamacock and Winthrop's Point, will not forward those works with more expedition than is desirable. The failure of the plan for Minute-men renders the detachment now ordered necessary for the security of the harbour and defence of the town of New-London. I have not authority to counteract the order of the Governour and Council, and think it best not to call them together on the occasion; although I approve of your zeal for the Colony's interest, and of your useful hints for avoiding expenses. You will please to go on to execute the orders you have received. How soon the enemy may enter the harbour, make the attack, and attempt to land, or burn the town, is uncertain. Readiness to receive them is the best preventive remedy. I hope the works will be forwarded with prudence, diligence, and attention, and that we shall obtain a loan of cannon from New-York to be planted in them. I have desired Governour Griswold to come through New-London on Monday next, that he may be able to inform of every circumstance needful to be attended to. The Council meet next Tuesday. I received from Governour Cooke a letter of the 2d instant, at evening, informing of the mistake concerning the fleet. I have nothing material that is new. I have enclosed the two maps you left on my table.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Saltonstall.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 15. Referred to Mr. Wythe, Mr. Harrison, Mr. S. Adams.]
Cambridge, April 4, 1776.

SIR: I was honoured with your favours of the 21st and 25th ultimo, on the 2d instant, the former by Mr. Hanson, and the latter by Fessenden.

I heartily wish the money had arrived sooner, that the Militia might have been paid as soon as their time of service expired. The disappointment has given them great uneasiness, and they are gone home much dissatisfied. Nor have I been without severe complaints from the other troops on the same account. When I get to New-York, I hope a sufficient sum will be there ready to pay every claim.

It is not in my power to make a report of the deficiency of arms in compliance with the direction of Congress at this time, as some of the regiments are at, and most of the others on their march to, New-York; nor do I know that it would answer any good purpose if it were, having made repeated applications to the several Assemblies and Conventions upon the subject, and constantly received for answer that they would afford us relief.

When I arrive at New-York, I shall, in pursuance of the order of Congress, detach four battalions to Canada, if the situation of affairs will admit of it, and shall be extremely happy if they and the troops already there can effect the important end of their going.

In my letter of the 1st instant, per post, I enclosed you a copy of a letter from Governour Cooke, advising me of the arrival of a ship-of-war, &c., at and near the harbour of Newport. I have now the pleasure to inform you that the report was entirely premature, and without any foundation. You have a copy of his letter of the 1st instant to this effect. I wish the alarm had never been given. It occasioned General Sullivan and his brigade to make an unnecessary and inconvenient diversion from their route.

Enclosed is a copy of an account presented by the honourable General Court, of powder furnished the Continental Army by this Colony. From the account, it appears that part of it was supplied before the Army was under my command, and therefore I know nothing of it, but have not the smallest doubt of the justice of the charge. I shall leave about two hundred barrels of this article with Major-General Ward, out of which Congress will direct him to make a return, if they think proper, and also repayment of what may have been furnished by the other Governments.

A proclamation of General Howe, issued a few days before his departure from town, having fallen into my hands, I have enclosed you a copy, which probably has been the occasion of large quantities of goods being carried away; and the removal of many persons, which otherwise would not have happened.

Colonel Warren, Paymaster-General, finding the Army likely to be removed from hence, informed me the other day, that the situation of his affairs and engagements in the business of the Colony are such as to prevent him from personally attending the Army, and offered, in case it should be required, to resign. This was rather embarrassing. To me it appears indispensably necessary that the Paymaster-General, with his books, should be at or near Head-Quarters. Indeed, it is usual for the head of every department in the Army, however dispersed that Army may be, to be with the Commanding-General, keeping deputies in the smaller departments. On the other hand, Colonel Warren's merit and attachment to the cause are such, that I could do nothing less than desire (as some money must be left for the pay and contingent charges of the Army which will remain here) he would wait here till Congress shall be pleased to give their sentiments upon the matter, sending, in the mean time, some person in whom he could confide with the money, (but little of which there will be to carry, though great the demands, as nine of the regiments which have marched to New-York have only received five hundred pounds each, towards their pay for the months of February and March, and six others not one farthing.) I hope, therefore, this matter will be considered by Congress, and the result transmitted me as soon as done.

I would also mention to Congress that the Militia Regiments, which were last called upon, in making up their abstracts, charged pay—the officers from the time they received orders to raise companies, and the privates from the time they respectively engaged to come, or were called upon; though they did not march for a considerable time after, some not within three, four, to twenty days, and during all which they remained at home about their own private affairs, without doing anything else than preparing for the march, as they say by way of plea. This appeared to me so exceedingly unreasonable, and so contrary to justice, that the publick should pay for a longer time than from the day of their march to that of their return, that I ordered the abstracts to be made out accordingly, and refused to give warrants on any other terms. They say that the inlisting orders which went out from their Governments, give them the pay they claim. The fact may be that something in these may seem to authorize it. But I must submit it to Congress, and wish for their decision whether the Continent must pay it.

I am, with great esteem, sir, your most humble servant,
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

P. S. I shall set off to-day.

G. W.

Providence, April 1, 1776.

SIR: I yesterday wrote your Excellency that I had information, by express, from Newport, that a large part of the Ministerial Fleet and Army were near that harbour. Since which, by the intelligence I have further received, I am inclined to believe that the Fleet was not seen as was reported. The alarm was given upon the following occasion: Three of the soldiers being upon a rising ground, near the town, were positive they saw a fleet within Seconet Point, and counted distinctly twenty-one sail. Immediately upon this, the Sheriff of the County of Newport despatched an express with the information. One of the Ensigns also says that three large ships were seen off the Light-House from Conanicut yesterday, at eleven o'clock, A. M. After having taken all the measures that appeared necessary to collect a sufficient force to oppose the enemy, I sent a person in whom I could confide to Newport, who has just returned, and informs me that it seems to be the general opinion that no fleet was descried, but that the persons were deceived by the weather, which was very thick and foggy, and has so continued ever since. I think it my duty to acquaint your Excellency of this by my son, who goes express; and am, with great esteem and respect, sir, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, April 2, 1776.

(Parole, Hartford.)

(Countersign, Kingsbridge.)

General Ward to send a Regiment to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock, out of Boston, to relieve Colonel Larned's Regiment upon Dorchester-Heights. Colonel Larned's Regiment to prepare to march on Thursday morning.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, April 3, 1776.

(Parole, Liverpool.)

(Countersign, Exeter.)

The Brigade under the command of Brigadier-General Spencer to march to-morrow morning at sunrise. Carriages will be provided this afternoon by the Assistant Quartermaster-General; and the Adjutant-General will send the marching orders to the Colonels commanding Divisions.

General Spencer will receive his orders this afternoon at five o'clock, at Head-Quarters.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Cambridge, April 4, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 26th ultimo came to my hands last night, by the post; but as I am upon the point of setting out for New-York, (by the way of Providence and Norwich.) I can do little more than acknowledge the receipt of it, and thank you for the proceedings and ordinances of the Virginia Convention, which came safely to hand.

At present the lakes are in an impassable state, neither being clear of ice, nor covered with such as will admit of transportation; at present, also, our troops are at different stages, on their march from hence to New-York; nor is it possible for me, till I get there, (as the Congress have annexed conditions to my sending the four battalions to Canada.) to tell whether they can be spared or not, as I am unacquainted with the number of men or strength of the works at that place. No time shall be lost in forwarding three battalions, if there is a possibility of doing it with safety, as no person can be more sensible of the importance of securing Canada than I am. A letter of the 27th ultimo, from General Schuyler, informs me that there are many men now stopped at Albany on account of the state the ice is in on the lakes.

I thank you for your friendly congratulations on the retreat of the King's Troops from Boston. It was really a flight. Their embarkation was so precipitate, their loading so confused, (after making greater havock of the King's stores than Dunbar did upon Braddock's defeat, which made so much noise,) that it took them eleven days to fit their transports, adjust the loads of them, and take in water from the Islands in Nantasket Road, after they had fallen down there. The coast is now clear of them, except the Renown, (a fifty-gun ship,) and one or two frigates, which remain here for the protection of such transports as shall be bound to this port.

I pray you to make my best wishes acceptable to the good Doctor, his lady, and family, &c.; and believe me to be, as I really am, dear sir, your affectionate and obedient humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Richard Henry Lee.

GENERAL CHARLES LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Williamsburgh, April 5, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I most sincerely congratulate you, I congratulate the publick, on the great and glorious event of your possession of Boston. It will be a most bright page in the annals of America, and a most abominable black one in those of the Beldam Britain. Go on, my dear General, crown yourself with glory, and establish the liberties and lustre of your country on a foundation more permanent than the Capitol Rock. My situation is just as I expected. I am afraid that I shall make a shabby figure, without any real demerits of my own. I am like a dog in a dancing-school—I know not where to turn myself, where to fix myself. The circumstances of the country, intersected by navigable rivers; the uncertainty of the enemy's designs and motions, who can fly in an instant to any spot they chose with their canvass wings, throw me, or would have thrown Julius Caesar, into this inevitable dilemma. I may possibly be in the North, when (as Richard says) I should serve my Sovereign in the West. I can only act from surmise, and have a very good chance of surmising wrong. I am sorry to grate your ears with a truth, but must at all events assure you, that the Provincial Congress of New-York are angels of decision when compared with your countrymen—the Committee of Safety assembled at Williamsburgh. Page, Lee, Mercer, and Payne, are, indeed, exceptions; but from Pendleton, Bland, the Treasurer, & Co., libera nos Domine.

I shall not trouble you with a detail of the Army, ordnance, and stores, but compendiously say, that the regiments in general are very complete in numbers, the men (those that I have seen) fine; but a most horrid deficiency of arms—no intrenching tools, no guns (although the Province is pretty well stocked) meet for service. Had I only eight eighteen-pounders I would immediately, at all events, take post on Craney-Island, by which measure I should drive out the enemy, and exclude them from the finest and most advantageous port in America. I have ordered, with this view, the artificers to work night and day. If I succeed, I shall come in for a sprig of laurel. This essential measure might have been effected long ago, but for the same apathy and oblique squinting towards what the milk-and-water people call Reconciliation.

The prodigiously flattering prospect opened by the appointment of Commissioners were strong arguments against the expense of gun-carriages and intrenching tools. But this is not all; they have distributed their troops in so ingenious a manner as to render every active offensive operation impossible; an equal number of their battalions are stationed on the different necks. They say, very acutely, that as the expense is equal, the security ought to be equal. I cannot help persuading myself that their object will be to take possession of Williamsburgh; not only from its temptingly advantageous situation—commanding, in a great measure, two fine rivers, and a country abundant in all the necessaries for an army—but the possession of the Capital would give an air of dignity and decided superiority to their arms, which, in this slave country, where dominion is founded on opinion, is a circumstance of the utmost importance. Perhaps I may be mistaken; but the surmise is not irrational. I have called three regiments down the country.

You will excuse, my dear General, the blots and scratches of this letter, for the post is just going out; by the next I will inform you of the steps we have taken for the security of this place. I have been desired to recommend Colonel Grayson, as a man of extraordinary merit. He sets out soon to make application to the Congress for an establishment. If we have, as we must, a Continental Hospital in the Southern Department, Dr. McChurg, I suppose, will be the man to direct it. I need not mention his qualifications, they are so well known. I beg you will make somebody write to me from time to time; indeed, I think I may modestly insist on Mr. Palfrey's pen being employed often in this service. Adieu, dear General. Yours most respectfully and sincerely,

CHARLES LEE.

To General Washington.

GENERAL CHARLES LEE TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Williamsburgh, April 5, 1776.

MY DEAR FRIEND: I congratulate the publick and you, one of her best members, on the late glorious event—the flight of the tyrant cut-throats from Boston; although I do not know whether it is a matter of congratulation, for it appears to me that, as our affairs grow more prosperous, the namby-pambys of the Senatorial part of the Continent (great and small) grow more timid and hysterical. I am sorry to say it, but your Committee of Safety seem to be as desperately and incurably infected with this epidemical malady as the Provincial Congress of Maryland, or the quondam Assembly of Pennsylvania. Your brother, Mr. Page, Payne, and, I believe, Mercer, are indeed exceptions. If you could be spared from the Congress, your presence might inspire vigour and wisdom. Their economy is of a piece with their wisdom and valour; to save money, we have no carriages to our guns; to save money, we have no blankets for our men, who are, from want of this essential, dying by dozens at Suffolk. Had I gun-carriages, I could flatter myself with almost a certainty of driving the pirates, and shutting them out forever from the harbour of Norfolk.

I have, however, ordered them to be made with all possible expedition, and then shall attempt this capital stroke. My command (from the circumstances of the country being intersected by navigable waters, and the enemy being supplied with canvass to fly to any spot they choose) is disagreeable. I may make a very shabby figure, without any real demerits of my own. I know not where to turn, or where to fix myself. I may, as Richard the Third says, be in the West, when I should serve my Sovereign in the North. I can only act from surmises, and I may surmise wrong; but I must venture, and take my measures accordingly. I am apt to think that Williamsburgh and York will be their object; the possession of the first is not only most temptingly advantageous from its command of the two rivers and a most abundant country, but its being a Capital, the possession would give an air of dignity and decided superiority to their arms, which, in a slave country, is of the utmost importance. Your dominion over the blacks is founded on opinion; if this opinion falls, your authority is lost. On this principle I am drawing down some battalions, and shall, when I can provide intrenching tools, work for the security of these places.

For God's sake, why do you dandle in the Congress so strangely? Why do you not at once declare yourselves a separate independent State? I am much obliged to you for keeping my letter in your hands, and am happy that the stigma was not levelled at me. Appropos, will you move, as my command is separate, and scarcely any letters are addressed to me (even those not written by the members of the Congress) which do not relate to publick business, that, whilst I continue in this separate command, they shall be frank, for the expense is very considerable. I wish you would cuff Dr. Rush for not writing. I expect and insist upon it.

A Colonel Grayson (with whom, I suppose, you are acquainted) will be soon with the Congress, to make application for some military establishment. I am desired to recommend him as a man of extraordinary merit. We must have a Continental Hospital in the Southern Department; Dr. McChurg is, I am told, very well qualified to be at the head of it. My little German Engineer is (as the New-Englanders say) a nice man; but I wish I knew what pay and rank you intend him; I have hitherto supported him myself, but shall send in a bill for his nourishment. Adieu, my dear Senator.

Yours, and your brother's, most affectionately,

CHARLES LEE.

To the Honourable Richard Henry Lee.

TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

St. Eustatia, April 5, 1776.

MR. PRESIDENT: I ought to make an apology for the liberty I take in addressing you; but I have no occasion for any other than the sincerity of my intention. By you, sir, I mean to address the Congress, in order to inform them that, about two months ago, I was at Paris, and that the common conversation there was on the subject of American affairs.

It is believed that you will apply to the Court of France for their assistance, by which applications the English Minister would learn your designs. For this purpose he has attached to his interests a good many French at Paris, who are pretended friends of America, and who speak loudly of the justice of your cause, and wish it well. The English Minister hopes that you will apply to these men to transact your affairs, and, of consequence, that they will fall into bad hands.

Perhaps you will ask how I came by this knowledge. I cannot well inform you of this to the bottom; all that I would say to you is, that, as I have had conversation with them, I have sounded them on the subject, and am sure that what I have said is true. But, sir, I know what will accomplish your ends—that Americans only be employed with the management of your affairs; men faithful, honest, and intelligent, and who can speak French; for Gallick faith is at present almost as proverbial as Punick faith used to be.

I have nothing further to say at present. I am a friend to the cause of America; and am, with great sincerity, Mr. President, your very humble and obedient servant,

LE F.

SAMUEL PURVIANCE TO CAPTAIN PHILLIPS.

Baltimore, April 5, 1776.

SIR: You will please to purchase whatever turpentine may be necessary for the use of the gun-carriages now preparing; and in case any person who has it refuses to sell it to you, you must take it, and the price thereof shall be allowed by the Committee for the use of the publick.

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JUN., *Chairman.*To Captain James Phillips.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO WILLIAM HINDMAN.

To William Hindman, Esq.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

[No. 109.]

Annapolis, April 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have your favours of the 26th of March, and the 2d of this month, and are pleased with the assurances Messrs. Willing & Morris give us, that we may shortly expect the powder they agreed to supply us with. Those gentlemen should recollect that our money was advanced in confidence that their contract would long ago have been fully complied with. We shall be much obliged if you will let us know the exact number of the chests of arms that were sent us by them. As we are not in immediate want, we would not have you borrow the ton of powder you mention of the Congress; but as we fear we shall be in great want of duck for our tents, could the Congress spare us any of the light kind, and fit for making tents, we would willingly take it in exchange for part of that belonging to us, which you disposed of to them. Mr. Duvall has appointed Mr. Gerrard Hopkins, of Baltimore town, to act as his deputy, who will take care of whatever is sent to that place for the use of the publick.

We shall communicate to the gentlemen of the Convention, when they meet, your sentiments on the expediency of an adjournment; and shall have the affidavits made out you desire for ascertaining the time Hudson's ship was in possession of the tenders. She left Patapsco River ten or twelve days ago, and, as we have heard nothing of her since, hope she is out of the bay by this time. We are, &c.

To the Deputies of Maryland, in Congress.

P. S. Saturday morning, April 6.—We are sorry to inform you that we have this instant received intelligence that Hudson's ship was taken last Wednesday morning, by two tenders belonging to the Otter. We are apprehensive that we have likewise lost one of our Provincial vessels.

HENRY FISHER TO PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Lewestown, April 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Last night, at ten o'clock, I received your letter, dated April 3, per express, with a letter from Captain Faulkner, with a signal for Captain Barry, which I shall take great care shall be answered. We have had a guard of thirty men at the Light-House, to protect the signal. Captain Watkins has been sent on shore this morning in a small boat, with four other men, by whom I learn that they have got a pilot (James Jones;) and, from all that I can collect, as soon as their fleet arrives, they design up your river. We have this morning sent off Lieutenant Ball to Dover; and I desire that you would send down for him, and have him secured, as he is very active on board, and, being here so long, he has got more intelligence than I could wish. The ship is now coming to sail, and, from all appearances, is going out on a cruise, as she has done several times. Pray send me some powder for signal guns, at the false Cape, to alarm your vessels standing in, as we keep up a guard there night and day, of twenty-four men, some of whom are pilots.

I am, with due respect, your humble servant,

HENRY FISHER.

To the Committee of Safety, at Philadelphia.

CAPTAIN BRICE (A PRISONER) TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

New-Brunswick, New-Jersey, April 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The following is a state of my case and situation, which I beg leave to lay before you. At the giving up of Fort Chambly, (and some time before it,) I was in such bad health, which rendered me incapable of crossing the lake; on my disorder continuing, I applied to General Montgomery for leave to winter in Canada, which he readily complied with. I fixed on Montreal, being a place most likely to get advice. I remained the winter, until the 7th of last month, when all the prisoners were ordered off. At my arrival at Albany, I applied to General Schuyler for leave to go to Philadelphia; he told me, on my coming to Brunswick the Committee there would let me and every officer go to whatever place we chose. On my acquainting the Committee with what the General said, their answer was, that they had no such authority from Congress, under whom they were to act; the consequence of which is, I am here stopped until the pleasure of the Congress is known. Therefore, beg leave to assure you, it is from no other motive whatever my requesting your leave to go to Philadelphia, but entirely for the advice of an able physician, as my complaints still remain with me. Having had so great an account from Colonel Zedtwitz, of Doctor Kuhn's knowledge, I humbly beg leave to solicit your permission in letting me go to Philadelphia. If I am so happy as to obtain it, after getting the Doctor's advice and instruction, and you think it necessary to move me, I shall cheerfully submit.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servant,

ARTHUR HILL BRICE,

Captain of Seventh Reg't Foot, or Royal Fusileers.

To the Honourable the Continental Congress.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, April 5, 1776.

The Soldiers are strictly enjoined to retire to their Barracks and Quarters at tattoo beating, and remain there until the reveille is beat.

Necessity obliges the General to desire the inhabitants of the city to observe the same rule, as no person will be permitted to pass any sentry after this night, without the countersign. The inhabitants, where business requires it, may know the countersign, by applying to any of the Brigade Majors.

Head-Quarters, New-York, April 8, 1776.

The General informs the inhabitants, that it is become absolutely necessary that all communication between the Ministerial fleet and shore should immediately be stopped; for that purpose has given positive orders the ships should no longer be furnished with provisions. Any inhabitant or others, who shall be taken, that have been on board (after the publishing of this order) or near any of the ships, or going on board, will be considered as enemies, and treated accordingly.

All boats are to sail from Beekman's Slip. Captain James Aher is appointed Inspector, and will give permits for oystermen. It is expected, and ordered that none attempt going without a pass.

ISRAEL PUTNAM,

Major-General in the Continental Army, and Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in New-York.

JEREMIAH CLARK TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Orange County, April 5, 1776.

MR. CHAIRMAN, SIR: By certain gentlemen that lately left New-York, I am informed that the four battalions to be raised for the defence of this Colony, are not yet full; and although the Counties of Ulster and Orange have raised their full allotment of men, yet there seem to be numbers that are willing to enlist in the service, if there were proper officers appointed. Lieutenant William Roe, of this County, (a man of a good character,) has signified his willingness to serve as Captain, if he could be favoured with a warrant for enlisting men. I do not think there is any reason to doubt of his military abilities; and if there should yet be a vacancy, I suppose he would raise a company as soon as any man within the compass of my acquaintance. Your prudence will direct.

I am, sir, in haste, your most humble servant,
JEREMIAH CLARK.

To the New-York Committee of Safety.

P. S. The bearer hereof, David Mandeville, Jun., he has proposed for his First Lieutenant—a young man of a good character in Ulster County.

MR. CHAIRMAN, SIR: The gentlemen abovementioned are men of undoubted character, by information; from, sir, your humble servant,
ELIHU MARVIN.

RETURN OF THE FIRST REGIMENT IN SUFFOLK COUNTY,
(NEW-YORK,) APRIL 5, 1776.

The Minutemen, and those enlisted, and to be enlisted into the Continental service, to be taken from the above.

The Regiment is about two-thirds furnished with bayonets, and the others are getting them as fast as they can have them made. They are furnished with half a pound of powder, and two pounds of ball, per man; and a magazine in the Regiment is to furnish them with about as much more when it shall be wanted. They are pretty industrious in fixing their accoutrements, and I hope in a short time they will be tolerably well prepared.

WILLIAM FLOYD.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress, or Committee of Safety, of New-York.

COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS TO HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Council-Chamber, April 5, 1776.

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

As a considerable number of our enemy's ships continue to parade in Boston Harbour and the Bay, so as to obstruct all such assistance in wood, fish, and other provisions, &c., as the inhabitants of the Town of Boston might otherwise receive by water; and which also prevents such a survey of said harbour as the Court intended, previous to their taking any determinate measures to their erecting the most effectual fortifications for its defence; it is therefore earnestly recommended to your immediate consideration, whether one thousand men might not be employed to the best advantage, grounded on the partial survey already made, by taking post at the same instant at Long-Island, Pettick's Island, and Nantasket; they being furnished with suitable cannon, ammunition, tents, or barracks, provisions, boats, &c.; such men (if not to be spared from the Continental Troops now under the direction of the Court) to be raised and embodied immediately, upon the same pay with those raised for the defence of the sea-coasts, with such further encouragement as may be thought proper for every armed vessel of our enemy taken or destroyed by them.

In the name, and by order of the Council:

JAMES OTIS, President.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF VIRGINIA.

Williamsburgh, April 6, 1776.

MY COUNTRYMEN: Since our enemies talk of offering to us terms of accommodation, and propose, as a foundation for treaty, the good favour shown to their own officers and soldiers in Boston and its environs, in granting them liberty to eat potatoes and fish, I said it would be but fair to state our demands on the opposite column. Before our dissensions were carried to such a height, and our injuries multiplied to such an enormous degree, for the sake of peace, and to get as well rid as we could of their insolence, we only required them to repeal all the acts they had thought proper to add to the Constitution since the year 1763. But can any American, with patience, think of suffering them to commit what ravages they please; and, when they feel their power too weak to accomplish all their iniquitous projects, then to make up the difference upon their own terms? Can we condescend to accept of a peace, that, however proper it might have been a few years ago, in our present circumstances can have no colour of equity? Reflect what an enormous expense the Colonies have incurred, how many losses they have sustained by this dispute, that, in all reason, ought to be defrayed by the aggressors against the publick peace, who have committed the depredations, and occasioned the expense. I am too remote from the centre of intelligence to be able to make an exact estimate of the injuries we have suffered during this war. I shall enumerate some of the capital articles, such as have come under every man's observation; and that, when collected and arranged together, will amount to a sum which will, perhaps, surprise common newspaper readers, who have never taken the trouble of computing it. To begin with the largest sum: I think they are very justly chargeable with the loss of our trade, and of all the profits that annually accrued from it. These, if I mistake not, have been generally estimated at a round sum of four millions per annum—a loss which we in this Colony most sensibly feel, in the almost total want of cash; our staple becomes a useless lumber; all our other merchantable commodities reduced to half price; and three hundred and fifty thousand slaves rendered incapable of doing us any essential service.

Our next considerable loss is the destruction of the towns of Boston and Charlestown, and their neighbourhood, which, with the other losses of the inhabitants, we may fairly compute at one million and fifty thousand pounds. To reduce these to particulars, the burning of about one thousand houses, valued very moderately, is one hundred and fifty thousand pounds; and for the defacing of the rest, and destruction of merchandise, &c., we may reckon double that sum; and the expense of thirty thousand inhabitants driven from their habitations, to subsist as they can in the country; because it makes no difference in the publick loss whether they support themselves out of their own private fortunes, or are provided for by common charity; these, I say, we cannot rate at less, upon an average, than twenty pounds per man, annually, which makes a charge of six hundred thousand pounds; and the whole amount is one million and fifty thousand pounds, as above. But, to put off all objection, let us rate it at a million, which will be due to us at the beginning of May instant.

Next to this we may place the burning of Norfolk and some small towns in New-England. The damage may be estimated at four hundred thousand pounds; and other incidental charges for piracies, robberies, and sheep-stealing, (which, by-the-by, would have been reckoned felony in England.) at fifty thousand.

Add to these the expenses of the war, which I know no better way of estimating than from the bills of credit that have been emitted for the supporting of it; and which, in our present circumstances, must unavoidably be so much publick loss, when this money comes to be redeemed. This sum is pretty easily come at. The Congress have issued three millions of dollars; the Convention of this Colony three hundred and fifty thousand pounds; and all the other Colonies together, at least one million and fifty thousand pounds. To bring these different estimates together into one sum:

For the loss of trade, - - - - -	£4,000,000
Destruction of Boston , Charlestown , &c., - - - - -	1,000,000
Burning Norfolk , &c., - - - - -	400,000
Incidental charges, by theft, &c., - - - - -	50,000
Continental bills of credit, nearly - - - - -	1,000,000
Virginia do., - - - - -	350,000
The other Colonies do., - - - - -	1,050,000
	£7,850,000

Almost eight millions of pounds, or considerably above twenty millions of dollars, Continental currency. And in this reckoning I have not mentioned the whole estates of the proprietors of Boston and other towns, that will, probably, be forever lost to their right owners; nor the expenses attending the removal of the inhabitants of this and other Colonies near the sea-coasts and harbours into the remoter parts of the country; and all the other computations are made with the greatest moderation—lower by far than our real loss: so that the whole may be reckoned at twenty-four millions of dollars, the best common standard of reckoning for the whole Continent. What a prodigious sum for the United States of America to give up for the sake of a peace, that, very probably, itself would be one of the greatest misfortunes! For the Government of Britain, ashamed to be baffled in their favourite project, would, doubtless, employ all the wicked arts of policy, of bribery, corruption, places, and pensions, in which they are well skilled—unhappy arts that have already brought that nation to the brink of ruin—that they might steal from us, too, what they were unable to wrest by open violence. Who, with the spirit of a man, that is able to level a gun, will submit to such a mortifying degradation, and to a loss of a very large proportion of all the property in the country?

The state of the controversy is very different now from what it was a few years ago, before we had taken arms in our own defence, and before the whole course of Government was removed out of its usual channel. And measures that might have been wise and prudent then, would now carry on their face the most glaring impropriety. I trust in God, that the guardians of the publick interests of the Continent will have wisdom and integrity enough not to betray us. But, relying on their virtue as much as it deserves, it will be a useful expedient to keep alive the flame of liberty and publick spirit among the people at large, never to neglect the exercise of the undoubted prerogative of freemen to instruct their Representatives; and every wise and honest man among them will take a pleasure in hearing the opinion and advice of his countrymen. It will give them confidence and alacrity in planning wise and decisive measures, when they know they are also the voice of the publick, and when they hear you engaging to support them, in the execution of them, with your lives and fortunes. Instruct your Representatives, therefore, to agree to no peace, or even truce, with Great Britain, without an entire reimbursement of all losses, and the absolute and unconditional repeal of all the acts of the British Parliament injurious to the legislation or commerce of America, as well before as since the year 1763; or, if their poverty or their pride will not comply with the first of these conditions, till they acknowledge us to be a free and independent Republick. Many to whom this language is new, may, at first, be startled at the name of an independent Republick, and be ready to represent to themselves that the expenses of maintaining a long and important war will exceed the disadvantages of submitting to some partial and mutilated accommodation. But let these persons point out to you any other alternative than independence or submission. For it is impossible for us to make any other concessions without yielding to the whole of their demands. We have not armed from one end of the Continent to the other, and expended so many millions, merely to drown a chest of tea, but to oppose the dangerous authority the English House of Representatives has usurped, pretending a right to bind us in all cases whatever; which, if we admit, either in whole or in part, immediately draws after it an endless train of miseries. Shall we, then, after reluctantly so effectually against this yoke of oppression, be contented now, almost in the midst of our success, to receive it entire on our necks, rather than separate from a country to which we have so long been supposed to be in a state of subjection, when we ought only to have been considered in a state of alliance? For this must be the necessary effect of an accommodation on any other principles than those I have laid down. Their proposition is so invidious that every single part involves in it every other. And if we think to swallow any of them with safety, we shall only be undeceived by being fairly and effectually choked by the whole group. Where is the wisdom of this squeamishness about independence pretended by the Assembly of Pennsylvania, or by any other Assembly or Convention on the Continent? There appears to be moderation in it, indeed; but it is the moderation of a Spaniel dog, that grows more tame in proportion to the ill usage he receives. And for the expenses we are likely to incur by the war, what proportion will they bear to the enormous sums that will be necessary to gratify half a million of starving villains, who cannot be provided with pensions enough in England, Scotland, and Ireland, to glut their voracity? What proportion will they bear to the enormous sums that will be expended to enable some of the meanest wretches of the species among ourselves, to roll in state over all the cultivated lands in the country; to impose new quit-rents; to ransack land offices; to annul patents and grants of lands; to apply immense quantities to their own use; and to exact exorbitant fees for permitting the proper owners to enjoy the rest? What if we should be obliged to encumber ourselves with double the load of our present expenses? A few years of free and universal trade would enable us to redeem it all; as well as the losses we have sustained, or are likely to sustain by their piracies, robberies, thefts, plunders, assassinations, or murders.

The proof of this shall be the subject of another paper.

A PLANTER.

GENERAL LEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 18, 1776, and referred to Mr. Réed, Mr. Clinton, and Mr. Braxton.]

Williamsburgh, April 6, 1776.

SIR: As the curtain is now, in a great measure, drawn up, by the happy interception of the letters from the Secretary of State to Governour Eden, which will be transmitted to the Congress by the Committee of Safety from this place, you will perceive, sir, that we, of all Provinces, should not be deficient in the important article of powder. I submit it, therefore, to your prudence, whether it will not be necessary immediately to add a few tons to our present stock. I find myself a good deal distressed for artillerymen and officers. I apprehend General Washington could now, without inconvenience, spare us a company from the main Army. The Regiments are here complete in numbers, the men fine, and the officers, by all I can learn, good, but horribly deficient in arms, shoes, and blankets. The deficiency of arms, I know, is general, therefore I shall not venture to apply for them; but if blankets could possibly be procured, a multitude of lives would be saved, for the night dews in this country are very destructive. The want of gun-carriages prevents my taking a certain post, the possession of which would be, in my opinion, worth a victory, in all its forms. I have ordered the artificers to work night and day, and hope it may not be too late. When I have given the instructions, and taken the measures which I think necessary for the security of this place and York, which, most probably, will be the enemy's object, I shall set out for North-Carolina, which, we have reason to think, will be the first scene of their diabolical operations. You will excuse, sir, the blots and shortness of this letter, as the express waits.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To His Excellency John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

GENERAL LEE TO SAMUEL PURVIANCE.

Williamsburgh, April 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I know not to whom I can address this most important note with so much propriety and assurance of success, as to yourself. The crisis will not admit of ceremony and procrastination. I shall, therefore, irregularly address you in the language, and with the spirit, of one bold, determined, free citizen to another, and conjure you, as you value the liberties and rights of the community of which you are a member, not to lose a moment, and, in my name, (if my name is of consequence enough,) to direct the commanding officer of your troops at Annapolis immediately to seize the person of Governour Eden. The sin and blame be on my head. I will answer for all to the Congress. The justice and necessity of the measure will be best explained by the packet transmitted to you by the Committee of Safety from this place.

God Almighty give us wisdom and vigour in this hour of trial.

Adieu, dear sir. Yours, most sincerely,

CHARLES LEE.

To Samuel Purviance, Esq., Chairman of the Committee, Baltimore.

GENERAL LEWIS TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Williamsburgh, April 6, 1776.

SIR: I with pleasure embrace this first opportunity that has offered, of returning the honourable Continental Congress my unfeigned thanks for the mark of distinction they have conferred on me, in promoting me to so honourable, a rank in their service. Gratitude to them, and the real regard I have for the interest of my country, are motives sufficient to occasion the utmost exertion of my poor abilities, which I promise most heartily and faithfully, and wish it may be in my power to demonstrate, by actions becoming my rank, the real sentiments of my heart.

Men sufficient for the completion of the regiments are inlisted; but as several companies have not reached their places of destination, all the commissions are not given out; therefore I cannot at present give the officers' names, rank, and dates of commissions; but it shall be done as soon as in my power.

I am, honourable sir, your most devoted, most obedient, and very humble servant,

ANDREW LEWIS.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

E. JOHNSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation for Calvert County, at the Court-House, in Prince Fredericktown, on Saturday, the 6th of April, 1776, were present eight Members, Mr. Benjamin Mackall in the chair.

Resolved, That the Council of Safety be informed that this Committee have received a barrel of Gunpowder, said to contain ninety-three and three-quarter pounds, and a parcel of Lead Shot, said to weigh four hundred ninety-five and a half pounds, from the Committee of Charles County; that they have collected from individuals Powder and Lead and Flints, to the amount of thirteen Pounds currency, which they distributed amongst the Militia of this County at the different alarms.

Signed by order:

E. JOHNSON, Clerk.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

ROBERT MORRIS TO GENERAL GATES.

Philadelphia, April 6, 1776.

Our friend Lee has taken possession of the Palace at Williamsburgh, which I fancy will not be much approved by the gentlemen of that country. However, he will soon be called to North-Carolina, if it be true that Clinton has effected a landing with fifteen hundred men at Wilmington, and thrown up intrenchments there. In short, the scene thickens, and if our enemies can find men, we may expect to be attacked in all quarters; but to do this, they must certainly have recourse to foreigners, as they cannot meet success in the recruiting service in any of the three Kingdoms.

Where the plague are these Commissioners? If they are to come, what is it that detains them? It is time we should be on a certainty, and know positively whether the liberties of America can be established and secured by reconciliation, or whether we must totally renounce connection with Great Britain, and fight our way to a total independence. Whilst we continue thus firmly united among ourselves, there is no doubt but either of these points may be carried; but it seems to me we shall quarrel about which of these roads is best to pursue, unless the Commissioners appear soon, and lead us into the first path. Therefore, I wish them to come, dreading nothing so much as even an appearance of division amongst ourselves.

I am, &c.,

ROBERT MORRIS.

To General Gates.

ELBRIDGE GERRY TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Philadelphia, April 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have just time to send you by the post a newspaper, in which is inserted the resolves of Congress for opening of American Ports to all nations except such as are subject to the King of Great Britain. It is a matter of importance that these resolves should be published in all the papers, and sent to every part of Europe and the West-Indies not inimical to the Colonies. I doubt not the Committee of Correspondence, or other suitable persons, will be desired by the honourable Court to attend to such a measure, and cause the same to be republished in the foreign papers.

I hope by the next post to send some blank commissions and instructions for letters of marque, and the resolves of Congress relative thereto, they being now in the press.

I remain, sir, respectfully, your very humble servant,

ELBRIDGE GERRY.

To the Honourable James Warren, Esq., or, in his absence, William Cooper, Esq., Speaker of the honourable House of Representatives, Massachusetts-Bay.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF PHILADELPHIA.

If ever there was or can be a question that ought to engage the serious attention of every man whose lot is cast in this American land, it is that now agitated, viz: In what shape we shall hereafter exist as a people? Whether we shall preserve the ancient forms of Government, which have led us to our present rank and importance in the world, or explore the dark and untrodden way of Independence and Republicanism? I hope it will not be objected to me, that I have connected the idea of separation from Great Britain with that of erecting a Republick in America. I have in this followed the author of Common Sense; and, indeed, it can hardly be supposed, nor has it been suggested, that, when we set up for ourselves, we shall immediately again set up for a Kingly Government. Our new legislators would persuade us, that when these Colonies have shaken off the British yoke, they will calmly sit down with one heart and one voice, to form themselves into a great Republick. They will be governed by the pure dictates of wisdom, and influenced by a love of liberty in framing their new constitution. Passion and prejudice will have no hand in it. Ancient grudges and dislikes, clashing interests and religious discords, will be done away. Thus assembled, and thus disposed, who can doubt but that they will rear up a fabrick upon the ruins of the English form of Government, that shall be the admiration of the world, and endure forever? That men do, or at least affect to believe, this will be the case, I have no more doubt than that it certainly would not happen accordingly.

However, as it is but common prudence to consider an evil before we devise a remedy, let us take a view of the state of these Colonies before the existence of our present disputes; and I will venture to affirm that political liberty never existed in greater perfection than here. Some abuses, indeed, we had reason to be uneasy under; but they were rather complained of as establishing precedents for future violations, than as severely felt. The consequence, then, is plain, that redress of these grievances, and security from future ones, should be the objects of this contest. But whence (it will be asked) shall we procure this security? I answer, from solemn compact, mutual interest, and length of time. Great Britain, by this dispute, will be taught that her true interest lies in a friendly connection with us; and a few years hence a similar attempt will be impracticable, from our increase of numbers and strength.

But the most singular argument urged to reconcile us to this intended political change, is drawn from the imperfection of the English Constitution—a Constitution, till this Utopian started up, the admiration of the world, and which, at this moment, gives birth to the only freemen in the habitable globe! It would be improper in this place to enter fully into a vindication of the mixed form of the English Constitution, and it is extraordinary, that one who has lived under it, should want any other guide than his own consciousness.

It is the language of our lawyers, that a King of England is absolute in doing good, but he has no power to do wrong. This we have seen exemplified in the history of the Stuarts, who, with as much inclination to be despotick as any Princes on earth, found the attempt fatal to their family. The same may be said of the other parts of the Constitution; and unless there is a conspiracy of the whole to subvert its liberty, it must ever remain unshaken. Why may not such a conspiracy take place in a Republick, as well as in a mixed Monarchy? The temptation is equally great, and the road to it much easier, where one body is to be brought into it, than three.

I would refer the reader to Judge Blackstone's Commentaries, and shall only cite from him the following observations: "Here, then, is lodged the sovereignty of the British Constitution, and lodged as beneficially as it is possible for society. For, in no other shape could we be as certain of finding the three great qualities of Government so happily united. If the supreme power were lodged in any one of the three branches, separately, we must be exposed to the inconveniences of either absolute Monarchy, Aristocracy, or Democracy, and so want two of the three principal ingredients of good policy—either virtue, wisdom, or power. But the constitutional Government of this Island is so admirably tempered and compounded, that nothing can endanger or hurt it, but destroying the equilibrium of power between one branch of the Legislature and the rest. Herein consists the true excellence of the English Constitution, that all the parts of it form a mutual check upon each other. In all tyrannical Governments, the supreme magistracy, or the right of making and enforcing laws, is vested in one and the same person; and wherever these two powers are united, there can be no public liberty. In England, this supreme power is divided into two branches; the one legislative, to wit: the Parliament; the other executive, consisting of the King alone. The total union of them would be productive of tyranny."

When the reader has perused the book from whence these extracts are taken, he must decide for himself which of the two is of most authority, Judge Blackstone or the author of Common Sense.

What is there, either in theory or experience, that can make us in love with a Commonwealth? It will be said, that the good of the people being the object of Government, the whole administration of it should be in their hands. But this does not follow; for if the happiness of the people is better promoted by leaving but part in their hands, that mode is most eligible. For instance, if the laws which the people make will be better observed by entrusting the execution of them to a Magistrate, or Magistrates, who are not immediately accountable to, and do not stand in awe of the populace, certainly it is the wisest method. That this is the case, both reason and fact verify. Where popular opinions and prejudices interfere in the execution of laws, what Magistrate, depending on the breath of the people, would dare to adhere to the letter of the law, and render himself obnoxious to the prevailing party, and consequently part with his office? This observation is equally true in fact. The worst Judges I have ever seen, are those who have some favour to ask of the people. An elective Judge is a monster in Government. Without some other constitutional aid, in vain would the feeble hand of justice endeavour to support the balance against a powerful prevailing faction. I should much doubt if justice is better administered in Rhode-Island than some of the monarchical Colonies, or even in Westminster-Hall.

I believe history, ancient or modern, will make few Republicans. He that reads the state of the Grecian or Roman Republicks, what doth he read, but scenes of domestic violence and rapine, war and bloodshed? Even the virtue of individuals could not preserve them from crumbling to pieces. Like ill-constructed machines set in motion, they perished by their own instability and unwieldiness. Nor will the Commonwealths of our own times excite our envy. I know of but two pure Democracies in the world, viz: Connecticut and Rhode-Island. Those of Holland, Switzerland, and Italy, are Aristocracies—of all tyrannies the least supportable. If any one chooses to turn panygerist, and declaim in praise of the two I have mentioned, I have no objection.

But it must be acknowledged that the English Constitution, like all other human systems, is in some parts imperfect, and open to corruption. The unequal representation by means of Boroughs, and the length of Parliaments, have made them less amenable to the people, and introduced a system of venality. How long this poison will operate before the vitals are affected, or whether the soundness of the Constitution will one day throw it off, time must discover. In this happy land of Pennsylvania, we have imitated its excellencies without its defects. Our mode of representation being uniform and equal, the election from year to year, and the right of our Assemblies to sit on their own adjournments, not subject to dissolution or prorogation, have corrected the errors of the British Government, and made this the most perfect and happiest in the known world. But should we, in an evil hour, barter it for an uncertainty, or a certainty of having a much worse, it would be madness in the extreme. I flatter myself the good people of this Province will seriously take the consideration of this great question to heart; that they will not shrink back from the contest, but, with their usual good sense, assert their attachment to their ancient happy Constitution.

When attempts are made to plunge us into anarchy, and rob us of that equal liberty under which this Province has so signally flourished; when the Constitution itself is threatened with dissolution, because its guardians have instructed our Delegates to preserve it sacred, it is criminal to be silent. But the spirit of the friends to the Constitution was up, and, by a timely zeal in supporting our Assembly, the attempt was crushed in its shell.

As the complexion of this Province will be known by our conduct, on the 1st day of May, I hope we shall exercise that great constitutional right as becomes freemen attached inviolably to their form of Government. The weight we have in the American scale makes it an object of the last importance, too great to be sported away in compliance with the designs or dreams of modern lawgivers.

CIVIS.

GENERAL HEATH TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

City of New-York, April 6, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Murray applies to me for an approbation of your permit to go on board the ship Dutchess of Gordon. As by the permit it appears that he is restricted only relative to the fortifications, I cannot, consistent with my duty, consent to his going on board, unless under greater restrictions.

I am, sir, with respect, your most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

JACOB CONCKLIN TO COLONEL HASBROUCK.

April 6, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed I send you the proceedings of a choice in my company, performed this day, under the inspection of Captain Drake, of the New-Marlborough Precinct, and myself, by which you will see that John Crowell, by a plurality of voices, is chosen Ensign. And I have good reasons to believe him to be a true friend to the American cause, and I think will exert himself on all occasions to defend his bleeding country. I should be glad his commission could be sent for him immediately.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

JACOB CONCKLIN.

To Colonel Jonathan Hasbrouck.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER AT MONTREAL, DATED APRIL 6, 1776.

By a gentleman from Quebeck, we have the following advices, which may be depended on: A number of Can- dians, at the instigation of their Priests, arose with a design to cut off our guards at Point-Levi. A party under Major Dubois attacked their advance guard, killed seven, wounded five, and took about fifty prisoners, twenty-five of which arrived here last evening. General Wooster arrived before Quebeck on Monday last. The battery opened at Point-Levi on Tuesday morning. One of Captain Lamb's Company made his escape from Quebeck, and informs that the soldiers and prisoners are at an allowance of three ounces of pork per day. A Canadian, who brought letters from Carleton to the inhabitants, is made prisoner, and says (which he offers to swear to) that the inhabitants, as well as soldiers, have risen in a body and gone to Carleton, and that he promised, if he did not get assistance in fourteen days, to deliver up the town.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN THE CONTINENTAL ARMY BEFORE QUEBECK, DATED APRIL 6, 1776.

Our battery at Point-Levi has been firing some days. The mortar-battery on the heights is not quite finished; and in two days we will have another battery at the Little-River. We have had a prodigious quantity of snow this winter; the tops of fences just begin to appear, and I suppose that in a few days the roads will be impassable. I shall continue as long as there is a probability of the town's being taken. We are discouraged at General Lee's not coming; however, General Wooster has arrived. We ought to have at least ten thousand men more here, in case of troops arriving; otherwise, the Canadians who have assisted us will be ruined. This Province is the key of America.

INFORMATION FROM CANADA.

A Canadian went into Quebeck about the 17th of March, at night; he came out with packets, supposed commissions and despatches, to Senior, at Island Crane, to raise a party out of the guard at Point-Levi.

That sixty or seventy people joined their people; that seven were killed and four wounded; that thirty-eight prisoners were taken—twenty-five brought to Montreal; that the river was not frozen over at Quebeck; that the Canadians are very hearty in our cause; that he does not know that they understand the controversy.

That they put their prisoners to a short allowance; that McLean wrote to Campbell that they had the same allowance as garrison.

One of Lamb's men escaped—went into the bomb-proof in the yard—jumped over the wall, and over the city wall—said he had heard of Lamb, that he had lost left eye. Twenty-five hundred troops there—snow deep when he came away.

Met, 16th or 17th April, fourteen or fifteen boats—got to St. John's the large cannon (four thirty-twos, one twenty-four, and one eighteen) taken at Ticonderoga—General Thomas between Crown-Point and Ticonderoga—men healthy—one man a little wounded.

Fresh provisions and wood plenty—battery at Point-Levi began to play 3d April (four twelve-pounders—now three)—a bomb-battery on the Heights of Abraham—snow seven feet deep—Mott well—Hughes with him—Gano well—Goforth very fat at Three-Rivers—not more than a company there—Goforth more respected and feared than any man there—heard at camp troops left Boston 3d April.

Canadians expect vessels from 4th to 10th May, this year 20th May; that General Schuyler is driving with great spirit—has seen nothing like him.

Nicholson at Quebeck when he came away—Arnold recruiting—Clinton well. Must storm—three hundred and fifty men all—blockade. Carleton twelve or fourteen hundred.

Met General Thomas, 21st April, between Ticonderoga and Crown-Point. General Wooster paid his men in hard money at Montreal—Yorkers paid in paper, before Quebeck—that they are very cautious how any recommendations are given to New-York officers—Nicholson appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Canada Regiment.

To William Paulling, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

ISRAEL DICKINSON TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Stockbridge, April 6, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: On the 4th instant Timothy Edwards, Esq., one of this Committee, received a letter from two respectable gentlemen in Lanesborough, members of their late Committee, requesting his advice upon important political matters, a copy of which we have obtained of him, and herewith send. Upon the recommendation of the Selectmen and Committee of this town, he went there yesterday to give his advice. On his return, about four o'clock, P. M., in the road against the house of Colonel Jonathan Smith, five men attempted to stop him by violence—one laying hold of his coat, another his horse's bridle. He disengaged himself from the latter by striking him a heavy blow with a loaded whip; from the other, by the speed of his horse. About forty rods forward, three others appeared also in the road, with an apparent design to stop him. One placed himself on one side with a club; another of them on the other side, who made a violent stroke at Mr. Edwards with a hoe, which fell upon his horse's withers, at the same time calling Tory. Of enormities of this kind we think it our duty to give you the earliest notice.

We are your Honour's most respectful, obedient, humble servants,

SAMUEL BROWN, JUN.,
ASA BEMENT,
ERASTUS SARGEANT,

Committee of the Town of Stockbridge.

To the Honourable President of the Council of the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay.

Tenth Article in the Warrant for the March Meeting in Pittsfield is, "To see if the Town will direct their Committee what method to take to recover pay for handling persons that appeared to be inimical to their country, for time back and future."

On which Article the Town voted as follows, viz:

Voted, That this Town determine that said Committee, consisting, or having consisted, of who they may, are one and the same, from their first appointment to this day; and that all their transactions and determinations ought to be considered as the actions and proceedings of an adjourned court. Consequently, all matters and things that have not been finally determined, still have a day with them; and that, if there be any matters or things before them that are not yet determined upon, they (the Committee as it now stands) have as full power and authority to act upon as ever they had; and if any persons have, upon trial, appeared inimical to their country, or hereafter, on trial, may appear so, they are hereby empowered, so far as our united influence can support them, to tax such persons for their time therein expended on trial, and all other necessary charges; and, on refusal, to be committed to the common Jail, or otherwise confined, till paid; and in all other respects to deal with them, as to punishment, according to the directions of the Continental Congress, Provincial Congress, or General Assembly.

Voted, That if the said Committee shall apprehend any person or persons, and convene before them, whom they suspect to be inimical to their country, or to be guilty of any other misdemeanors, and, upon trial, are found innocent, in that case the said Committee have no pay for their time lost.

Voted, That if any complaint shall be brought before the said Committee by any person or persons, and if any complaint so brought be supported, then the offender be ordered by said Committee to pay all costs; and if the offender shall refuse to comply in paying the cost, then the offender shall be ordered to confinement in the common Jail, or elsewhere, until he comply and pay the costs, together with the commitment and charges thereof; and in case any complainant shall not support his complaint, said complainant shall be holden to pay the costs; and, upon his refusal, shall be committed as above-mentioned.

The foregoing is a true copy of the Tenth Article in the Warrant for the March Meeting in the Town of Pittsfield, for the year 1776, and of the Proceedings and Votes of the Town upon said Article.

Attest: ISRAEL DICKINSON, Town Clerk.

March 28, 1776.

Whereas a majority of the gentlemen belonging to the Committee of Correspondence of this County, at their Convention, holden at Stockbridge, on the 14th and 15th days of December, current, did vote and resolve that they would come into some method whereby the inhabitants of this County shall recommend and nominate to the Council suitable persons to be appointed Judges of the Inferior Court in this County:

2d. That they would not recommend it to the inhabitants of said County to support the Government formed and established within this Colony, agreeable to the recommendation of the Continental Congress, and to assist and support the several Executive Officers in the execution of their offices:

3d. That this Convention recommend it to the Freeholders, and other inhabitants qualified, of the several Towns within this County, that they meet in their respective Towns, Districts, and Plantations, some time before the 1st day of January next; in which meeting they bring in to the Moderator thereof their votes, or ballots, for four persons who, in their esteem, should be commissioned to sustain the offices of Judges of the Pleas for the County; which ballots, or votes, so brought in, shall, in the presence of the Selectmen and Clerk of each respective Town, be enclosed and sealed and subscribed to a Committee appointed by the several Towns and Districts and Plantations in the County, to sort and count the same; which Committee shall meet on the 2d Tuesday of January next, at the house of Samuel Goodrich, Innholder, in Lenox, and then and there shall sort, count, and discover the persons thus nominated by the people; which persons thus chosen by the greatest number of votes shall be, by said Committee, represented to the honourable Council Board, praying that the same may be commissioned to exercise the office of Judges of the County: provided that, if it should so happen that a greater number than four persons should have an equal number of votes, then, and in that case, it is submitted to the honourable Council, that they exercise their pleasure in appointing, out of said number nominated, which four shall officiate:

4th. Voted, That this body do not approve of any civil officer not nominated by the Representatives of the County.

Which Votes and Resolutions we, the subscribers, (being likewise of the Committee of Correspondence,) dissented from and disapproved of—First, Because we imagine that they are directly opposed to the present civil Constitution of this Colony, which has been taken up by the people in consequence of, and agreeable to, the advice of the Continental Congress; Secondly, They tend to dissolve all Government, and introduce dissension, anarchy, and confusion, among the people; for when we deviate from the established rules, we are lost in the boundless field of uncertainty and disorder. Therefore, that we may evidence to the people of the several Towns from whence we came, and to all other good people, our great desire for order and good government, our firm adherence to the Resolves of the Continental Congress and the present Constitution of this Colony, agreeable to said Resolves, and an abhorrence of all anarchy and disorder, we hereby manifest our disapprobation of the Votes and Resolves of said Committee of Correspondence aforesaid.

of the Convention of the Committees of Correspondence for the County of Berkshire, held at Stockbridge, on the 14th and 15th days of December last, in abhorrence and detestation.

Attest: JOHN MASON, Town Clerk.

Lanesborough, April 3, 1776.

SIR: Permit us to crave your attention, and, if worthy, your advice and assistance, in our present disturbed circumstances in this town, which, briefly as possible, we mean herein to relate; which if we may not lay before you in your judicial capacity, we pray and hope you will attend to as a friend to justice, regularity, and our Continental cause. We have, with the first exertions, manifested a disposition and readiness to adopt all probable measures to assist and support the just cause of America; which our opponents cannot deny, as we were not behind them in any approved measure, as covenanting and adhering to the Continental Congress, the Congress and Council, and House of Representatives of this Colony, and did, and will still, give obedience to the same; which we hope will be manifested on proper occasions. But as some individuals, (we suppose very few,) from sinister designs of self-interest and preferment, though neither qualified nor worthy, have opposed the honourable Continental Congress, and the honourable Council and House of Representatives of this Province, and obtained a considerable number of adherents to join in obstructing the Courts of Justice, and the officers thereof, in the execution of their office; such adherents being, generally, misled zealots, or such as were not of an honest disposition with respect to paying their just debts; which proceedings, we apprehend, may be of baneful consequences to our country's cause; and as the northern part of this County, and this town in particular, are liable to be suspected of being chargeable with such disorderly, illegal, and unjustifiable proceedings, which, we fear, may infect not only this County, but this Province and Continent, by opening a door for anarchy, and every disorder consequent thereto; and as we have, on every opportunity, as far as we perceived any expediency, testified our disapprobation of such gross irregularities, we are yet steadily disposed to continue so to do, and, if possible, to exculpate ourselves, and we presume, the large majority of this town might also be exculpated, as also, to the best of our intelligence, the greatest part of the northern part of this County, especially all persons of understanding, interest, and honesty, and such as have proved themselves steady friends to the just cause of America. And, presuming that our local circumstances have afforded us opportunity to observe the general progress and present state of our disorders, and that it might be of public utility to give proper information, and, if possible, to exculpate ourselves, and others who are innocent, we take this opportunity to inform you of such particulars as we can sufficiently prove. Many particulars that might be proper to insert, we must omit for brevity, unless upon some future occasion it might be, by you or others, advised or counted necessary. If you think these hints may be serviceable, we stand ready to manifest them in a publick manner; and, first, it may be proper to observe, that Ensign (now Colonel) Jonathan Smith, being delegated by us to Congress, and to the House of Representatives, was pretty generally received by us as a warm friend to liberty; but immediately upon the nomination of Judges, Justices, &c., for this County, he frequently and warmly declaimed and harangued against said nomination and appointment, declaring that the persons so nominated were enemies to their country, and had obtained their nominations clandestinely; that they were very obnoxious to this County, as being of arbitrary principles friends to the late Government, and extortive in their practices and in their offices, and that they were not to be tolerated to officiate; which conduct of said Mr. Smith was not only observed, but approved by many who were conversant with him. Mr. Smith, finding that our Committee of Correspondence were generally, though not entirely, approvers of this conduct, he procured meeting after meeting of said Committee, called Conventions of the Committees of the northern towns of the County, at Lenox, Pittsfield, and elsewhere, wherein his conduct and adherents occasioned considerable disturbance. But it was generally supposed he acted disinterestedly, only aiming at the interest of the country and County; till, upon trial of making a nomination for Judges amongst ourselves, we found Mr. Smith could find weighty objections against any we could nominate. Then we began to perceive the cause of his exertions was for his own advancement to a seat that very lately there would not, perhaps, have been ten persons in the County would have counted him either qualified for or worthy of. Notwithstanding, there are a few who adhere to him; amongst whom we fear there are few of ability or integrity. On the 23d of February last, in the evening, there were assembled, we suppose, upwards of thirty persons at our Town-House, generally at his motion, when he, in a harangue of a considerable length, declaimed against the appointment of the Judges, &c., and insisted that they would not be allowed to officiate; though that he (Mr. Smith) would not be instrumental in breaking up the Courts; but declared that he had rather submit to Lord North than consent to have them officiate. The consequence may be observed on this Convention at Pittsfield, and their resolves. Our town was so far alarmed at the irregularity of said Convention, that several resolved, previous to our meeting, to make a choice of new officers, at least to change Smith and his adherents. But Mr. Smith and others hearing thereof, they entered the meeting in a passionate and tumultuous manner, accusing all who durst oppose them of being Tories, which alarmed a great many. Notwithstanding his opposers had their choice of a Moderator by proxy, yet he and his friends would allow of no business being done till they agreed to nominate each party by turns. The law was, by them, disclaimed. Orders from the Assembly for choosing a Committee by proxy must not be performed, they fearing their numbers; and now those who were known to be opposed to Smith, &c., are characterized by him, &c., as the worst of Tories.

Dear sir, your advice is humbly requested by us in this situation; and if the foregoing information may be of service, we are able to prove it. But if there is anything further we can, in justice, do, we are ready to do it; but if we must be passive with our superiors, we would be glad of a word of direction to, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servants,

MILES POWELL,
FRANCIS GILTEAU.

To Timothy Edwards, Esq., Stockbridge.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM LONDON, DATED APRIL 7, 1776.

Lord Howe has at length agreed to command the fleet, and will sail in about ten days in the Eagle, line-of-battle-ship, of sixty-four guns. The whole of the armament that he brings, however formidable in appearance, will be very inadequate to the business, if the Provincials act with their usual spirit and prudence; that is, if they occupy good posts, intrench well, avoid a general action but upon great and sure advantage, harass the march, and intercept the convoys. All this their superior knowledge of the country will enable them to do, so as to distress, if not destroy, the invading Army.

The Regulars trust to their artillery, of which more has been shipped off, three times over, than ever went out of this Kingdom before. All this will embarrass their motions, and may retard all their movements, by proper precaution on the part of the Provincials.

As the Landgrave of Hesse is a notoriously dishonest man, it is probable the troops he furnishes will be the worst he has. The British troops are mostly new raised, and therefore, in discipline, will be inferior to the Americans. It is conceived, too, that if proper offers are made to the *German*s, they will desert in great numbers.

Not one of the ships-of-war has more than a third seamen—the rest are landmen; therefore, if the Provincial vessels attack any of them, it will not be surprising if they succeed. Such is the terror entertained of the service at land, that the officers of the Guards, now going, are clothed like the common men, that they may be in less danger; and it is supposed the whole Army will follow their example. Their apprehensions went so far as to make them talk of wearing breastplates.

The Provincials, with proper attention, may be greatly superior in cavalry, as there are but three British regiments, (and those light,) and one German. The Americans, both men and horse, being accustomed to ride through the woods, will have an infinite advantage in forced marches, beating up quarters, and cutting off convoys.

There are a thousand wagons and three thousand draft-horses sent for the artillery and baggage, which will cost them near two hundred thousand pounds, and may soon be destroyed by proper attention. The expense of this armament you may well conceive will be enormous. Six millions are already voted, and it is computed that full six more will be required. The extraordinaries only, of last year, exceeded eight hundred thousand pounds. If they do not succeed this campaign, which they will not be able to commence till July, all men agree that this country cannot support it longer, either in men or money.

Every nerve is now stretched, and every resource exhausted. Lord George Germaine therefore gives it out as encouragement, that the Americans will lay down their arms without a struggle; and that he has received the most humble offers from the Congress; but as he will not treat, he sends this armament to ensure an unconditional submission, of which he is secure. You may depend upon this language coming immediately from his lips.

The Corporation of London have voted the freedom of the city, in a gold box, to Dr. Price, for a pamphlet in defence of America; and petitioned the Throne for a declaration of the definitive terms intended to be granted to the Colonies. The King's answer was, that when they laid down their arms and submitted, he should think of mercy. The Colonies will therefore see that their safety depends solely on their firmness, unanimity, and prudence. It is no longer in their option to be independent or connected with this country, as before. Independency or slavery is the only alternative.

The whole of this armament may be expected by the latter end of July, as they will sail in May. Such is the rage against America, that the Administration are determined, at every hazard, to make one desperate push. The whole empire is put into the hazard, with the sole hope of enslaving a part; which the firmness and unanimity of the Colonies will, under God, infallibly disappoint.

VIRGINIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY OF MARYLAND.

Williamsburgh, April 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We could not suffer a moment to pass before we transmitted the enclosed copies of intercepted letters addressed by the Secretary of State to the Governour of your Province, which open the schemes of Administration to us in a more explicit manner than any intelligence that we have heretofore been able to procure. We have also enclosed copies of the same letters to the Chairman of the Committee of Safety at Baltimore, and have desired him to transmit copies of them to the Congress, with all possible despatch.

I am, for and by order of the Committee, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

JOHN PAGE, Vice-President.

To the Council of Safety of Maryland.

CAPTAIN BARRY TO MARINE COMMITTEE.

In sight of the Capes of Virginia, April 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have the pleasure to acquaint you that, at one o'clock, P. M., this day, I fell in with the sloop Edward, belonging to the Liverpool frigate. She engaged us near two glasses. They killed two of our men, and wounded two more. We shattered her in a terrible manner, as you will see. We killed and wounded several of her crew. I shall give you a particular account of the powder and arms taken out of her, as well as my proceedings in general.*

I have the happiness to acquaint you that all our people behaved with much courage.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

JOHN BARRY.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., or any of the Marine Committee.

GENERAL PUTNAM TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, April 7, 1776.

SIR: I arrived here on Wednesday evening last, having his Excellency General Washington's orders to take the command of the forces in this city, and to erect such works as I should think necessary for its defence; in which we are now busily employed. After getting the works in such forwardness as will be prudent to leave, I propose immediately to take possession of Governour's Island, which I think a very important post. Should the enemy arrive here, and get post there, it will not be possible to save the city, nor could we dislodge them without great loss.

The enclosed letter I received by express from Fort Constitution, last evening, which I should have immediately forwarded on to you, had the contents been such as required it; but as the fleet have not arrived, (which was the supposition of the gentleman who wrote it,) I thought it needless to forward it on by express.

Friday: Arrived at the Narrows a small ship of eighteen or twenty guns. Sent her boat immediately on board the Dutchess of Gordon. Soon after which the Governour, in the Dutchess, sailed; where bound we know not.

This morning she sent her boat to the watering-place for water. The day before, I had detached three companies of the Rifle Battalion to Staten Island, with orders to scour the shores. A midshipman and ten sailors were in her. She was fired upon, and lost two men. The riflemen took the rest prisoners, and hauled up the boat. The ship immediately began a heavy fire, and slightly wounded one man; since which, the ship has fallen down below the Narrows.

As hostilities are now commenced in this Province, I have thought fit to order no more provisions to be sent the men-of-war.

Enclosed is an extract of a letter received by the post, the contents of which I thought necessary to acquaint you with.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

ISRAEL PUTNAM.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Congress.

On board the Rhode-Island Packet, off Constitution Fort, }
April 5, 1776. }

SIR: We this evening arrived here, and, from curiosity, Mr. Chase and Mr. Carroll went ashore, and found the state of the fort as follows: Three Companies of Minute-men, (Captain Moffat's, Captain Raymond's, and Captain Woshon's), consisting of five Lieutenants, six sergeants, eight corporals, two drummers, one fifer, and one hundred and two privates. Mr. Seth Marvin, First Lieutenant of Captain Moffat's Company, has now the command.

On the south bastion are thirteen six-pounders and one nine-pounder, mounted; and on the east bastion are seven nine-pounders and one six-pounder, mounted. There are eighty-one quarter-barrels and one whole barrel of powder. About one half of the privates are armed, and about ten bayonets among them. In the block-house are eight double-fortified four-pounders, mounted. The fort, on the land side, is entirely open. There is not one gunner or artillery-man in the fort. Nothing but pork, beef, and flour; no vegetables. No Barrackmaster. The Minute-men work about six hours in the day, and that with great reluctance.

We are informed, by Captain Bedlow, that at Pooplophen's Kill there are one hundred and eighty troops, under * PHILADELPHIA, April 11, 1776.—This morning arrived a sloop, (mounting six three-pounders and eight or ten swivels,) late a tender, belonging to the Liverpool man-of-war, and commanded by a Lieutenant Boucher, of said ship, having thirty-five picked men on board, who, on Saturday last, off the Capes of Virginia, fell in with Captain Barry, of the Continental brig called the Lexington. A battle ensued, which was continued desperately for one hour and twenty minutes, when the tender struck.

the command of Lieutenant Lee; that six thirty-two-pounders, and all necessaries for cannon, except powder, arrived there on the 3d instant.

The fortifications directed by Congress on the 15th of February, and laid out by Mr. Smith, remain wholly neglected.

Hearing of the arrival of part of the fleet at the Hook, we thought it proper to give you this information by express. You will be pleased to communicate the substance of the above to Congress.

We are, sir, your obedient servants,

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,
SAMUEL CHASE,
CHARLES CARROLL
of Carrollton.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM EDMUND QUINCY TO COLONEL MIFFLIN, DATED STOUGHTONHAM, APRIL 1, 1776.

A Captain and two seamen, that were taken by the men-of-war, deserted on Friday from the fleet. They say the first division, consisting of the Fowey and Nautilus, with sixty-eight transports, sailed for Halifax last Monday. The second division, Admiral Shulldham, in the Chatham, the Centurion, and the Lively, with sixty-two transports, sailed Thursday. From all they could learn, they were bound to the southward, not half manned, and had been at short allowance fourteen days.

The Renoun, of fifty guns, the Senegal, of twenty-eight guns, and the Hope, of sixteen guns, moved from their station in King's Road, off the Light-House, for fear of our fire-rafts; but it is determined they shall put to sea speedily.

The Niger sailed Friday, with six transports, for Halifax. Had it not been for six transports that came from Halifax with fresh provisions, killed a month ago, they could not have gone to sea for some time, unless forced by our fire-rafts, under the command of Major Tupper.

It is said, by a vessel from London to the fleet, that fifty sail of merchantmen, loaded, were bound to Boston. It is to be hoped that Captain Manly will give some account of them.

The whole that sailed, Mr. Nutton says, had not three weeks' provision left. I hope the Philadelphia Fleet will speak with those gone southward.

A large mortar (thirteen and a half inch) was fished up near Mr. Row's wharf; where was also discovered, at low water, a great quantity of shot, shells, &c.

BURNETT MILLER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Easthampton, April 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: An opportunity presenting, we embrace it to acquaint you that our guard at Montauk, about sunset yesterday, saw a number of vessels to the southward of Block-Island, and this morning, being foggy, saw nothing of them; until, about nine o'clock, the fog cleared off in part, when they saw thirteen vessels between Fisher's Island and Gardiner's Island, but could not tell what sort of vessels they were, by reason of thick air. We saw this afternoon about eight or nine vessels, all together, off, against this town, standing to the eastward; but the fog came on, and saw no more of them. They have fired single cannon by spells, all this afternoon, from both quarters, and supposed they fired in order to keep the vessels together, the fog being very thick.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servants.

By order of the Committee of Easthampton:

BURNETT MILLER, Chairman.

To the New-York Committee of Safety.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, April 7, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: The regiments destined for Canada arrived here very incomplete. Sickness and desertion have still reduced them much more, so that our Army in Canada will fall greatly short of what was intended. I have, therefore, applied to Congress for a reinforcement, (as you will perceive by the enclosed,) not knowing that they had requested your Excellency to detach four regiments, of which I was only informed this morning by the gentlemen Commissioners, who then arrived. May I take the liberty, my dear General, to urge the necessity of their being speedily sent. I believe the route by the way of New-York will be as speedy as any, and give more ease to the soldiers, as they can be conveyed from thence to this place in sloops.

General Thomas leaves here to-morrow, and I shall accompany him to Ticonderoga.

I am, my dear General, with every sentiment of esteem and affection, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To General Washington.

GENERAL THOMAS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, April 7, 1776.

SIR: I arrived at Albany in five days after I left the camp at Roxbury, at which place I have been detained to this time, by reason of the lake's being impassable. The troops here and at Lake George are about eleven hundred, and I hear some few are at Ticonderoga and Crown-Point—prevented going forward, as the lakes are partly blocked up. What number are in Canada I cannot ascertain, but am sensible from the best intelligence, will be much short of an equal number, as I find the regiments are very incomplete. General Schuyler thinks they will be much short of five thousand; and should the Ministerial Troops there be reinforced, and Quebeck remain in their hands, so small a number must be thought to be inadequate for the defence of that quarter. Your Excellency will judge whether a reinforcement will not be necessary. The last intelligence from Canada was about the 25th of March, at which time things there remained in statu quo.

Doctor Franklin and others, of the Committee of Congress, arrived here this morning. As the weather this day or two is moderate, I am in hopes the lake may be passed in a few days. I determine to set off for the lake to-morrow.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

JOHN THOMAS.

To General Washington.

WALTER LIVINGSTON TO PRESIDENT OF NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, April 7, 1776.

SIR: By intelligence from York, I am informed that Major-General Lee has ordered four thousand barrels of pork from Connecticut to New-York, for the Army in Canada. I have long been in expectation of that pork arriving here. There is no pork to be purchased in Canada, and a large Army gone thither, which has induced General Schuyler (notwithstanding General Wooster has appointed contractors to furnish the Army under his command) to order me to write to New-York, to have the four thousand barrels sent up immediately; and if they are not arrived at New-York, to have other pork sent instead thereof, and to be replaced out of that which is ordered by General Lee. I know of nobody or person to whom I can apply for assistance, in this critical situation, that can give such effectual relief, as your House. I must, therefore, entreat you, sir, to request the House to give such orders as will be the means of forwarding the pork with the utmost despatch. Could I have learnt who was ordered to ship the pork from New-York, I should not have troubled the Congress. As the service requires despatch, I hope the Congress will deem it a reasonable excuse for my troubling them.

I am, sir, with esteem, your very humble servant,

WALTER LIVINGSTON, Deputy Com'y General.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq.

WINTHROP SARGENT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Gloucester, April 7, 1776.

SIR: The bearer of this has under his guard a number of prisoners and Tories, taken by Commodore Manly and Captain Waters. The prize is sent to Portsmouth. I make no doubt you have had an account of the capture before this reaches your Excellency. Their names you have below. There are two women and some children left here, which are not able to travel. Should be glad your Excellency would send me an answer to what I wrote you last about Captain Watts's goods, and what I am to do with the prisoners, for I have thirty here now upon expense.

I remain your humble servant,

WINTHROP SARGENT, Agent.

P. S. Since I wrote the above, Captain Tucker has carried the prisoners to Marblehead, whence they will be sent to Head-Quarters. Will not carry the women and children, for fear of the small-pox; so I am forced to provide for them here. Should be glad of your order in regard to the above.

Prisoners names: Caleb Whitten, bad man, John Hill, Arthur Spencer, Caleb Whitten, Jun., Joseph Hillen, John Whitten, William King, Duke Barters, John Burres, William McKenney, James Youling.

Yours, &c.,

W. S.

EDMUND PENDLETON TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Caroline, April 8, 1776.

DEAR SIR: On Friday last General Lee arrived safe in Williamsburgh, in a very rainy day, and much fatigued. We consider him as a valuable acquisition, and esteem it a favour in Congress to spare him to this department, where most people here think the gentry who found Boston too hot for them, will come, and be joined by the much-talked-of powerful force from Europe. However, I am not of that opinion, and think they either mean a descent upon some other part of New-England they like better, or, perhaps, by dividing our Army, may purpose to return to Boston with greater advantage, or else to go to Halifax, and wait for the season to go up to Quebeck. General Lee thinks if they come here, they will certainly make Williamsburgh their object; and on that supposition he is going to intrench it. I hear, since I came away, he has ordered all the battalions from their stations to that place, which has made the people in town very happy, but I fear will be very alarming to other parts, particularly the Northern Neck, who were before uneasy on the appearance of tenders in Potomack and Rappahannock.

It was mentioned in Committee before I came away, it would be proper to request our Delegates to transmit all publick proceedings of Congress, to be laid before the Convention at their meeting. They will probably have written on the subject, but I mention it lest they should from hurry overlook it.

I have seen your resolves about reprisals. Is it considered as a law we are now to execute, by granting commissions? or must we wait for a confirmation by our Convention? Elections are coming on. It seems Colonel Francis and Mr. Carter are left out, by the bulk of the freeholders being absent, and not expecting a contest.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

EDMUND PENDLETON.

To Richard Henry Lee, Esq., at Philadelphia.

JOSEPH BEALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Bladensburg, April 8, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Yours of the 29th ultimo I received yesterday. I have examined the powder according to your request, and find there are twenty-six barrels of coarse powder, including one that was brought on board the vessel, and four barrels and twenty kegs of fine powder, though there seems to be something of a mixture throughout the whole.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

JOSEPH BEALL.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

COLONEL HASLETT TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 9th April, 1776. Referred to the Committee on Prisoners.]

SIR: I am honoured with your letter of the 3d of April, and beg leave to inform you that, being well acquainted with the defenceless situation of the County of Sussex, on the first information of the Rocbuck's being in the road of Lewes, two companies of the battalion under my command were directed to do duty there, where they still continue.

The Council of Safety for this Government ordered the Militia arms of this County into the hands of the Continental Troops for the purpose of training; but I forbade them to be carried out of it. I have ventured on my own risk to send them, but know not how soon the Council will order them to be returned. I beg leave to inform you that the spirit of the troops is high, and hope their ardor in the generous struggle will produce its proper effects, provided they can be supplied with arms, which there is no probability of our being able to procure in this place.

The commanding officer at Lewes has sent up to Headquarters the Third Lieutenant of the man-of-war, and three soldiers, who were put on board the alarm pilot there, by them taken, and fitted out for a tender. On Wednesday, the 27th ultimo, cruising to the southward of the Cape, they sent all their men on board a Plymouth sloop they had made prize of, except the Lieutenant and three others. About four o'clock, next morning, the helmsman falling asleep, Providence steered the boat ashore, and they were soon after taken.

The Lieutenant informs us that the Roebuck left England last September, bound to Halifax, where she wintered, commanded by Captain Hammond. She carries forty-four eighteen and nine-pounders, mounted, and can mount ten more. I propose to keep the officers and men here under guard till the Congress is pleased to direct in what manner they shall be disposed of.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble servant,

JOHN HASLETT, Colonel.

To the Honourable Colonel Hancock.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL PUTNAM.

Philadelphia, April 8, 1776.

SIR: On Saturday I received a letter from General Heath requesting that some money might be sent to New-York for the use of the troops, which I immediately laid before Congress, and was authorized to forward one hundred thousand dollars; which I have accordingly sent by Captain Nathaniel Faulkner; and as I am uninformed whether the Paymaster is arrived at New-York, I have directed Mr. Faulkner to deliver the money to you. If the Paymaster is with you, please to order it to his care, for the use of the troops; if not, you will order the money to be improved for the payment of the troops under your command.

Please to acquaint General Heath that I received his letter, but have not time to write him now. You will please to forward me a receipt for the money.

Last evening I had the honour of your letter by Major Sherburne, desiring that three hundred thousand dollars may be sent for the use of the troops. As the Congress does not meet this day, I have judged it best to detain Major Sherburne here until I know the determination of Congress, which I shall know to-morrow, and whatever further sum they order I will despatch by Major Sherburne. In the mean time I have thought it most proper to send forward, by Captain Faulkner, the one hundred thousand dollars, as that sum may be improved until the other arrives.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Major-General Putnam, Commanding the Continental Troops at New-York.

RICHARD BUTLER TO COLONEL JAMES WILSON.

Fort Pitt, April 8, 1776.

SIR: I send this by express to inform you that Kiosola, and two other Indians, messengers from Colonel Butler, the King's Agent at Niagara, and the Commandant of the Six Nations, with a letter to Captain McKee, and a message to Kiosola, arrived there the 3d instant; a copy of which I send enclosed. Kiosola delivered the wampum he received, with a speech from the Six Nations, desiring his attendance at a treaty to be held at Niagara, and one from Colonel Butler and the commandant, to the same purport. He seemed determined to go, although he asked Captain Neville's and my advice; and as we saw it would be of no use to attempt to stop him, we thought it best to send him off pleased; therefore delivered him a small speech, (No. 1.)

and one as from yourself and the other Commissioners, (No. 2;) and as I had an opportunity to the Delawares, I sent them the speech, No. 3; all which I hope will meet your approbation. I considered that it would be best that the strange Indians should have a good opinion of us, therefore made them welcome, and sent them well pleased away, at as small an expense as possible. Kiosola desires me to inform you that he has but one heart, and that he will say or do nothing contrary to his engagements last fall; and that he does not doubt of preserving peace, as by what he hears from the Six Nations they mean no other. The Onondaga man (one of the messengers) says, that after Montreal was reduced, there came a great quantity of goods round by the north side of Lake Ontario, in a great many periaugurs to Niagara, and that great presents will be made there to the Indians. There are but few Indians come here from any quarter, and I think they would know their own importance, and expect their friendship shall be purchased as well as courted; yet, with prudent management, I believe they may be kept quiet at no very great expense.

The Indians are not a little alarmed, Kiosola tells me, at the exorbitant price of goods, that our traders charge them, and the great scarcity of ammunition and goods. They say, that at the treaty last fall here, we were to be one people; but that it seems as if we meant to take advantage of them by the times, and advising them to have nothing to do in taking part with those that could and would supply them reasonably if applied to; that they think it very odd at this time, when their relationship is desired, that these advantages should be taken to extort on them, when they could be supplied by the northward people at the usual terms; and he positively desired to know the reason, and when it might be expected to be remedied, that he might inform the people that might ask him. I gave him the following answers:

Friend Kiosola, it is true, it is hard just now; but our great men have your welfare at heart as well as ours, and will remedy that inconveniency as soon as possible—I hope between this and fall. The reason is this: we used to buy our goods from the people in England; but the present dispute hinders us from that now; but the people of Canada bought a great deal of goods from them last year, and have not yet sold them all; and we bought none, therefore are scarce; and for the future neither the Canadians nor us will buy any more English goods till these disputes are settled; but have sent to France and other parts, and that I am of opinion against fall they will be both plentifully and reasonably supplied, and I hope they would not be uneasy.

I inquired his reasons for not proceeding with the big belt last fall. He says he was disappointed by Captain Pipe, who was to have met him at the Moravian Town, as Mr. Gibson told him, but did not; then, he says, Mr. Gibson promised to send two of the Delawares from Neucomer's Town to him at the Wyandot Town, to go with him; but after his waiting there ten days, and seeing no likelihood of their coming, he thought it too difficult to attempt alone, and resolved on coming back. He says he called some of the Wyandots together, and charged them to be careful of their young men, and see that they did no mischief; and that he sent a message by a Wyandot man to the western tribes to inform them that there had been a Council here, and that what was said was very good; and that the messenger was to go by the Picts, and then to the Northern tribes, and relate what he was charged with. I then told him that the accounts that went to Philadelphia were, that he was stopped, and that the Northern tribes had threatened to cut the big belt in pieces if he offered to proceed; all which, he says, is false, and that they said nothing of the kind, but seemed quite well pleased. I then asked how Mr. Gibson came to be threatened by Logan. He says it was a report that came to the Wyandot Town by a Mingo man, and he thought it might be so; therefore had word sent to Mr. Gibson for fear, and that he might take care.

I called on Mr. McKee the 1st ultimo, and informed him that I had accounts of two messengers from Niagara, and that they had letters which I supposed must be for him; which I expected to be informed of on their arrival, and their embassy, and the contents of the letters, so far as they respected the good of the United Colonies; which he promised I should. On their arrival, Mr. McKee went to Colonel Croghan's, and there received his letter and the other messages already mentioned. Mr. Croghan, being chairman of the Committee, wrote to Mr. Thomas Smallman and Mr. John Campbell, to call on Mr. McKee to see his letter, and take his parole that he would not leave the neighbourhood of Pittsburgh till the next meeting of the Committee, which is to be on the 16th instant. It was shown to me, and my attendance desired, with Captain Neville to be present. We all attended, and Mr. Smallman gave Mr. McKee the letter from the Chairman. And on Mr. Smallman's demanding Mr. McKee's letter, he immediately complied, and gave it. It was read by Mr. Smallman, Campbell, and myself. His parole was then demanded, as above, which he complied with, and I forbade his sending any despatches, or doing any business with the Indians, without my knowledge, before Captain Neville, Messrs. Smallman and Grayson; which he promised also not to do. Mr. McKee observed that the spring business is now on, and his presence necessary at his farm; he expected he would be allowed to go to and from it till then, which was allowed by both Messrs. Campbell and Smallman. I cannot help reflecting a little on the proceedings against that gentleman, who really behaved very well on the occasion; for after they had agreed that he might go to and from his farm, on his parole, Mr. Campbell made a verbal demand the next morning of his parole in writing, which Mr. McKee looked upon as an unbecoming demand, as they had agreed to each other's demands and requests the day before, and that it had some design rather to offend, or put Mr. McKee to take measures (by straining their authority) that are quite unnecessary, if they proceed in a decent manner; and their taking those ill-marked steps may not have the effect that true friends to their country would wish; we therefore told Mr. Campbell that, when the Committee called on him in writing, he must answer them in writing also. I cannot help thinking there is more ill-nature than is necessary shown to that gentleman, as he is detained here ever since. I look upon it a little impolitick hindering him to speak to these Indians at this time, as there might still be some of the Committee or myself present, where anything might be said with safety, as a speech might be preconcerted that would save all appearances of our suspicion of their intending any harm, at the same time that proper care would be taken that they should do none. And I must say, in justice to Mr. McKee, that I have not seen one act that discovered an inimical intention to this country, as he might have done mischief, had he been so inclined, and gone where he would be caressed for it. Sir, this is not my single opinion, but of several respectable inhabitants of this country; and further, that he has been much more quiet than some others that would fain be thought great friends now. I cannot but think, sir, that Mr. McKee should have been prohibited doing any Indian business long ago, as it was reasonable to think that as long as he was not, there would be some directions to him, if but to try his attachment, and it would have kept those northward messengers from amongst our Indians, who are set a stir by any speech from any quarter.

April 9th.—This day Mr. John Gibson arrived with several Shawnees, to whom Captain Neville spoke, and informed them that to-morrow he would receive the white prisoners and the slaves. For other accounts relative to them, I refer you to Mr. Gibson, who writes by this express, which I have detained four days for his coming. I intend to address them to the same purport that I have the Delawares, as soon as Mr. Gibson has done the business with them.

Sir, there has been a survey made by Colonel William Crawford, of the long island, about four miles below this place, in the Ohio, for John Marvie and Charles Syms, Esqrs., and Captain John Neville, which is a direct breach of the treaty of Fort Stanwix, and the treaty here last fall; and the consequences are much dreaded by many people of these parts, as it is a precedent that will be apt to be followed by many; and that it will furnish the officers of the Crown, now going to treat with the Indians, with arguments that may tend much to the dishonour and disadvantage of the Colonies, as we should be punctual in observing our treaties with them, if we expect they should with us. I thought it my duty to acquaint you of it, that such steps may be taken as you may think proper to direct, to prevent any further proceedings of the kind, or any mischief that might follow; as I am sure that John Montour will paint it to our disadvantage on his return, as he claims it by virtue of his father's claim as an Indian, and it has been often talked of by Custologa, Captain Pipe, and other Indians. When an attempt was made to improve it by some white man, and John Montour proposed selling his right of it, they said it was not to sell it, that Montour was allowed to improve it, but, as an Indian, he might settle it, or any other part of their land.

Dear sir, I am obliged to renew the request of a little ammunition, as I find that all messengers expect a little, by way of provision for their return home. Captain Neville has let me have a little for the Onondaga and Mohawk men; and if I should refuse them, it not only implies a distrust, but exposes our poverty. As to other things, I can still get, though high. A smith is very much wanted. I hope you will be so kind as to give me directions, per return of this express, concerning these matters. I hope, sir, you will not take amiss my reminding you that a strict attention to Indian affairs is absolutely necessary, as the peace of the frontier country depends on their being quiet; and to the contrary, if we should be disturbed or driven, we must then oppress the interior part, that is too much distressed already. I have sent, some time past, for George Allen, and expect him every day. As soon as he receives his present, I shall take the first opportunity to inform you and the Assembly of it.

I have just called on Mr. Gibson, and informed him of my having your authority for superseding him; and when he had done the business that he had with these Indians, (which I understood is on account of the Virginia Commissioners,) it was your directions to me to let him know he was to do no more Indian business here. He then told me he would set off to Philadelphia, and would take these despatches; but thinking he would probably be detained some days on the road, and for other reasons, I thought it most prudent to send the express, as these matters ought to be laid before you as early as possible.

Dear sir, I hope you will be so kind as to give my most respectful compliments to Doctor Franklin; and be assured that I will use my utmost endeavours for the service of the Colonies.

I am, sir, with all due respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD BUTLER,
Agent and Interpreter.

To Colonel James Wilson.

P. S. I am sorry to inform you that party spirit prevails here as much as ever; and, indeed, through the country in general. I could say much more on this subject, but as I am convinced of your friendship, I am determined to do my duty, and say nothing about these matters, as I know how they stand in your opinion, as well the authors of the disputes as the abettors.

Kiosola talks of visiting the honourable the Congress, if agreeable, this summer. Shall be glad to know if so.

R. B.

COLONEL JOHN BUTLER TO ALEXANDER MCKEE.

Niagara, February 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you the 20th ultimo, acquainting you I was glad of the opportunity to inform you I was appointed to the care and charge of the Indian Department, in Colonel Johnson's absence. He has desired me to write you to meet me here at this place; and it is Colonel Caldwell's orders, and mine, that you attend a meeting we propose to hold at Niagara the beginning of next May. Your knowledge in the Indian affairs; your hitherto undoubted zeal for his Majesty's service, and the duty you owe to Government, makes your presence absolutely necessary at this place on or before the time above-mentioned; and as I now understand the Indian, who was to carry the same, has not proceeded to you, have hired an Onondaga Indian to carry this on purpose; by whose return I will expect your answer; in which I expect you will be kind enough to inform of anything worth notice that you may know respecting the proceedings of the Rebels your way. We have nothing worth notice to mention to you, only the reduction of Montreal by the Rebels, the particulars of which you must, long ere now, have been informed of. Please make my compliments to Colonel Croghan.

I remain, dear sir, your most humble servant,

JOHN BUTLER.

To Mr. Alexander McKee, Deputy Agent of Indian Affairs, Fort Pitt.

P. S. I have much more to say to you than the compass of this paper will admit of; but must defer it, on account of the precariousness of the times, until I have the pleasure of seeing you; and will expect you will give an invitation to a few of the Chiefs in your neighbourhood to attend the meeting at the time appointed. The bearer has orders to give notice to all the Indians he may see.

Speech to KIOSOLA.

BROTHER: As you are called on by your nation, and by the head-men of Niagara, we think it very right that you go to hear what they have to say, as it is highly proper that men of sense should be at such meetings; and, as you know the sense of your brethren there last fall, and their charge to you, and all the tribes that were present, to hearken to no speeches that tend to disturb the peace of the country, we hope you will not forget it; and that you will stop your ears to anything contrary from either one party or the other; and as we expect to hear from the great Council-fire at Philadelphia, we hope to see you soon back there again. We also think it very proper that you take the great belt and speech with you, and show it to the Six Nations, and the Northern tribes that will be there, and explain to them fully, that they may know the sentiments of the United Colonies; and that, at this return, we will be glad to know their opinion.

RICHARD BUTLER, Agent and Interpreter.

Speech to KIOSOLA.

BROTHER: The Commissioners for the thirteen United Colonies, being assured of your sincerity as a friend to the publick, in general, and your just intention of keeping peace amongst the different tribes of Indians, and with your brethren of these Colonies, they express a desire that you will not be prevailed upon to take any part with either one party or another, that might tend to break the bonds of friendship that now subsists between us and the Six Nations, and the tribes to the northward and westward; and that you will use your endeavours, as a friend to both us and them, to continue in that path of peace and friendship that has been walked in so many years. Your brothers at the great Council-fire at Philadelphia have sent you, by me, this small token of their regard for you, and hope you will wear it, and remember them; and they will expect to see you as soon as convenient again, and renew the ties of friendship between them and you, and the whole of their brethren. There will be messengers sent to the different tribes, when they want to meet them.

RICHARD BUTLER, Agent and Interpreter.

[No. 3.]

Speech to the DELAWARES.

BROTHERS: I take this opportunity to inform you that your old brothers at the great Council-fire at Philadelphia, for the Thirteen United Colonies, have appointed me to reside at Pittsburgh, to take care of the Council-fire that they made for them and you to smoke by, at this place, last fall, where you may always come in safety and peace.

I am, also, to receive your speeches, and deliver you theirs; therefore, anything you want to relate to your old brothers at the great Council-fire, I will send it to them carefully. I am desired to inform you that they expect you will hold fast the great belt of peace and friendship that you both took hold of last fall, and that you will not let it slip out of your hands, but consider us and you as one people; and that you will not hearken to any speech that the Commandants of either Detroit or Niagara may send amongst you by either Englishman, Frenchman, or Indian, as they only mean to deceive you; but that you will sit still and enjoy peace.

You may depend that your old brothers will supply you with goods and ammunition plentifully, and on reasonable terms, very soon, as they have your welfare at heart as well as their own; and when you want to hear from the great Council-fire, or to inform them of anything, your messengers shall always be treated with friendship, when they come here on any publick business.

Your old brothers at the great Council-fire expect to hear how the people of your nation, that were not present, like what was said to the heads of the tribes here last fall, and hope their opinion of it is good, and that their hearts are as disposed to peace and friendship as ours.

RICHARD BUTLER.

COMMITTEE OF WEST-AUGUSTA TO PENNSYLVANIA DELEGATES.

[Read April 22, 1776.]

Fort Pitt, or West-Augusta, April 9, 1776.

Present: Major Thomas Smallman, Mr. John Campbell, Mr. John Gibson, and Mr. Joshua Wright.

Major Smallman communicated to the Committee a letter he had received from Colonel Croghan; also, a letter, dated February 29th, from Colonel Butler, at Niagara, Agent for the Indian Affairs in that department, to Alexander McKee, Esq., the Agent at this place; by which it appears that a treaty was intended to be held in behalf of the Ministry the beginning of next month, at Niagara; and that Colonel Butler and Colonel Caldwell ordered Captain McKee's attendance and assistance in that behalf:

It is, therefore, Resolved, That Mr. Alexander McKee be required to give his parole, in writing, that he will not transact any business with the Indians in behalf of the Crown or Ministry; that he will not, directly or indirectly, correspond with any of the Crown or Ministerial officers, nor leave the neighbourhood of Fort Pitt, without the consent of the Committee of West-Augusta; and, on his refusal to do so, that he be committed a close prisoner till the General Congress be acquainted, and direct what further is to be done.

Resolved, That a copy of the above Resolve, a copy of Mr. McKee's Parole, and a copy of Colonel John Butler's Letter to Captain McKee, be sent to the Delegates of this Colony in Congress.

A true copy: THOMAS SMALLMAN, Chairman.

ALEXANDER MCKEE'S Parole.

WEST-AUGUSTA:

I, Alexander McKee, Deputy Agent for the Indian Affairs for the District of Fort Pitt, do hereby promise and engage that I will not transact any business with the Indians on behalf of the Crown or Ministry; that I will not, directly or indirectly, correspond with any of the Crown or Ministerial officers, nor leave the neighbourhood of Fort Pitt, without the consent of the Committee of West-Augusta.

Given under my hand, at Pittsburgh, this ninth day of April, 1776.

A. MCKEE,

Deputy Agent for Indian Affairs.

A true copy: THOMAS SMALLMAN, Chairman.

CAPTAIN STEPHENSON TO GENERAL PUTNAM.

Staten-Island, April 8, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: Yesterday, about ten o'clock in the forenoon, the ship Savage, and the James, a pilot-boat, came up the Sound, under cover of a thick fog, to the watering-place on this Island. Each sent a boat, with eleven men, to take in water; of which I received intelligence, and prepared to attack them. They received information of our approach, and a signal gun was fired for their retreat, which they endeavoured to effect under cover of a brisk and almost constant fire from the Savage; but being closely pursued, were obliged to leave behind them one standard, one musket, one boat, twenty-seven iron-bound barrels, one cable, anchor and buoy, one speaking trumpet, one iron pot, and two watch-coats; ten men were taken prisoners in the boat and in the water, attempting to make their escape, (one of whom is wounded;) one man being shot, fell into the water, and two others fell on board, of which we are confident; many were wounded; but as I cannot inform you with certainty, you will please refer to four deserters, who came ashore last night from the Phoenix, for better information.

Two boys belonging to New-York, who went on board the Black-Joke on Saturday, and were towed in their canoe by the James to the watering-place yesterday morning, and landed, are suspected to be the persons who gave the ship's crew notice that the riflemen were approaching, and are, therefore, made prisoners; they inform that Messrs. Weatherhead and Wallace, of New-York, frequently go on board the Phoenix, from Long-Island. I have undertaken to send Darby Doyle, as a prisoner, for selling provisions to, and holding correspondence with the enemy.

I have the pleasure to inform your Honour, that the officers and soldiers under my command behaved in the late little skirmish with a spirit and conduct becoming advocates for liberty. I am to acknowledge myself obliged to Captain Rawlings, his officers and men, for the assistance they prepared to lend us, by crossing the river, in the most expeditious manner. A list of the prisoners will be delivered by Lieutenant Finley, to whom I beg leave to refer your Honour for further particulars.

I have the pleasure to subscribe myself your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

HUGH STEPHENSON.

JOHN BLACKLER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Esopus, April 8, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I looked on the discharge which you were so kind as to send to the Committee of Safety here, as sufficient to enable me to seek for my living on any part of the Continent; but find to the contrary, as they have insisted on my proceeding to New-York. I willingly complied with your orders; as such, flatter myself I shall be so happy as to receive by the bearer a discharge, as I am still a prisoner, only with the liberty of the town.

I am, gentlemen, with respect, your very humble servant,

JOHN BLACKLER.

To the Gentlemen of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

THOMAS WICKES TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Huntington, April 8, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have just received intelligence that a fleet of thirty sail of square-rigged vessels have been seen off between Cray-Neck and Eaton's Neck; and we thought it best to send you the earliest intelligence. We shall watch their motions, and as soon as we can discover their motions, we shall send you further intelligence. We are mustering our Militia, and shall do the best in our power.

We are, gentlemen, your humble servants,

THOMAS WICKES, Chairman.

P. S. About seven o'clock in the evening we received the intelligence.

JOHN LLOYD TO JOHN SLOSS HOBART.

Queen's Village, April 8, 1776.

SIR: As the affairs of my uncle, Henry Lloyd, Esq., respecting his estate, have come to my care, his particular situation renders it necessary that something should be done that his interest may not go to destruction; which I should be glad to prevent, by affording all the assistance in my power, provided I can do it with safety to myself. My uncle, you know, sir, is under the censure of the publick, and so far considered an unfriendly man to his country, as, I think, renders it unsafe for any one to transact business for him without the permission of the higher powers in this matter. I take the liberty of asking your advice respecting the propriety of applying to the Provincial Congress for consent in this affair. At the same time, should be obliged for your opinion how far I may engage in these matters, until I can obtain full power to act. Our situation is as much exposed to the enemy as any in the Sound, and I think this circumstance alone will be an argument that something should be done with his interest, especially stock, which I propose selling if leave can be obtained. If my ideas of this matter should agree with yours, I should be much obliged if you would write to Mr. Treadwell, who, I suppose, is now at Congress, and request the favour of him to lay the matter before the House as soon as he thinks proper. I should be glad it might be soon.

I am your very humble servant,

JOHN LLOYD, JUN.

To John Sloss Hobart, Esq.

GENERAL THOMAS TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 16, 1776.]

Albany, April 8, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 6th of March, with the directions of Congress to proceed to Canada. In consequence of which I left Roxbury the 22d, for Albany, where I arrived the 28th. I have been detained on account of the lakes being impassable; but am in hopes boats may pass in a few days. I shall take the very first opportunity.

I am sorry to find the troops so backward; I understand many of the regiments are very incomplete as to number, especially those of New-York and New-England. I cannot find the whole, which may be expected to form the Army in Canada, will amount to five thousand, while I expect Montreal, and the posts on our way, will require near one thousand; and should a reinforcement of the enemy arrive before we get possession of Quebeck, considering the smallness of our number, some disagreeable consequence must ensue. For Canada, we cannot expect to be able to call in any assistance from the inhabitants, as in the other Colonies, on any emergency. I hope the Congress will take this matter into consideration, whether the number mentioned is sufficient to resist the force that our enemy will be likely to send that way. I am not at present able to make any regular return of the state of the Army in that quarter, but shall, as soon as it possibly can be done. I understand by General Schuyler, that he has made some representation to Congress on this matter; therefore shall, on my part, pursue every measure that is in my power for the good of the common cause.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN THOMAS.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

RIDGEFIELD (CONNECTICUT) COMMITTEE.

Ridgefield, April 8, 1776.

Josiah Stebbins, Benjamin Hoyt, Thomas Smith, John Dauchy, Ebenezer Smith, Ezekiel Wilson, and Ebenezer Sherwood, of the Township of Ridgefield, in the County of Fairfield, and Colony of Connecticut, were brought before the Committee of said Township, as being suspected of being inimical to the liberties of America; and, upon examination, it appeared to the Committee that they are inimical to the liberties of America; and all persons are hereby desired to have no more dealings or commerce with them; otherwise they will be held up as inimical, and dealt with accordingly.

By order of the Committee:

SAMUEL OLMSTED, Chairman.

J. WATERS, JUN., TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-London, April 8, 1776.

Agreeable to your Honour's desire, I have hereto subjoined a sketch of the outline of the first work we propose completing on Shaw's Neck. I think it advisable to have these completed forthwith, and shall accordingly endeavour to accomplish the same. Five hundred men might be employed to advantage. It may be well to have a number of single platforms immediately completed, as, should we afterwards choose a full platform, these will not come amiss. We employ about fifty men per day on the works.

The whole when completed will be so far towards completing the general plan.

I am your Honour's most obedient servant,

J. WATERS, JUN.

To Governour Trumbull.

ADMIRAL HOPKINS TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 16, 1776.]

Ship Alfred, New-London Harbour, April 9, 1776.

SIR: When I put to sea, the 17th February, from Cape-Henlopen, we had many sick; and four of the vessels had a large number on board with the small-pox. The Hornet and Wasp joined me two days before. The wind came at northeast, which made it unsafe to lie there. The wind, after we got out, came on to blow hard. I did not think we were in a condition to keep on a cold coast, and appointed our rendezvous at Abaca, one of the Bahama Islands. The second night, we lost the Hornet and Fly.

I arrived at the rendezvous, in order to wait for them fifteen days, agreeable to orders. I then formed an expedition against New-Providence, which I put in execution the 3d of March, by landing two hundred marines; under the command of Captain Nicholas, and fifty sailors, under the command of Lieutenant Weaver, of the Cabot, who was well acquainted there. The same day, they took possession of a small fort of seventeen pieces of cannon, without any opposition, save five guns, which were fired at them without doing any damage.

I received, that evening, an account that they had two hundred and odd men in the main fort, all inhabitants. I then caused a manifesto to be published, the purport of which was, that the inhabitants and their property should be safe, if they did not oppose me in taking possession of the fort and King's stores; which had the desired effect, for the inhabitants left the fort almost alone.

Captain Nicholas sent, by my orders, to the Governour for the keys of the fort, which were delivered, and the troops marched directly in, where we found the several warlike stores, agreeable to the inventory enclosed. But the Governour sent one hundred and fifty barrels of powder off, in a small sloop, the night before. I have all the stores on board the fleet, and a large sloop that I found there, and which I have promised the owner to send back, and pay him hire for.

The Fly joined us at Providence, and gave an account that he got foul of the Hornet, and carried away the boom and head of her mast; and I hear since, she has got into some port of South-Carolina.

I have taken the Governour, Montfort Browne; the Lieutenant-Governour, who is a half-pay officer; and Mr. Thomas Irving, who is a Counsellor and Collector of his Majesty's Quit-Rents in South-Carolina; and it appears, by the Court Calendar, that he is also Inspector-General of his Majesty's Customs for North-America.

Since we came out, we have lost company with the Wasp. The 4th instant, we fell in with, on east end of Long-Island, and took the schooner commanded by young Wallace, of six carriage-guns and eight swivels; and on the 5th, took the bomb brig, of eight guns and two howitzers, ten swivels and forty-eight hands, well found with all sorts of stores, arms, powder, &c. The 6th, in the morning, fell in with the Glasgow and her tender, and engaged her near three hours. We lost six men killed, and many wounded. The Cabot had four men killed, and seven wounded; the Captain is among the latter. The Columbus had one man who lost his arm. We received a considerable damage in our ship; but the greatest was in having our wheel-ropes and blocks shot away, which gave the Glasgow time to make sail, which I did not think proper to follow, as it would have brought on an action with the whole of their fleet; and as I had upwards of thirty of our best seamen on board the prizes, and some that were on board had got too much liquor out of the prizes to be fit for duty, thought it most prudent to give over the chase, and secure our prizes; and got nothing but the Glasgow's tender, and arrived here the 7th, with all the fleet.

Amongst the dead are Mr. Sinclair Seymour, master of the Cabot, a good officer; Lieutenant Wilson, of the Cabot, and Lieutenant Fitzpatrick, of the Alfred. The officers all behaved well on board the Alfred; but too much praise cannot be given to the officers of the Cabot, who gave and sustained the whole fire, for some considerable time, within pistol-shot.

I expect to leave this place in three or four days; and as General Washington is expected here every minute, if he will give me leave to enlist some of his men, shall be able to get away sooner.

I hear that, since the action, the fleet is gone from New-port; but whether they intend to return again, I cannot tell; but if I can get the fleet well manned, shall be able to give a more intelligent account.

I have now on board eighty pieces of heavy sail-duck, which I purchased at New-Providence, and have drawn bills on the Treasurers for.

I am, with great respect, your humble servant,

ESECK HOPKINS.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

Inventory of Stores, &c., taken at FORT MONTAGUE,
MARCH 3, 1776.

17 cannon, from 9 to 36-pounders; 1240 round shot; 121 shells; 81 iron trucks, for carriages; 22 copper hoops; 2 copper powder-measures; 1 worm; 1 ladle; some old iron, copper, and lead.

Stores taken at FORT NASSAU, MARCH 4, 1776.

71 cannon, from 9 to 32-pounders; 15 mortars, from 4 to 11 inches diameter, and beds for ditto; 5337 shells; 9831 round, and 165 chain and double-headed shot; 140 hand grenadoes; 816 fuses or false fires; 99 sponges, rammers, and worms; 46 copper ladles; 407 copper hoops; 5 copper powder-measures; 220 iron trucks, for carriages; 3 bells; 24 casks of powder; a quantity of match-rope, not weighed; 2 double blocks, with brass sheafs; 1 scale beam; 1 hammer; 3 tanned hides; 2 boxes of tallow candles; 4 barrels of bread; 4 barrels of flour; 4 barrels of beef; part of a cask of spirits; 1 sun-dial; and 1 English flag.

ADMIRAL HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Ship Alfred, at New-London, April 8, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Enclosed you have an inventory of stores taken out of the two forts at New-Providence. I have also the Governour, a Counsellor, (who is a half-pay officer,) and the Surveyor-General of the Customs for North-America, on board. I shall be glad of your directions how to dispose of them, as they are gentlemen that I think ought to be well treated as prisoners.

I have likewise seventy odd prisoners, taken out of the bomb brig, the schooner, and the Glasgow's tender, which shall be glad of your directions respecting them.

If you should see General Washington, shall be glad to get permission to enlist some of his soldiers, as I am very short-handed.

I have a number of heavy cannon, taken out of the forts. If you should have occasion for any of them, you will please give directions accordingly.

I am, with great respect, sir, your very humble servant,

ESECK HOPKINS.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the Colony of Connecticut, at Lebanon.

COLONEL SALTONSTALL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-London, April 8, 1776, two o'clock, P. M.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Commodore Hopkins, with the fleet and prizes, came this morning into this harbour; and waiting on him aboard the Alfred, he desired me to write your Excellency, and ask the favour that he might enlist, out of your troops, one hundred and fifty or two hundred seamen; and if that number of seamen is not to be had, complete the number with landsmen, to man the fleet, as he is badly manned, and has more than fifty invalids.

As to the number of ships in the fleet, and prizes, and the late engagement, I must beg leave to refer your Excellency to the bearer, Mr. James Price, who has been on board the Commodore, and can, viva voce, give you a fuller account than I can now write.

The Commodore has brought his Excellency Montfort Browne, Esq., Governour of New-Providence, Thomas Irving, Esq., a gentleman of the Council for South-Carolina, and Receiver of the King's Quit-Rents, and James Babidge, Esq., Secretary of New-Providence, and a half-pay officer, (who are on their parole of honour on shore,) and about seventy prisoners.

I am your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

G. SALTONSTALL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. Enclosed you have an inventory of stores taken at New-Province.

DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER TO THE PRINTER OF THE MARYLAND GAZETTE.

MR. GREEN: A report having been circulated through different parts of this Province that a letter of mine to Hugh Hamersley, Esquire, by Mr. Robert Buchanan, and opened at Philadelphia by Colonel McKean, Chairman of the Committee of Inspection of that city, contained sentiments different from those I had openly avowed; to remove every impression that such malicious reports may have made, and to prevent their further circulation, you will be pleased to give the enclosed copy of the letter referred to, with the annexed certificate, a place in your paper, and thereby oblige your humble servant,

DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

Annapolis, April 9, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Herewith you will receive my agency accounts, from the 29th of September, 1773, to the 29th of September, 1774; also, second sets of bills for eight hundred and twenty-two pounds fourteen shillings and two pence, and two hundred and thirty-three pounds two shillings and nine pence.

The money that I lodged in your hands must be carried to the Proprietary accounts. I have charged him and his guardians with it, in consequence of my letter to you on that subject.

The official charge exhibited against me,* (from Lord Suffolk's office, I presume,) does not deserve an answer. However, as you seem to be under an apprehension that the Proprietary interest may suffer from the part I have acted, you have a copy of a letter from Governour Eden to me, wherein you will perceive that some of the charges are refuted, and the others accounted for. You know that I have openly and avowedly opposed the Parliamentary right of altering charters and levying money in America, without the consent of its inhabitants; but I have nevertheless done everything in my power to prevent the dissolution of the old Government, and to keep things together as much as possible, hoping thereby to have been instrumental in bringing about a reconciliation; but I fear the Ministry, by late acts of Parliament, have rendered it very difficult now to be accomplished; though I confess that it is so much the interest of both countries to be united, that I am not entirely destitute of hope that it may yet be brought about. If this is not effected, both countries will be ruined.

Captain Squire, in the Otter sloop, with two tenders, lately invaded this Province, took several vessels, and burnt one off this city. Our misfortunes were afflicting enough before; but to add insult to them, required great fortitude to bear.

I am, with great truth, dear sir, your affectionate friend, and obedient humble servant,

DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

Your letter of the 3d of September was the last that I received from you.

Philadelphia, May 3, 1776.

At the request of Mr. Jenifer, I went with him to Mr. McKean, Chairman of the Committee of Inspection of this city, to inquire for a packet directed to Hugh Hamersley, Esq., Spring-Gardens, Westminster, under the care of Mr. Robert Buchanan, which the Committee had taken into their * ABSTRACT OF A LETTER FROM H. HAMERSLEY.

JULY 30, 1775.—Little would be my pretensions to the friendship and regard I profess, were I to conceal the information given to the guardians, not from the Governour or his adherents, but officially here, "that you are at present one of the warmest Patriots in the Province; that General Lee (who is considered as in actual rebellion) was lodged, and lived with you in his late visit to Maryland; that you voted for the Delegates to the Congress, and went to Philadelphia to attend their motions." In the present critical situation of American charters, I wish you would enable me to refute the charge.

possession for inspection. Mr. McKean informed Mr. Jenifer that the packet was opened by him in the presence of several members of the Committee, in which was a letter to Mr. Hamersley; that he read said letter, and then sealed it with his own seal, and that no other person read the said letter. Mr. Jenifer then said that he would have written a line on the back of the packet, directing it to be sealed again and forwarded, if he had expected that it would have been opened, as it contained nothing that could give offence. Upon which Mr. McKean assured Mr. Jenifer, that there was nothing in the letter that would not do him honour anywhere.

At Mr. Jenifer's request, I opened the above-mentioned packet and letter to Mr. Hamersley, and certify that the above is a true copy, taken by me.

JOHN CADWALLADER.

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JUN., TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Baltimore, April 9, 1776.

SIR: At the request of General Lee, I directed a friend at Fredericktown to supply any money which might be wanted by Captain Grier, commander of a detachment belonging to the General, on their march to Virginia, which money he told me the Congress would reimburse. My friend Colonel Beatty supplied Captain Grier with fifty pounds, pursuant to my order, the receipt for which I have enclosed to my friend Mr. Daniel Stuart, who is concerned with me in the superintendence of the frigate building here, and I have directed him to call on you for orders where to receive the money.

I am informed that Captain Grier's Company being seized by the small-pox, he was obliged to leave about fifty of them at Yorktown to be inoculated. I shall direct a friend there to supply anything they want, unless some other provision is made for the purpose; and shall be glad to know where I may apply for reimbursement, without giving you unnecessary trouble.

I am, with great respect, sir, your very humble servant,

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JUN.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

GERARD HOPKINS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, April 9, 1776.

DEAR SIR: You desired I would inform you how the forty-three barrels of powder came to the possession of Mr. McLure, and whether the powder which came from Philadelphia was imported or manufactured in Pennsylvania. I am sorry it is not in my power to render you a proper account. The powder received from Mr. McLure is, from the best information I can get, thirty-four barrels—came from Philadelphia, which was imported. The remainder of the forty-three was bought here by the Committee, and now for the Province. The other seventy barrels came from Philadelphia, without any account therewith; and I cannot get any information from the Committee here. The people who brought it could not give any account, only that it was put in their care from Bushtown. Captain Tibbet was here a few days ago, and he informed me eighteen and a half barrels of the seventy were some he brought; and he further said the other was imported.

I have received some osnaburgh and hessing rolls, from Lux & Bowly, and also twelve large rolls of lead.

I informed the Council of the quality of the powder. I also informed them of one hundred and nineteen pieces hessing, instead of one hundred and forty-nine. I note what you say in regard to the receipts and deliveries.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

GERARD HOPKINS.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

THOMAS SMITH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Chestertown, April 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Veazey, as well as some other of the independent Captains on this shore, are very uneasy that they are not yet furnished with any arms or ammunition, more especially as they understand the troops on the West-Shore are generally well armed, and provided with clothes. I am surprised that the arms, &c., which the Council determined before I left them to order from Baltimore to this place, for the use of the Eastern-Shore, are not yet arrived. I am fearful some accident has happened to them. I have been told that the Militia on this shore begin to be dissatisfied that they have not some proportion of ammunition sent them. I hope there is some on its way before now.

Since my return home, I have purchased of the gunsmith in this town ten rifles, at five pounds each, which will be ready to be delivered in two or three days, and ten more may be had in about two weeks more. I have also bought eighty pair of shoes for the troops, at seven shillings and nine pence per pair; and if the Council would have me to contract for the two hundred pair which was talked about, I can do it at ten shillings, and not under—of this they will please to write me. Captain Veazey has bought as much cloth in the County as will make eighty suits, and hopes to get as much more as will clothe his whole company. If the Council should not have procured blankets enough for the troops, some may be had in this County. Mr. Cummings has not yet sent an ounce of provision for the company quartered at this place, notwithstanding his promises.

I propose joining the Council the last of next week, and hope my attendance will not be wanted before; if it should, they will please write to me. My long absence from home makes my stay in the County for some time very necessary; but if the publick business calls, I will obey; and am, gentlemen, with the greatest regard and respect, your most humble servant,

THOMAS SMITH.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL SMITH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore Town, April 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since my return I have made inquiry, and found a person a professed stocker of guns, who will immediately finish your number of guns at fifteen shillings each; it is the customary price. The gunsmiths, as yet, do very little work, and I see no probability of my company being armed by them these three months. I shall be much obliged if you will permit me to fit the Province arms I now have. I shall not want more than fifteen or sixteen.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and obliged servant,

SAMUEL SMITH.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO WILLIAM LUX.

[No. 110.] Annapolis, April 9, 1776.

SIR: Be pleased to send us immediately, in Captain Nicholson's small tender, all the spare blankets, and two-third parts of the linens imported in the Wild-Duck, Captain Tibbet. Show this to Captain Nicholson, and he will in consequence of it despatch his tender with them.

We are, &c.

To Mr. William Lux, Baltimore.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY OF VIRGINIA.

[No. 111.] Annapolis, seven o'clock, April 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have, agreeable to the request in yours of the 4th instant, forwarded the packet received by Samuel Solomon, to the Honourable John Hancock, by an express. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Safety of Virginia.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

[No. 112.] Annapolis, April 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We this moment received the enclosed, which we have forwarded by express. You will be pleased to acknowledge the time that it is delivered, and oblige, gentlemen, your, &c.

To the Delegates of Maryland, in Congress.

MARYLAND DELEGATES TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, April 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer (Thomas Rhoads) is hired on purpose to carry our paper (fifty-one reams) to Annapolis, for which we have advanced part of the price, and are to pay the rest on his return. We chose to send the paper by land at once, to avoid all hazard, and prevent every disappointment. The plates are not yet done. Mr. Rittenhouse now promises they shall be done by next Saturday; and as the Assembly is adjourned, we hope he will fulfil his promise. They shall be forwarded by the post, or some safe hand, as soon as done.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN.,

T. STONE,

R. ALEXANDER.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Inspection and Observation, April 9, 1776.

Whereas the Continental Congress did lately resolve, "That if any person shall be so lost to all virtue and regard for this country, as to refuse the Bills of Credit emitted by the authority of Congress, or should obstruct or discourage the currency thereof, and be convicted by the Committee of the City, County, or District, where he should reside, such person should be deemed, published, and treated as an enemy of this country, and be precluded from all trade or intercourse with the inhabitants of these Colonies:"

And whereas, Townsend Speakman, Druggist, of this city, being charged with a breach of this resolve, in refusing to receive the above Bills of Credit in payment, appeared before the Committee for the City and Liberties, acknowledged the truth of the charge, and alleged, in his defence, scruples of conscience thereupon, as being money emitted for the purpose of war:

The Committee, pursuant to the trust reposed in them, proceeded to consider the charge and defence, and were of opinion, that if such allegation was true, yet, as the Congress have made no exception, and as such conduct tends to subvert the most essential rights and liberties of their fellow-citizens, and, by destroying the means of defence, to expose their lives and properties to unavoidable ruin, it ought not to be admitted. But it appears by his own acknowledgment, that he has heretofore received, and does continue to receive, Bills of Credit emitted in this and the neighbouring Provinces, though frequently issued for the purpose of war; therefore, such objection is not well founded, nor the present pretence consistent with his former conduct. This Committee, therefore, (the party having declared he did not mean to appeal to any other Board,) do unanimously hold up to the world the said Townsend Speakman as an enemy to his country, and precluded from all trade or intercourse with the inhabitants of these Colonies.

Ordered, That the above be published.

Extract from the Minutes:

J. B. SMITH, Secretary.

LETTER II.—TO CATO.

Philadelphia, April 9, 1776.

Before I enter on the more immediate purpose of this letter, I think it necessary, once for all, to endeavour to settle, as clearly as I can, the following point, viz: How far personality is concerned in any political debate. The general maxim is, that measures, and not men, is the thing in question; and the maxim is undeniably just when rightly understood. Cato, as a refuge for himself, hath quoted the author of Common Sense, who, in his preface, says: "That the object for attention is the doctrine itself, not the man;" that is, not the rank or condition of the man; for whether he is with those whose fortune is already made, or with those whose fortune is yet to make, or among those who seldom think or care whether they make any, is a matter wholly out of the question, and entirely confined to himself. But the political characters, political dependencies, and political connections of men, being of a publick nature, differ exceedingly from the circumstances of private life; and they are, in many instances, so nearly related to the measures they propose, that, to prevent our being deceived by the last, we must be acquainted with the first. A total ignorance of men lays us under the danger of mistaking plausibility for principle. Could the wolf bleat like the lamb, the stock would soon be enticed into ruin; wherefore, to prevent the mischief, he ought to be seen as well as heard. There never was, nor ever will be, nor ever ought to be, any important political debate carried on, in which a total separation, in all cases, between men and measures, could be admitted with sufficient safety. When hypocrisy shall be banished from the earth, the knowledge of men will be unnecessary, because their measures cannot then be fraudulent; but until that time comes, (which never will come,) they ought, under proper limitations, to go together. We have already too much secrecy in some things, and too little in others. Were men more known, and measures more concealed, we should have fewer hypocrites, and more security.

As the chief design of these letters is to detect and expose the falsehoods and fallacious reasonings of Cato, he must not expect, when detected, to be treated like one who had debated fairly; for I will be bold to say, and to prove, that a grosser violation of truth and reason scarcely ever came from the pen of a writer; and the explanations which he hath endeavoured to impose on the passages which he hath quoted from Common Sense, are such as never existed in the mind of the author; nor can they be drawn from the words themselves. Neither must Cato expect to be spared where his carelessness of expression, and visible want of compassion and sentiment, shall give occasion to raise any moral or philosophical reflection thereon. These things being premised, I now proceed to review the latter part of Cato's second letter.

In this place, Cato begins his first attack on Common Sense; but as he only discovers his ill-will, and neither offers any arguments against it, nor makes any quotation from it, I should, in this place, pass him by, were it not for the following strange assertion: "If little notice," says Cato, (little opposition he means) "has yet been taken of the publications concerning Independence, it is neither owing to the popularity of the doctrine, the unanswerable nature of the arguments, nor the fear of opposing them, as the vanity of the author would suggest." As Cato hath given us the negative reasons, he ought to have given us the real ones; for as he positively tells what it was not owing to, he undoubtedly knows what it was owing to, that he delayed his answers so long; but instead of telling us that, (which, perhaps, is not proper to be told,) he flies from the argument with the following plump declaration: "Nine-tenths of the people of Pennsylvania (says he) yet abhor the doctrine." But stop, Cato! Not quite so fast, friend. If this be true, how came they, so late as the 2d of March last, to elect, for a Burgess of this city, a gentleman of known independent principles, and one of the very few to whom the author of Common Sense showed some part thereof while in manuscript? Cato is just as unfortunate in the following paragraph: "Those," says he, "who made the appeal, (that is, published the pamphlet,) have but little cause to triumph in its success. Of this they seem sensible, and, like true quacks, are constantly pestering us with additional doses, till the stomachs of their patients begin wholly to revolt." It is Cato's hard fate to be always detected; for perhaps there never was a pamphlet, since the use of letters was known, about which so little pains were taken, and of which so great a number went off in so short a time—I am certain that I am within compass when I say one hundred and twenty thousand. The book was turned upon the world like an orphan, to shift for itself. No plan was formed to support it; neither hath the author ever published a syllable on the subject from that time till after the appearance of Cato's fourth letter. Wherefore, what Cato says of additional doses administered by the author, is an absolute falsity. Besides which, it comes with an ill-grace from one who frequently publishes two letters in a week, and often puts them both into one paper. Cato here, Cato there, look where you will.

At the distance of a few lines from the above quotations, Cato presents us with a retrospective view of our former state, in which, says he, "we considered our connection with Great Britain as our chief happiness. We flourished, grew rich and populous to a degree not to be paralleled in history." This assertion is truly of the legerdmain kind, appearing, at once, both right and wrong. All writers on

Cato's side have used the same argument, and conceived themselves invincible. Nevertheless, a single expression, properly placed, dissolves the charm, for the cheat lies in putting the consequence for the cause; for had we not flourished, the connection had never existed, or never been regarded: and this is fully proved by the neglect shown to the first settlers, who had every difficulty to struggle with, unnoticed and unassisted by the British Court.

Cato proceeds very industriously to sum up the former declarations of Congress and other publick bodies, (some of which were made upwards of a year ago,) to prove that the doctrine of Independence hath no sanction from them. To this I shall give Cato one general answer, which is, that, had he produced a thousand more such authorities, they would now amount to nothing. They are out of date. Times and things are altered. The true character of the King was but little known among the body of the people a year ago; willing to believe him good, they fondly called him so, but have since found that Cato's Royal Sovereign is a Royal Savage.

Cato hath introduced the above-mentioned long quotation of authorities against Independency with the following curious preface: "Nor have many weeks (says he) yet elapsed since the first open proposition for Independence was published to the world. By what men of consequence this scheme is supported, or whether by any, may possibly be the subject of future inquiry. Certainly it hath no countenance from the Congress, to whose sentiments we look up with reverence. On the contrary, it is directly repugnant to every declaration of that respectable body." Now, Cato, thou hast nailed thyself with a witness! Directly repugnant to every declaration of that respectable body! Mind that, Cato, and mark what follows. It appears, by an extract from the resolves of the Congress, printed in the front of the Oration delivered by Dr. Smith in honour of that brave man, General Montgomery, that he (the Doctor) was appointed by that honourable body to compose and deliver the same, in the execution of which, the Orator exclaimed loudly against the doctrine of Independence; but when a motion was afterwards made in Congress (according to former usage) to return the Orator thanks, and request a copy for the press, the motion was rejected from every part of the House, and thrown out without a division.

I now proceed to Cato's third letter, in the opening of which he deserts the subject of Independence, and renews his attack on the Committee. Cato's manner of writing has as much order in it as the motion of a squirrel. He frequently writes as if he knew not what to write next, just as the other; and jumps about only because he cannot stand still. Though I am sometimes angry with him for his unprincipled method of writing and reasoning, I cannot help laughing at him, at other times, for his want of ingenuity—an instance of which he gives us in kindly warning us against "the foul pages of interested writers, and strangers intermeddling in our affairs." Were I to reply seriously, my answer would be this: Thou seemest, then, ignorant, Cato, of that ancient and numerous order which are related to each other in all and every part of the globe—with whom the kindred is not formed by place or accident, but in principle and sentiment. A freeman, Cato, is a stranger nowhere; a slave, everywhere. But were I disposed to answer merrily, I should tell him that, as his notions of friendship were so very narrow and local, he obliges me to understand that, when he addresses the people with the tender title of "My dear Countrymen," (which frequently occurs in his letters,) he particularly means the long list of Macks published in Donald MacDonald's commission.

In this letter Cato recommends the pamphlet called Plain Truth—a performance which hath withered away like a sickly, unnoticed weed, and which even its advocates are displeased at, and the author ashamed to own. About the middle of this third letter Cato gives notice of his being ready to take the field: "I now proceed (says he) to give my reasons." How Cato hath managed the attack, we are now to examine; and the first remark I shall offer on his conduct, is, that he has most unluckily entered the list on the wrong side, and discharged his first fire among the Tories. In order to prove this, I shall give the paragraph entire. "Agriculture and commerce (says Cato) have hitherto been the happy employments by which these Middle Colonies have risen into wealth and importance. By them the face of the country has been changed from a barren wilderness into the hospitable abodes of peace and plenty. Without them we had either never existed as Americans, or existed only as savages; the oaks would still have possessed their native spots of earth, and never have appeared in the form of ships and houses. What are now well-cultivated fields, or flourishing cities, would have remained only the solitary haunts of wild beasts, or of men equally wild." The reader cannot help perceiving that, through this whole paragraph, our connection with Britain is left entirely out of the question, and our present greatness attributed to internal causes—agriculture and commerce. This is a strange way, Cato, of overturning Common Sense, which says: "I challenge the warmest advocate for reconciliation to show a single advantage which this Continent can reap by being connected with Great Britain. I repeat (says he) the challenge. Not a single advantage is derived. Our corn will fetch its price in any market in Europe, and our imported goods must be paid for, buy them where we will." Cato introduces his next paragraph with saying, "That much of our former felicity was owing to the protection of England, is not to be denied." Yes, Cato, I deny it wholly, and for the following clear and simple reasons, viz: that our being connected with, and submitting to be protected by her, made, and will still make, all her enemies our enemies; or, as Common Sense says, sets us at variance with nations who would otherwise seek our friendship, and against whom we have neither anger nor complaint.

The following passage is so glaringly absurd, that I shall make but a short comment upon it: "And if, hereafter, (says Cato,) in the fulness of time, it shall be necessary to separate from the land that gave birth to (some of) our ancestors, it will be in a state of perfect manhood, when we can fully wield our own arms, and protect our commerce and coasts by our own fleets." But how are we to come by fleets, Cato, while Britain hath the government of the Continent? unless we are to suppose—as you have hinted in the former paragraph—that our oaks are to grow into ships, and to be launched, self-built, from their "native spots of earth." It is Cato's misfortune, as a writer, not to distinguish justly between magick and imagination; while, on the other hand, there are many passages in his letters so seriously and deliberately false, that nothing but the most hardened effrontery, and a cast of mind bordering upon impiety, would have uttered. He frequently forces me out of the common track of civil language, in order to do him justice; moderation and temper being really unequal to the task of exposing him.

Cato, unless he meant to destroy the ground he stood upon, ought not to have let the following paragraph be seen: "If our present difference (says he) can be accommodated, there is scarce a probability that Britain will ever renew her late fatal system of policy, or attempt again to employ force against us." How came Cato to admit the probability of our being brought again into the same bloody and expensive situation? But it is worth remarking, that those who write without principle, cannot help sometimes blundering upon truth. Then there is no real security, Cato, in this reconciliation of yours on constitutional principles? It still amounts to nothing; and, after all this expense of life and wealth, we are to rest at last upon hope, hazard, and uncertainty. Why, then, by all that is sacred, "it is time to part."

But Cato, after admitting the probability of our being brought again into the same situation, proceeds to tell us how we are to conduct ourselves in the second quarrel—and that is, by the very same method we have done the present one, viz: to expend millions of treasure, and thousands of lives, in order to patch up a second reunion, that the way may be open for a third quarrel; and in this endless and chequered round of blood and treacherous peace hath Cato disposed of the Continent of America. That I may not be thought to do Cato injustice, I have quoted the whole passage: "But should Britain be so infatuated (says he) at any future period as to think of subjugating us, either by the arts of corruption, or oppressive exertions of power, can we entertain a doubt but we shall again, with a virtue equal to the present, and with the weapons of defence in our hands, when necessary, convince her that we are willing, by a constitutional connection with her, to afford and receive reciprocal benefits; but although subjects of the same King, we will not consent to be her slaves." Come hither, ye little ones, whom the poisonous hand of Cato is rearing for destruction, and remember the page that warns ye of your ruin!

Cato, in many of his expressions, discovers all that calm command over the passions and feelings which always distinguishes the man who hath expelled them from his heart. Of this careless kind is the before-mentioned phrase. "Our present differences," and the same unpardonable negligence is conveyed in the following one: "Although I consider her (says he) as having, in her late conduct towards us, acted the part of a cruel step-dame." Wonderful sensibility, indeed! All the havoc and desolation of unnatural war; the destruction of thousands; the burning and depopulating of towns and cities; the ruin and separation of friends and families, are just sufficient to extort from Cato this one calous confession. But the cold and creeping soul of Cato is a stranger to the manly powers of sympathetic sorrow. He moves not, nor can he move, in so pure an element. Accustomed to lick the hand that hath made him visible, and to breathe the gross atmosphere of servile and sordid dependance, his soul would now starve on virtue, and suffocate in the clear region of disinterested friendship.

Surely, when Cato sat down to write he either did not expect to be called to an account, or was totally regardless of reputation; otherwise, he would not have endeavoured to persuade the publick that the doctrine of Independence was broached, in a kind of seditious manner, at a time "when (says he) some gleams of reconciliation began first to break in upon us." Come forth, Cato, and prove the assertion. Where do these gleams of reconciliation spring from? Are they to be found in the King's Speech?—in the Address of either House of Parliament?—or in the Act which lets loose a whole kennel of pirates upon our property, and commissions another set to insult, with pardons, the very men whom their own measures had sought to ruin? Either prove the assertion, Cato, or take the reward of it; for it is the part of an incendiary to endeavour, with specious falsehoods, to mislead the credulity of unwary readers. Cato likewise says: "That, while we continue united, and renounce all thoughts of Independence, we have the utmost assurance of obtaining a full redress of our grievances, and an ample security against any future violation of our just rights." If Cato means to insinuate that we have received such an assurance, let him read the conclusion of the preceding paragraph again. The same answer will serve for both.

Perhaps, when we recollect the long and unabated cruelty of the British Court towards us, and remember the many prayers which we have put up, both to them and for them, the following piece of declamation of Cato can hardly be equalled, either for absurdity or insanity: "If we now affect Independence, (says he,) we must be considered as a faithless people in the sight of all mankind, and could scarcely expect the confidence of any nation upon earth, or look up to Heaven for its approving sentence." Art thou mad, Cato, or art thou foolish? or art thou both? or art thou worse than both? In this passage, thou hast fairly gone beyond me. I have not language to bring thee back. Thou art safely intrenched, indeed! Rest, therefore, in thy stronghold till he who fortified thee in it shall come and fetch thee out.

Cato seems to be possessed of that Jesuitical cunning which always endeavours to disgrace what it cannot disprove; and this he sometimes effects by unfairly introducing our terms into his arguments, and thereby begets a monster, which he sends round the country for a show, and tells the good people that the name of it is Independence. Of this character are several passages in his fourth and fifth letters, particularly where he quotes the term "foreign assistance," which he ungenerously explains into a surrender of the Continent to France and Spain. Such an unfair and sophistical reasoner doth not deserve the civility of good manners. He creates, likewise, the same confusion by frequently using the word peace for union, and thereby charges us falsely by representing us as being determined to "reject all propositions of peace." Whereas our wish is peace, but not reunion; and though we would gladly listen to the former, we are determined to resist every proposal for the latter, come from where it will; being fully persuaded that, in the present state of affairs, separation of Governments is the only and best thing that can be done for both countries.

The following case is unjustly put: "There never was a war (says Cato) so implacable, even among States naturally rivals and enemies, or among Savages themselves, as not to have peace for its object as well as end." But was there ever a war, Cato, which had union for its object? No. What Cato means by States naturally rivals and enemies, I shall not inquire into; but this I know, (for myself at least,) that it was not in the power of France or Spain, or all the other powers in Europe, to have given such a wound, or raised up such a mortal hatred, as Britain hath done. We feel the same kind of undescribed anger at her conduct as we would at the sight of an animal devouring its young; and this particular species of anger is not generated in the transitory temper of the man, but in the chaste, undefiled womb of nature.

Cato, towards the conclusion of his third letter, (at which place I shall leave him for the present,) compares the state of Britain and America to the quarrels of lovers, and from thence infers a probability that our affections will be renewed thereby. This I cannot help looking on as one of the most unnatural and distorted similes that can be drawn. Come hither, ye that are lovers, or ye that have been lovers, and decide the controversy between us! What comparison is there between the soft murmurs of a heart mourning in secret and the loud horrors of war—between the silent tears of pensive sorrow and rivers of wasted blood—between the sweet strife of affection and the bitter strife of death—between the curable calamities of pettish lovers and the sad sight of a thousand slain? "Get thee behind me," Cato, for thou hast not the feelings of a man.

JONATHAN GLOVER TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Marblehead, April 9, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: The Committee of Correspondence have, this day, received from Captain Samuel Tucker, commanding one of the Continental armed vessels, twenty-two persons, who were in the brigantine lately taken by Captain John Manly, from Boston, bound to Halifax; among whom are four soldiers, with their wives and children; one Caleb Wheaton, (who, from his own account, has heretofore been esteemed inimical to his country,) with his three sons, and a number of others; who, in the course of their examination, have not been able to acquit themselves to their country, in our esteem; for the particulars of which, we beg leave to refer you to the worthy bearer, Azor Orne, Esq., one of the Committee, who attended the examination. The Committee have made comfortable provision for the entertainment of the above persons, and desire your Honours' directions what further steps they

ROBERT COOK TO COLONEL KNOX.

Grafton, April 9, 1776.

WORTHY SIR: I am at great difficulty about the teams and their loading at present, and last night likewise in shifting them, the which I did with three of them, and the three fresh teams that I got then are already tired, and say that they cannot go any farther than Sutton, which is six miles from hence, and there I expect to find them all to-morrow morning, and all of them wanting to have their teams shifted; and you may depend that they cannot go farther, for I have had a survey of all their cattle, by all the Selectmen of this town, and their Representative; and they say they cannot go on, their cattle are so much galled and lame. I am informed by the Selectmen that there are many teams in this town, but they cannot get any of them to go forward with a load, not even so far as Sutton; and in the whole town can get but one team, and he is gone forward; and there are three now remaining; and how to get them any farther I know not, without a special order from you or the General Court, to impress any of them that can be found, and the order to continue in force until they arrive at Norwich. The bearer hereof is one of the teamsters, who I thought proper to despatch, and he will inform you of more particulars.

Waiting your answer, I remain, sir, with impatience, your very humble servant,

ROBERT COOK.

To Henry Knox, Esq., Colonel of Artillery, or to Ezekiel Cheever, Esq., Commissary of Artillery, at Cambridge.

P. S. I hope you will satisfy this man for coming to you, which he desires.

ADDRESS OF THE MINISTERS AND ELDERS OF THE PROVINCIAL SYNOD OF GLASGOW AND AYR.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's faithful subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Provincial Synod of Glasgow and Ayr, beg leave to approach your Throne, professing, in the sincerest manner, our warm affection and inviolable loyalty to your Majesty, and our gratitude to Heaven for the liberty, peace, and happiness we and our people enjoy under your Government.

Blessed, as British subjects, with a Constitution the admiration of neighbouring States, which has been in several respects improved under your reign; protected by wise and equal laws in the enjoyment, not only of our civil rights, but our religious blessings; we would be unworthy of these high privileges, if we were not thankful for them to the God of Heaven, and did not also feel a constant gratitude to your Majesty, whom we consider as his Minister, raised up for our good, as the protector, guardian, and father of a great people.

Penetrated as we are with these sentiments, it has been matter of much grief to us that the spirit of Rebellion has been prevailing, and still continues to prevail in your American Colonies; and that the gentle measures pursued by your Majesty and your Parliament to suppress it, have hitherto been attended with so little success.

We are grieved that any of your subjects should be so infatuated as to deprive themselves of the real liberty, protection, and happiness they have long enjoyed under constitutional authority, and subject themselves to all the miseries of a democratical tyranny. We regret that they should receive any encouragement from the spirit of faction at home, and be flattered with ideas of liberty, which appear to us inconsistent with subjection to law, and subversive of all regular Government.

We have long seen with pleasure how averse your Majesty has been to draw the sword, and arm the nation even in support of law and legal authority, which have been insulted and trampled upon in your American Dominions. These insults you have borne with a patience and lenity unexampled in any former reign. We can easily enter into the distress which your benevolent and compassionate heart must feel for the miseries which these deluded men have drawn upon themselves, and still more for the lives of your brave subjects which may be sacrificed before peace and order can be re-established.

We should judge ourselves wanting in duty to your Majesty, and in justice to the people under our care, did we not embrace the present opportunity of assuring your Majesty of their fidelity and affection to your Majesty's person and Government, their zealous attachment to our happy Constitution, and abhorrence of the present Rebellion. To inculcate on the people of our respective congregations the principles and duties of Christianity, a reverence for the laws of their country, and an affectionate attachment to the best of Sovereigns, ever has been, and we trust ever shall be, our sincere and active endeavour.

We implore the Supreme Disposer of all events, that he would, in his great mercy, shorten these dire calamities; that he would direct your councils, favour your schemes in the course of his Providence, and crown with success your generous designs for restoring and establishing liberty, harmony, and happiness, in every part of your extensive Empire.

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this Provincial Synod of Glasgow and Ayr.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment,

JAMES BAILLIE, Moderator.

JOHN STEVENSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Copper-Mine, April 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When you met at Baltimore last March, I presented you with a memorial, informing you that eighteen hands at my mine were idle for want of gunpowder; and that the Baltimore Committee had taken two hundred pounds out of the publick magazine, which I had purchased last fall, and which has greatly impeded the carrying on my works at the Copper-Mine. You were then pleased to take my case into consideration, and grant me some relief. However, since that, I had procured one hundred pounds of powder, at a very great expense and charge, in Philadelphia, which, coming down in the packet, with sundry other things for the Committee, they likewise seized, and will not deliver up. What I have to request of the honourable the Council of Safety is, either to order my last hundred pounds of powder to be returned me, or, if the publick safety requires it should not be given up, to order me money to replace the same quantity. I have purchased very good powder, manufactured in the country, at ten shillings per pound, and can be supplied with a sufficient quantity to carry on my works at that price, and not under. The powder I have experienced to be of as good quality as any imported from Europe; therefore I flatter myself you will take it into your consideration either to order me the powder or money.

Your compliance will very much oblige, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

JOHN STEVENSON.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

WILLIAM LUX TO DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

Baltimore, April 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have just received your favour of the 6th, and am much pleased that our Committee are able to justify their conduct to your satisfaction. I believe they all mean to do right; but it is quite necessary to keep them within bounds, because their zeal will sometimes outstrip their prudence. I intend coming down the last of the week, or the beginning of the next, with the account of the Defence, and will then bring the schooner's accounts, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. Hollingsworth has not got any clover-seed; the flaxseed, oil, and lead, you shall have by the very first conveyance. I am afraid hackles cannot be got; but I will try. I must beg you to send by Mr. Chase eight hundred pounds. Mr. Alexander has never come down, and I must pay off all the ship's accounts before I come down.

I hear the Convention is adjourned; if so, I wish to know. We have got three of the eighteen-pounders down; six more were to set off yesterday. Mr. Hughes has drawn on me for the carriage, and hopes you will place some money in my hands for that purpose. I have paid thirty pounds for these three, and wrote to him to send an order on the Council, as I imagine they would indulge him, when they saw him exerting himself.

Mr. Trumbull tells me you have appointed Captain Nicholson Agent and Paymaster of the Defence. Please let me know; and whether we are to be any further concerned in furnishing anything on the ship's account, as we may close it finally.

I wish the account in the papers of the surrender of Quebeck could be true; but it will come presently. I have been hard at it, disputing the point of independency, two to one against me.

I wish you health and happiness; and am, honourable sir, your obliged obedient servant,

WILLIAM LUX.

To Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq.

P. S. You must excuse half a sheet of paper these times.

JAMES HINDMAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Talbot Court-House, April 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When I was in Annapolis you were kind enough to promise me fifty stand of arms. If you think it safe, shall be much obliged to you to send them over by the Miles River Packet, with the accoutrements necessary for them. I shall be able, I am in hopes, to get thirty or forty blankets, and hope you will spare me as many as you can. I am very anxious to get to my station. Pots and camp-kettles please to send me at the same time; hats you also promised me; and cloth, if you have any to spare, as many of my people are very bare of clothes, and begin to grumble about not having them. In our present situation, it is impossible to keep the company all together, as many of them cannot get their board nearer than seven or eight miles, which makes it impossible for them to meet as regularly as they ought; for which reason am very desirous of getting arms and blankets, to remove to my station.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES HINDMAN.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

HENRY SCOTT AND OTHERS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Bladensburg, April 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As we would not willingly interfere with any person's private character, unless obliged so to do, on a matter of the utmost importance, which, in the present case, we are under the necessity of doing, so far as it is consistent with our opinions and safety; yet far be it from us, and sorry, indeed, should we be to do the smallest injustice to any person whatever, nor will we, in any respect, condescend to it. We are apprehensive that Mr. William Hamilton may be appointed Captain, in place of Captain Andrew Beall, by the recommendation of Colonel Joshua Beall, through prejudice to our late Captain, who would not condescend to serve as Captain under him. There has been great confusion in our company since our Captain resigned, and it will be much more so if Hamilton should be appointed Captain, as a great majority of the company are determined not to serve under him—he not being a proper person, in any respect whatever, for that office; and sensible we are that, in the event of his being appointed, (should it so happen,) a company inferior to none in the Province, in the Militia, must inevitably come to nothing, wholly from the dislike of his filling that station. We, therefore, hope and entreat your Honours not to be the cause of destroying so good a company, which you might innocently be induced to do by the recommendations of the Colonel; but we trust that you will take the matter into your serious consideration, and reflect that we are a free people, and have a right to the choice of our own officers, under whom we are to risk our lives and fortunes with theirs, which we will most cheerfully and readily do, whenever called upon, provided we have officers agreeable, and such only we will obey. We therefore pray your Honours would gratify us, in granting a commission to Mr. Andrew Beall, Jun., as our Captain, in place of his father—a young man that we choose, in preference to any man in the company, and who is balloted in by a great majority, having thirty odd votes out of fifty, and there were four candidates. And we further entreat you to give us the liberty of choosing our other officers, which will give great satisfaction to the whole company.

We are, for ourselves, and in behalf of the rest of the company, with much respect, gentlemen, your very obedient servants,

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

The Petition of WILLIAM HAMILTON sheweth:

That your Petitioner has undoubted reasons to believe that there are methods carrying on by some to exclude him from the post as Captain, where he now is First Lieutenant, of the company of Militia that Captain Beall has resigned. He (in order to get his son, Andrew Beall, Jun., who was Second Lieutenant, appointed in his place, and from his expectations of being appointed Major) resigned, and solicited the company to recommend his son (who is yet a youth) as Captain over your Petitioner.

And your Petitioner hath proper credentials to produce to your honourable Board, if required, of his being in the Provincial service nine years the last war, at the reduction of Quebeck, &c. Your Petitioner, therefore, hopes your Honours will be pleased to appoint him to the post as Captain, as, by rotation, he humbly thinks he is entitled to. And, in duty bound, will, &c.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO QUEEN ANNE'S COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 113.]

Annapolis, April 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of a letter received by Mr. James Tilghman, from Edward Tilghman, Esquire, we send you the Association papers of your County, transmitted to the last Convention. Be pleased to return them to us as soon as you have done with them. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Queen Anne's County.

COLONEL HASLETT TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 11, 1776.]

Dover, April 10, 1776.

SIR: The officer who commands the detachment of the Delaware Battalion, at Lewes, has written me a circumstantial account of an engagement between them and a tender of the Roebuck man-of-war, a transcript of which I have the honour to enclose you.

The Chairman of the Council of Safety, for that County, very earnestly requests that another company may be sent there, with arms and accoutrements, in aid of that detachment, one-half of which is every day on duty. On mentioning this request to General Rodney, one of our Kent Council of Safety, I have reason to believe it will be granted by them, on a promise of returning those arms (the property of the County) whenever the Council shall think the interest of the community calls for them. Having anticipated the order of Congress, with respect to the two companies now at Lewes, I hope my directing another to the same duty will receive your approbation.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble servant,

JOHN HASLETT.

To the Honourable Colonel Hancock.

Extract of a Letter from the Commanding Officer at LEWES, dated APRIL 9th, 1776.

On Sunday, 7th April, an express came from the Light-House Guard, to Lewes, with intelligence that Captain Field, who commanded a schooner sent by the Council of that County to Eustatia for powder, had just arrived, and demanded assistance to unload her. I gave orders for the troops to march, as soon as boats could be had to ferry them across the creek, which the inhabitants procured with amazing despatch. We then marched, with the utmost expedition, to reinforce our guard, which had taken post by the schooner, to assist in discharging her cargo—mostly coarse linens. She then lay seven or eight miles to the southward of our cape. At the time of our arrival, the tender, making sail, bore down upon the schooner: on observing this, the men immediately ran her on shore. Our troops were out-gone by the tender, though they marched at the rate of seven miles per hour. Just before our arrival, the tender gave our guard a broadside with swivels and musketry, which they returned. On our junction, a constant fire was kept up for some time, till we perceived the distance too great. We then left off firing, and unloaded the schooner, though several hundred shots were fired at us to prevent it. Our people picked up many of their balls rolling in the sand. The tender despatched one of the barges to the ship for assistance, who made sail immediately, but was soon obliged to come to anchor, for fear of running on the Hen-and-Chickens. About the time the ship turned the cape, the tender anchored within musket-shot of the schooner, and kept up a continual fire with her swivels. We had, by this time, got the swivels in the schooner loaded with grape-shot, and a constant fire, for two hours, was kept up on both sides. We undoubtedly wounded their men, for we perceived some to fall, and others run to their assistance. They made several efforts to purchase their anchor, which were prevented by our fire; but at last they succeeded. Fortunately, however, one of our swivels cut their halyards, and down came their mainsail, which obliged them to anchor once more. At last, the wind shifting, they had a boat to tow them off. We then turned our fire on the boat, where two men were seen to fall; the barge, returning from the ship, joined to tow them out. Our men escaped unhurt. The Militia officers, at Lewes, acted with a spirit which does honour to their country.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.—LETTER VI.

Philadelphia, April 10, 1776.

In the conclusion of my last letter, I charged the author of Common Sense with perverting the Scripture, in his account of the origin of the Jewish Monarchy. I proceed to offer some remarks in support of that charge.

“Monarchy,” says he, (meaning, probably, the institution of Monarchy,) “is ranked in Scripture as one of the sins of the Jews, for which a curse in reserve is denounced against them. The history of that transaction”—either the transaction of Monarchy, or the transaction of denouncing a curse in reserve—“is worth attending to.”

This confused proposition he endeavours to establish by a commentary upon first Samuel, chapter 8, full as far-fetched and ridiculous, as he will probably say mine is upon the prophecy of Mount-Seir. But this matter must be treated more seriously, for the sake of a country in which (God be thanked) the Scriptures are read, and regarded with that reverence which is due to a revelation from Heaven. I must, therefore, endeavour to rescue out of our author's hands that portion of the sacred history which he has converted into a libel against the civil Constitution of Great Britain; and show in what sense the passage has been universally received, as well by the Jews themselves as by commentators, venerable for their piety and learning, in every Christian country.

The Jews were long privileged with a peculiar form of Government, called a Theocracy, under which the “Almighty either stirred up some person, by an immediate signification of his will, to be their Judge, or, when there was none, ruled their proceedings himself, by Urim and Thummim, directing what course they were to follow in the public concerns of the nation.”*

But they were of an ungovernable temper, fond of pomp as well as dominion over their neighbours; and being disgusted with the misconduct of Samuel's sons, whom, in his old age, he had made his assistant Judges over Israel, they came to him, and entreated him to appoint a King, who might rule their nation, and avenge them of the Philistines. Samuel, deeply afflicted at the impious design they entertained of rejecting the divine Government, prays the Almighty for direction, who authorizes him to hearken to their voice, “for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, (says God,) that I should not reign over them.” He also instructs Samuel to enter a solemn protest against them for their folly and ingratitude, in preferring a human to a divine Government; and to show them the manner of the King that shall reign over them, since they desired a King to judge them like all the nations.

Now, all the nations which they knew, were ruled by Kings, whose arbitrary will stood in the place of law; and it appears also that the Jews, since the day that they were brought out of Egypt, had still retained a particular hankering after the customs of that country. The Almighty, therefore, by his prophet, not only signifies his displeasure against all such arbitrary rulers, but against every people who would impiously and foolishly prefer such a Government to one immediately under himself, where, in his providence, he might think fit to appoint such an one. And so far I have no difference with our author. But Samuel proceeds further to reason with the Jews, and, in the twelfth chapter, reminds them of the many deliverances which God had given them by the hands of their Judges—Moses, Jephthah, Gideon, &c., having with a strong hand brought them out of Egypt; having subdued the Assyrians, Ammonites, Moabites, and Philistines before them; and that, for all this, they preferred a Government even after the most corrupt models, to his just and righteous Government. And to convince them still further of their folly and ingratitude, the prophet appeals to a signal which he would give them from Heaven. He accordingly calls down an uncommon storm in the midst of harvest, and the astonished multitude cry out, “We have added to our sins this evil to ask us a King.”

Here our author erects his standard, and here he compliments himself with the mockery of triumph. “These portions of Scripture (says he, in all the assurance of infallibility) are direct and positive. They admit of no equivocal construction. That the Almighty hath here entered his protest against Monarchical Government is true, or the Scripture is false.” But I will take the liberty to say, that the Scripture is true, and that this author's inference is horribly false; nay, further, that from the whole spirit of the passage, as well as the reason of things, it is to be inferred that the Almighty would have as strongly expressed his displeasure against the Jews, had they rejected his Government for one of their own appointment, whether it had been monarchical or democratical—to be administered by one man or a thousand men.

The author had said before, that Samuel did not show the manner of any “particular King, but the general manner of the Kings of the earth, whom Israel was so eagerly copying after.” If he means to confine himself to these Kings, I have given them to him, to make the best of them. But if he means to argue from particulars to generals, and to make the old Prophet extend his protest against all future Monarchical Governments, such as were to subsist some thousands of years afterwards, however limited and mixed, particularly that of Great Britain, (which must certainly be our author's meaning, or he proves nothing to his purpose;) I say, then, if this be his meaning, I cannot so easily part with him; for in this lies our whole difference; and the particular case of the Jews cannot be applied to any other nation in this instance, as none else were ever in similar circumstances.

Acherley, in his Britannick Constitutions, (and I think our author borrows some of his principles where they can serve his purpose,) says expressly, “that the nations round about Israel invested their Kings with absolute power; and that it is a wild imagination to say that the Israelitish Kings, who were but copies (of these Kings) should, either in their election or power, be a pattern to Great Britain.” “There cannot be found either in the Old or New Testament, any particular description of the race of men, which are or ever were Kings of this nation.” How, then, can there be a Scripture protest against a race of men who are not even described in Scripture? Mark that,* Common Sense.

* Lowth's Commentaries.

Let me add one authority more, from a commentator at least as good as our author, and who, nevertheless, flatly contradicts him—I mean the celebrated Grotius. He tells us that Samuel, in this passage, does not speak of what our author calls the “general manner of Kings,” or the just and honest right of a King to do such things; because his right is otherwise described elsewhere, as shall be shown. The prophet only speaks of such a right as the Kings round about Israel had acquired, which was not a true right; for such is not the signification of the original word Mishpat; but such an action as (being founded in might and violence) hath the effectum juris, or comes in the place of right.

Grotius, I fear, is too learned for us inferior writers (Scriptores minorum gentium) to follow him in this place. But Sidney (that great martyr to liberty) adopts the same explanation. “Samuel’s words (says he) are acknowledged by all interpreters who were not malicious or mad, to be a dissuasion of the Jews from their wicked purpose; not a description of what a King might justly do, by virtue of his office, but what those, who should be set up against God and his law, would do when they should have the power in their hands.”

Both Grotius and Sidney are well warranted in this interpretation, not only by the Hebrew text, but other clear passages of Scripture, and particularly the seventeenth chapter of Deuteronomy, where, with the approbation of Heaven, the duty of a good King is described and limited. The Jews commonly understood this chapter as containing an absolute promise from Heaven of a Royal Government, and a sufficient authority for the request made to Samuel more than three hundred years afterwards. Others understood it conditionally,—that if they did reject the Divine Government, and set up one of their own appointment, God would permit them; but their King should be chosen in the manner, and with the qualifications in that chapter described. All this, however, they disregarded when they asked an arbitrary King, like those of their neighbouring nations; and therefore, it is demonstratively certain that Samuel, in entering his protest against such Kings, did not protest against Kings or Monarchical Governments generally. Either this remark is true, or one part of Scripture is a direct contradiction to the other. But let the passage to which I refer speak for itself:

“When thou art come unto the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, and shall say, I will set a King over me, like as all the nations that are about me; thou shalt in anywise set him King over thee whom the Lord thy God shall choose, one from among thy brethren, not a stranger,” &c. It is further directed, that he shall not be given to covetousness, nor multiply horses, nor wives to himself, nor greatly multiply to himself gold and silver. That when he shall sit upon the throne of his Kingdom he shall write a copy of the law in his book; (which it was understood he was to do with his own hand.) That this book shall be with him, (or always carried about him,) and he shall read therein all the days of his life, that he may learn to fear the Lord his God, to keep the words of the law, and make it the rule of his Government, as well as private life. If he does this, God promises a blessing on his Government, to prolong his days in his Kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel. Does not this smell strongly of Monarchy, and even of hereditary Monarchy? Is not some sort of approbation, yea and a blessing, promised to both, when religiously administered, notwithstanding all that this writer has said to the contrary?

But he has not the candour to compare Scripture with Scripture; nor does he give a single passage complete, and connected with the parts necessary to explain it,—a clear proof that other craft may be employed as well as King-craft and Priest-craft, in “withholding the Scripture from the people,” even in Protestant countries. Had our author proceeded a little farther, or given the passages complete as he went along, it would have appeared that, notwithstanding the just displeasure of the Almighty, and his protest against the Jews for throwing off his righteous Government, yet as mercy and forgiveness are his chief delight, and he knows that there is no perfection in man, the matter was pretty amicably settled at last, and the Divine countenance was given to the establishment of Monarchy, even in the person of Saul. God himself directed his election and appointment; and to prepare him for his office, gave him another heart, and also the spirit of prophecy.

As to the thunder-storm, in which our author exults, as an absolute disapprobation of all Monarchical Government, it was no more than a sign called for by Samuel, to convince the people that he spoke in the name of the Lord. But what did he speak in the verses immediately preceding? Not, surely, that God had a particular quarrel with Monarchical Government, as such, and that “blood would attend it;” but rather the contrary—that since the Jews would still insist upon a Government of their own appointment, the Almighty would yet give them a blessing under that very form, upon condition of their obedience to his law. “If ye will fear the Lord and serve him, and obey his voice, &c., then shall both ye, and also the King that reigneth over you, continue following the Lord;” to which duty of following the Lord a blessing is always promised in Scripture. “But if you will not obey, &c., the hand of the Lord shall be against you.” So it would have been for disobedience had they not asked a King! And, immediately after the thunder-storm, Samuel confirms this doctrine, and comforts the people: “Fear not, (said he,) although you have thus sinned, the Lord will not forsake his people. As for me, God forbid that I should sin against the Lord, and cease to pray for you. But I will instruct you in the good and right way.” Thus, it seems, a good and right way was yet to be found under Monarchical Government. From all which it is plain, that the Almighty had now pardoned the Jews; and the Prophet follows the example, promising still to proceed in the discharge of his duty among them, as a people yet in covenant with God. But, as I hinted before, it did not suit our author’s purpose to take notice of such passages as these; and he has been guilty of still as great a perversion of Scripture concerning David, whom God undeniably approved of, and appointed to monarchal rule.

“The high encomium given to David, takes no notice of him officially as a King, but only as a man after God’s own heart.” I know the poor equivocation which the author has here in reserve to offer, for his saying that this character was not given to David officially as a King, but as a man. It is true, that when Samuel first applied the character to David, he had not yet entered on his office; but when it was predicted that the Kingdom should not be continued in the family of Saul, because he had violated the law, and intruded himself into the Priest’s duty, which did not belong to him, the Prophet tells him that “the Lord hath sought him a man after his own heart,” with the express design of making him the successor of Saul, on account of his excellent and God-like disposition. “The Lord hath commanded him (this man after his own heart) to be Captain over his people, because thou (Saul) hath not kept that which the Lord commanded thee.” That one man is here rejected from being a King, because of his disobedience to God, and another chosen as his successor, because of his goodness of heart and regard to religion, “is true, or Scripture is false.” But one greater than Samuel, even St. Paul, puts this beyond all doubt, and appropriates the encomium to David, not merely as a King elect, but one actually exercising the office. “When he had removed him, (says the Apostle, meaning Saul,) he raised up unto them David to be their King, to whom also he gave testimony, and said, I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfill all my will,” namely, in his character of a King.

Numerous are the passages of Scripture which might be brought to show that the Almighty approved of David officially as a King, on account of his publick virtues, and that a Divine blessing was given to the Jewish Monarchy, under his direction. The reader may consult 2 Samuel, v. 10, 12, viii, 16; Psalms lxxviii, 70, 71, 72; Psalms lxxxix, 20, 23.

I have now done with our author on this head, and can return one of his polite expressions—“I despise him,” equally as a perverter of Scripture, and of the fundamental principles of mixed Government. I am threatened with being “hunted from every lane and lurking hole.” Hunt on. I skulk in no such places, but keep the open streets. “Wait a little,” say others, “Cato will soon be found tripping, and stumbling upon Tory doctrine, the divine right of Kings, non-resistance, and the like.” Well, gentlemen, wait patiently till it so happens; but let me, in the mean time, have fair play. I claim it of the publick, as being engaged in a cause which is of the utmost importance to them as well as to myself; and while I handle it decently I can rely on their candour. I have got over what some may have viewed as the most thorny part of my way; and, upon the whole matter, I contend for this: That where a people are left to choose their own forms of Government, as has been the case of all the world for some thousand years, there is no particular denunciation of God's displeasure against any form, whether monarchical or democratical, under which such a people may think their civil happiness best secured, and their duty to God best performed.

Acherley shall again shelter me in this conclusion, which is the main purport of the present letter: "Jesus Christ left all the potentates of this world and their subjects to decide their several rights by the temporal laws of each nation; and never intimated what form of Government was most convenient or eligible." This directly contradicts our author, who says that the Almighty has entered his protest against the particular form of Monarchy. Yet Acherley was a good Whig, and desired to leave Scripture out of the institution of modern Governments. It might be well for the author of Common Sense to follow the example in his future works, without stirring up an old dispute, of which our fathers were long since wearied.

It has been asked, why does not Cato come to the point? he is but yet in the suburbs. Softly, gentlemen. If this be true, why do you, who are in the citadel, make such a noise, and betray such fears? Can you not let me pursue the siege in my own way? I really thought that if I could sap or overturn your foundations, the aerial part of your fabrick would tumble to the ground. You call on me to show my plan. I have done it; and mentioned as such, a safe return to a connection with our ancient friends and kindred, accompanied with all the advantages we have formerly experienced, and perhaps more; which, I trust, are things yet practicable; or, if it should prove otherwise, we can lose nothing by the exercise of deliberation and wisdom in the mean while. But what have you done? Although it was incumbent on you to have shown the advantages of your plan to the great and respectable number of good men who will always be averse to changes, except in the last necessity; although you ought to resolve their honest doubts concerning their future safety and peace, which have been plentifully thrown out to you; in short, although you ought to have counted the cost of your work, and have tried to reconcile with your design a multitude of interests, commercial, political, and economical,—you have only entertained us with some loose declamations upon abuses in the English Government; and shocked us, for want of better arguments, by a perversion of things sacred; filling the papers with personal invectives and calumnies against all who cannot swallow, at a venture, every crude notion which you may cook up as the politicks of the day. This will as little agree with the stomachs of others as with mine; although I have declared that, when the last necessity comes, I have no expedient in view but to take my chance with you, for better and for worse.

CATO.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL PUTNAM.

Philadelphia, April 10, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of your letter, I laid the application before the Congress, who were pleased, in addition to the one hundred thousand dollars sent by Captain Faulkner, on Monday last, to order two hundred thousand more, which I have the pleasure of forwarding by Major Sherburne.

Should the Paymaster be at New-York, please to order it to his care, for the use of the troops; if not, you will order the money to be improved for the same purpose, and send a receipt for it.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Major-General Putnam, at New-York.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, April 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: It is necessary, in conducting the warlike operations on the part of America, to meet our enemy on every ground, and to defend ourselves in the best manner we can, against all attempts, in whatever shape, to deprive us of either liberty or property.

So far are the British Ministry from showing the least relaxation in their barbarous schemes of reducing the American Colonies to slavery, that they have passed an act to seize and confiscate our property wherever found on the high seas. In consequence of this measure, the Congress have come to a resolution of fitting out letters of marque and reprisal; the commission, instructions, and bond, preparatory to which, I have the honour to enclose you; and am, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Convention of New-York.

ADRIAN BANCKER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Richmond County, April 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This day the Chairman of the Committee of this County waited on me, and informed me that Cornelius Van Wagenen, Esq., who was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Militia here, has declined accepting his commission, on account of his ill state of health; which has involved them in some difficulty, and makes a new arrangement of Field-Officers necessary; which they have completed, as per enclosed list. And as a little alteration in the commissions may make them sufficient, I send them herewith, as also a Lieutenant's commission for Samuel Holmes, in the south quarter, who has absolutely refused serving; wherefore they have chosen a William Lake to be First Lieutenant in his stead, under Captain William Scoby.

Being rendered incapable of travelling, by the sciatica, causes me to take this method, by letter, to apply to you, instead of waiting on you in person, as duty and inclination would have prompted me. And as next Tuesday is the day appointed for the choice of Deputies, to sit in the ensuing Provincial Congress, it will save trouble to deliver the commissions at that meeting, if they can be conveniently sent in time. I am of opinion that the safest way is per stage, which sets off from Paulus Hook on Monday morning, at dawn of day.

I am, with due respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

ADRIAN BANCKER.

To the New-York Committee of Safety.

P. S. Past eight o'clock, in the evening.—Just now, Mr. Lawrence sent me a letter he received from Mr. Benson, requiring that our County should be represented, to-morrow morning, in the Committee of Safety; and as I am utterly incapable of travelling, I have pressed him, by a few lines, to give attendance, which I hope he will comply with.

Return of Officers of the Militia of RICHMOND County.

Abraham Jones, Esq., First Colonel, continues.

Cornelius Corsen, Esq., Second Colonel.

Jacob Mersereau, Esq., First Major.

Cornelius Cortelyou, Esq., Second Major.

Benjamin Parker, Esq., Adjutant.

Harmanus Garrison, Esq., Quartermaster, continues.

Samuel Holmes having refused, William Lake appointed in his stead as First Lieutenant.

SAMUEL BUELL TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Huntington, April 10, 1776.

SIR: After a cordial salutation, these will inform you that I left Easthampton on Monday morning, after nine o'clock. No further discoveries were made of the fleets mentioned in the Committee's letter, unless that considerable number of shipping made a harbour at Fisher's Island on Lord's day evening. These, I suppose, are what we call Wallace's fleet. Those seen at sea, Sunday afternoon, perhaps were from the West-Indies or Boston. By their clustering in together, and frequent firing, it seems they were collecting their scattered fleet. We, sir, at the east end of Long-Island, are certainly much exposed to ravages and plundering, by the hand of violence. Whether we do not greatly need a regiment or two at the east end, must be submitted to your superior wisdom.

I am, sir, in great haste and much respect, your obliged friend and servant,

SAMUEL BUELL.

To the New-York Committee of Safety.

CAPTAIN HULBERT TO JOHN MCKESSON.

New-York, April 10, 1776.

SIR: As Captain Cooper, the bearer, is waiting, in order to get a permit to take on board a load of provisions; and the Committee of Safety not yet making a House, he requests of me to inform you of his character. The gentleman belongs to Southampton, and has, to my knowledge, been employed in the publick service, to carry provisions from this to the eastward for our Army. And whilst I acted as a Committee-man for the town of Southampton, he always appeared to act for the publick good; and I give it as a private opinion, that he will act with prudence and caution, if he should be permitted by your House to take on board provisions for the distressed inhabitants at Dartmouth, or the eastern parts, &c. If you can in any way assist him in getting a permit, should take it as a peculiar favour, although it is no concern of mine, only to oblige, as far as I can, in my small sphere, every honest man to serve himself and country, &c.

I am, sir, your humble servant, JOHN HULBERT.
To Mr. McKesson.

JONATHAN LANDON TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Little Nine Partners, April 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with the request of the Committee of Safety, I applied to Mr. Moses Harris, who undertook to make discovery of some lead mines in the Nine Partners. Mr. McDonald and myself accompanied him to a limestone-kill, where, about twenty years since, a company of adventurers had sunk several shafts or pits, in quest of copper, as I am informed. Mr. McDonald made several trials and discoveries, both of lead and copper, and has drawn a report, the truth of which, as far as I could judge, may be depended on. We also applied to one Mr. Fish, on whose land Mr. Harris has made an advantageous discovery of lead, for leave to dig, but he would not gratify us; so that Mr. Harris's chief discovery was not explored by Mr. McDonald.

I am told the mines are now the property of a company; and that some of the family of the late Colonel Horsman, a Mr. Bogart, and Tiebout, of New-York, are some of them, of whom it is probable the Committee may be informed of every particular.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,
JONATHAN LANDON.
To the Committee of Safety for the Province of New-York.

COLONEL NICOLL TO JOHN MCKESSON.

Fort Constitution, April 10, 1776.

SIR: I understand there are some new regiments to be raised in this Province. I have been some months in the service, and am still willing to be continued, if your body should think me a proper person. Enclosed you have a recommendation from Mr. Wisner, which he gave me to the Congress. After I received it, I understood that there had been so many applications that I thought it not worth my while to apply. If there should be any new regiments to be raised, I would be much obliged to you to mention my name to Congress, and make such use of the enclosed as you shall think fit.

From your humble servant, ISAAC NICOLL.
To John McKesson, Esq.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read May 4, 1776.]

Holland-House, before Quebec, April 10, 1776.

SIR: I arrived here about a week ago; and General Arnold, by his desire, sets off this morning to supply my place at Montreal.

By a return of the state of the Army, which General Arnold sent, about ten days since, to Mr. Deane, you will see what we have to rely upon. Our situation is truly very disagreeable. We have between two and three thousand mouths to fill, and not many more than half the number of men to do duty; and many of them expect to leave us the 15th instant. We are erecting two or three batteries; but our powder and artillery stores are so trifling, that I rather imagine no great results ought to be expected from them. Troops come in to our assistance but slowly; and a great part of those who have arrived have been but of very little service, on account of the small-pox.

In making out the arrangement of officers for the two regiments directed to be raised out of the broken corps in Canada, I promised them to write to the honourable Congress, to exchange them for two other regiments from the Colonies, which might be sent into this country, and their places in the Colonies be supplied by the two regiments raised here. As the troops who will compose these regiments have undergone great hardships, and have been from home near a twelvemonth, (which is much longer than they expected,) I think their request a reasonable one, and could wish to have it complied with.

I am, sir, with the greatest esteem and respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM THE CAPTAIN OF MARINES, ON BOARD THE SHIP ALFRED, DATED AT NEW-LONDON,
APRIL 10, 1776.

Before this comes to hand, I make no doubt you will have heard of our arrival in this port, and of our engagement with the Glasgow man-of-war; but as I intend giving you an account of our cruise, must beg your patience for a while respecting that matter. The 17th of February, left Cape-Henlopen, and after a very pleasant passage of fifteen days, came to anchor off the Island of Abaca, about seventeen leagues distance from New-Providence, where we brought to several small vessels belonging to Providence, which gave the Commodore an opportunity of inquiring into the state of the Island, as to its defence; and found it very well supplied with warlike stores, and an object worthy of our attention, as it was not sufficiently manned to give us opposition. The vessels we then had in our possession were detained as transports, to carry the Marines over to Providence. We embarked, and made sail on Saturday evening, March 2, and on Sunday, at two o'clock, landed all our men (two hundred and seventy in number) under my command at the east end of the Island, at a place called New-Guinea. The inhabitants were very much alarmed at our appearance, and supposed us to be Spaniards, but were soon undeceived after our landing. Just as I had formed the men, I received a message from the Governour, desiring to know what our intentions were. I sent him for answer, to take possession of all the warlike stores on the Island belonging to the Crown, but had no design of touching the property or hurting the persons of any of the inhabitants, unless in our defence. As soon as the messenger was gone, I marched forward to take possession of Fort Montague, a fortification built of stone, about half way between our landing place and the town. As we approached the fort, (within about a mile, having a deep cove to go round, with a prodigious thicket on one side and the water on the other, entirely open to their view,) they fired three twelve-pound shot, which made us halt, and consult what was best to be done; we then thought it more prudent to send a flag to let them know what our designs were in coming there. We soon received an answer, letting us know that it was by the Governour's orders that they fired. They spiked up the cannon and abandoned the fort, and retired to the fort within the town. I then marched and took possession of it, in which were found seventeen pieces of cannon, (thirty-two, eighteen, and twelve pounders,) and not much damaged; they were spiked with nails and spikes, which are easily taken out. I thought it necessary to stay all night, and refresh my men, who were fatigued, being on board the small vessels, not having a convenience either to sleep or cook in. The next morning by daylight we marched forward to the town, to take possession of the Governour's house, which stands on an eminence, with two four-pounders, which commands the garrison and town. On our march I met an express from the Governour, to the same purport as the first. I sent him the same answer as before. The messenger then told me I might march into the town, and if I thought proper, into the fort, without interruption; on which I marched into town. I then drafted a guard, and went up to the Governour's, and demanded the keys of the fort, which were given to me immediately, and then took possession of Fort Nassau. In it there were forty cannon mounted, and well located for our reception, with round, langridge, and canister shot. All this was accomplished without firing a single shot from our side. We found in this fort a great quantity of shot and shells, with fifteen brass mortars; but the grand article, powder, the Governour sent off the night before, viz: one hundred and fifty casks. Immediately after we were in the fort, I sent for the Governour, and made him prisoner until the Commodore arrived, which was soon after. We remained at Providence till we got all the stores on board the fleet, and then took our departure, the 17th of March. We have brought with us from Providence the Governour, his Secretary, and one Mr. Irving, Receiver-General of his Majesty's Customs, who belongs to South-Carolina.

On the 4th instant, we made the east end of Long-Island, and discovered the Columbus (who had parted with us the night before) to windward, with a schooner of six guns, one of Captain Wallace's tenders, which she had taken that morning. We made Block-Island in the afternoon, when the Commodore ordered the brig to stand in for Rhode-Island, to see if any more of the fleet were out, and join us the next morning; which was accordingly done, but without seeing any vessel except a New-York sloop, which Captain Biddle brought to the fleet, and after her papers were examined, she was released. At daylight we discovered a brigantine to leeward; we made sail, and soon came up with her, and, after a few shots, took her. She proved to be a bomb brigantine belonging to Wallace's fleet, mounting eight guns and two howitzers, commanded by one Snead, a Lieutenant in the Navy. We continued to cruise all day within sight of Block-Island, and in the evening took a brigantine and sloop from New-York, and have brought them into port with us, not being satisfied as to their clearances. At sunset we were twelve sail in all, and had a very pleasant evening. At twelve o'clock went to bed, and at half past one was awakened by the cry of "all hands to quarters." We were soon ready for action; the main body of my company, with my First Lieutenant, was placed in the barge on the main-deck, the remaining part, with my Second Lieutenant and myself, on the quarter-deck. We soon discovered a large ship standing directly for us. The Cabot was foremost of the fleet, our ship close after, not more than one hundred yards behind, but to windward withal. When the brigantine came close up, she was hailed by the ship, which we then learned was the Glasgow man-of-war; the brigantine immediately fired her broadside, and instantly received a return of twofold, which, owing to the weight of metal, damaged her so much in her hull and rigging, as obliged her to retire for a while to refit. Our ship then came up, (not having it in our power to fire a shot before without hurting the brigantine,) and engaged her side by side for three glasses, as hot as possibly could be on both sides. The first broadside she fired, my Second Lieutenant fell dead close by my side; he was shot by a musket-ball through the head. In him I have lost a worthy officer, sincere friend and companion, that was beloved by all the ship's company. Unfortunately for us, our tiller-rope and main-brace were shot away soon after the firing began, which caused the ship to broach to, and gave the enemy an opportunity of raking fore and aft. The battle continued till daylight, at which time the Glasgow made all the sail she could crowd, and stood in for Newport; and our rigging was so much hurt, that we could not make sail in time to come up with her again. At sunrise, the Commodore made the signal to give over the chase, he not thinking it prudent to risk our prizes near the land, lest the whole fleet should come out of the harbour. The Glasgow continued firing signal guns the whole day after.

In the action I lost three of my people out of twelve that were on the quarter-deck, and two others, who were in the barge, were slightly wounded. Captain Hopkins, of the Cabot, is wounded, his Master killed, and the Second Lieutenant of Marines wounded, and since dead. Upon the whole, it was a very hot engagement, in which our ship and the brig were much damaged; but we have this consolation, that the enemy is full as badly off; for by several expresses from Rhode-Island, we are assured that it was with much difficulty she got into port, both pumps going. We are now, thank God, in harbour, and shall stay some time to refit.

GEORGE DASHIELL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

April 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I took the liberty, some time since, of informing you of a Company of Militia, in the First Battalion of this Province, being dissatisfied with the appointment of their commissioned officers, whereupon the Captain (George Wailes) resigned his commission, and the company elected by ballot their officers, a certificate of which was transmitted to the Council; but in answer, I was informed that the Council did not think it regular to issue new commissions until those issued by Convention were returned to them. I beg leave to inform you, that upon Captain Wailes's resignation, he delivered me his commission, and that I have by some means or other misplaced it, and have not been able to lay my hands on it since. But as Mr. Wailes is not in possession of the commission issued by Convention, I hope its not being returned to the Council will be no obstacle to their issuing a new one for the gentleman who was returned in the certificate. Mr. Wilson, who was appointed Ensign to that company, has likewise resigned; his commission I have enclosed.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

GEORGE DASHIELL.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN HINDMAN.

[No. 114.]

Annapolis, April 11, 1776.

SIR: We shall send the arms and ammunition to Chester-town to-morrow, or the day following, with directions to Messrs. Smith and Hands (who are now there) to distribute them agreeable to our instructions, and to see that no preference is given therein. We are, &c.

To Captain James Hindman.

JOHN GIBSON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, April 11, 1776.

SIR: I had the honour to receive your letter of this day, informing me the honourable Congress had appointed me Auditor-General of the Publick Accounts, with a salary of one thousand sixty-six and two-thirds dollars per annum.

I beg leave to thank you and that honourable body for the honour they have conferred upon me; and accepting of the charge, to assure the Congress my best abilities shall be exerted in their service, in this and every other of their commands.

I have the honour to be, with the most profound respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

JOHN GIBSON.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Lancaster, April 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The officers of the Seventh and Twenty-Sixth Regiments, with those of the Royal Emigrants, and Captain Chace, of the Navy, having been lately removed from hence by order of the Committee of Safety, under the direction of the honourable the Congress, to the towns of York and Carlisle, in this Province, without having it in their power (as we have reason to believe in respect to some of them) to discharge the moneys due for their lodgings and diet at the house where they lodged and messed in this town; and the persons who have demands against those gentlemen for these articles, having laid their accounts before this Committee, and requested the assistance of the Committee in procuring them their moneys, we are obliged to trouble the honourable the Congress with a state of the demands and accounts of these persons, and request their direction in the matter, that these creditors of the officers (some of whom, especially those whose claims are the greatest, are not in the most easy circumstances) may have their demands adjusted and paid.

This Committee, gentlemen, are in some sort interested in this affair. The officers, when brought to this town by Captain Mott, were placed by him in the houses of Messrs. Matthias Slough and Adam Reigart, whose accounts, we understand, have been transmitted to Congress, and are therefore not taken notice of here. After those gentlemen had entertained and provided for the officers a considerable time, they found it very inconvenient, and requested their removal. The officers took great pains to provide themselves with lodgings and accommodations, but without success. The gentleman with whom they were first placed, at length absolutely refused to provide for them any longer, and applied to the Committee to relieve them. The officers in this situation likewise addressed the Committee, representing the difficulties they were subjected to, every moment in expectation of being turned out of doors, and having notice that no more provisions would be dressed for them. To gentlemen in that delicate situation, though enemies, we could not avoid rendering every service in our power. We made interest with some of the inhabitants to afford them private lodgings, with firewood and candles, at their private houses, where they lodged and breakfasted, attended by their own servants; and as it was inconvenient for private families to dress dinners and suppers for them, we prevailed upon Mr. John Jordan (whose demand is the most considerable) to mess them at his house; and though we did not absolutely engage for the payment of their demands, yet we assured them of our influence in procuring them satisfaction, in case the officers should be unable to pay them. We have the greatest reason to believe these assurances from us were their principal inducement to entertain those gentlemen. They now resort to us, and we must look up to the honourable the Congress.

We must do that justice to the officers of the Seventh Regiment, to mention that none of these demands relate to that corps, except the trifling sum of six pounds ten shillings due Michael Bartgis, and part of the demand of Weitzell and Moore, for Captain Newmarch and Lieutenant Hughes, and that the residue is entirely for the lodgings and accommodations of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment and Emigrants.

The Committee have been highly honoured, and very happy in the testimonials they have received of the approbation of Congress, respecting their former conduct towards the officers and soldiers prisoners here. We could not be idle spectators of the distresses these gentlemen were reduced to. We could not, as a Committee, avoid taking notice of their application; neither could we place them in a situation which would have been less expensive, without treating them in a manner different from that recommended to us by the honourable the Congress, who, we hope, will suffer our conduct in the present case to pass without censure, and order in what manner these people's demands are to be satisfied.

We beg leave to ask if the former resolve of Congress, permitting the officers to come at times from their places of residence to Lancaster, for the purpose of settling with and paying their men, and giving the necessary receipts for their rations, is to be deemed still in force; and whether, upon application of the soldiers for shoes, or any necessary clothing, (those applications now becoming frequent,) this Committee shall provide them at the Continental expense.

We shall steadily persist in carrying into execution every resolve of the honourable the Congress, and be strictly attentive to their directions and recommendations.

We are, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and very humble servants,

J. YEATES, Chairman.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

COMMISSION FOR A PRIVATEER.

IN CONGRESS.—The Delegates of the United Colonies of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, RHODE-ISLAND, CONNECTICUT, NEW-YORK, NEW-JERSEY, PENNSYLVANIA, the Counties of NEW-CASTLE, KENT and SUSSEX on DELAWARE, MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, NORTH-CAROLINA, SOUTH-CAROLINA, and GEORGIA:

To all to whom these presents shall come, send greeting:
Know ye,

That we have granted, and by these presents do grant, license and authority to John Adams, Mariner, commander of the sloop called Chance, of the burden of forty-five tons, or thereabouts, belonging to Joseph Dean, Philip Moore & Co., of Philadelphia, in the County of Philadelphia, mounting four guns, and navigated with forty-five men, to fit out and set forth the said sloop, in a warlike manner, and by and with the said sloop, and the crew thereof, by force of arms, to attack, seize, and take the ships and other vessels belonging to the inhabitants of Great Britain, or any of them, with their tackle, apparel, furniture, and loading, on the high seas, or between high water and low water mark, and to bring the same into some convenient Ports in the Colonies, in order that the Courts, which are or shall be appointed to hear and determine causes, civil and maritime, may proceed in due form to condemn the said captures, if they be judged lawful prizes; the said Joseph Dean & Co. having given bond, with sufficient security, that nothing be done by said commander, or any of the officers, mariners, or company thereof, contrary to, or inconsistent with the usage and customs of civilized nations, and the instructions, (a copy of which is herewith delivered to him.) And we will and require all our officers whatever to give succour and assistance to the said commander in the premises. This commission shall continue in force until the Congress shall issue orders to the contrary.

Dated at Philadelphia, April 11, 1776.

By order of Congress:

JOHN HANCOCK, President.
JOHN ADAMS.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.—LETTER VII.

Philadelphia, April 11, 1776.

The author of Common Sense does not trust wholly to his Scripture doctrines for the demolition of Monarchical Government; and, indeed, how could he? For he seems only to have begun his study of the Bible "since the fatal 19th of April, 1775." Before that period, as he eloquently tells us, "no man was a warmer wisher to reconciliation (with Monarchical Government) than himself." It may be proper, then, to take some notice of what he offers by way of argument against Monarchy, and particularly the hereditary kind.

"If hereditary successions," says he, (meaning succession to Monarchical Government,) "did insure a race of good men, it would have the seal of Divine authority." Thus we find him, with his own hand, affixing the seal of Heaven to what he has before told us the Devil invented, and the Almighty entered his protest against. A strange inconsistency, as well as heterodoxy! For, if Monarchy be from hell, and reprobated by Heaven, how can a succession to it be sanctified by the authority of everlasting goodness?

He finds another curious argument against the English Monarchy, in particular, by tracing it to the rascally original of a French Bastard. Yet, in the estimation of many, this will prove as little against the institution itself, as it would prove against this author's arguments, or mine, in the present controversy, if both of us were discovered, not only to have sprung from bastards, but to be such ourselves. The family escutcheon that is without a blot, must be but of very fresh date. The rest of his arguments appear nothing better than these, even where he displays his whole force, in laying before us the materials of the English Constitution, under different heads.

"First. The remains of Monarchal tyranny, in the person of the King. Secondly. The remains of Aristocratical tyranny, in the persons of the Peers. Thirdly. The new Republican materials, in the persons of the Commons." These, he intimates, may be virtuous; but he should have made them as tyrannical as the others, so far as these Colonies are concerned; else what are we contending for against them?

Alas! what more than Augean labour have I undertaken, in attempting to answer a writer, who, under the specious name of Common Sense, is constantly dealing out paradoxes, and setting himself up, not only in contradiction to the sober sentiments of the wisest of mankind, but often in contradiction to himself? Can any man expect credit who will gravely assert that a people, long famed for wisdom and love of liberty, would have employed themselves for a thousand years in compounding and rearing up a Constitution out of the materials of the different simple forms of Government, and, all the while, have selected nothing but the tyrannical remains of each? To reason with such a writer would be lost labour. Some assertions are too absurd for the possibility of refutation. The rules of logic cannot lay hold of them.

In such a case, the best answer that can be given is, to lay before the reader a true account of the English Constitution, the praises of which have adorned and filled the volumes of the greatest men in our own and other countries. In this part of my work, therefore, I shall have little more to do than to copy them; and as the sentiments of foreigners may be deemed more impartial than our own, I shall take one of the greatest of them—the illustrious Montesquieu—for my chief guide. But as this truly enlightened genius, with the dignity of a profound lawgiver, delivers himself almost in the concise style of aphorisms, that he may be more useful to men whose clear and comprehensive understanding renders them fit for the like office themselves, in the service of their country, I shall endeavour to convey the substance of his doctrines, in the most familiar style, retaining, as far as I am able, his sense and spirit. I shall likewise venture sometimes to make a few additions, either for illustration, or to bring his general principles more closely home to the English Constitution.

There is certainly something too venerable in a fabric built up with so much care by our ancestors, cemented with so much blood, and to which they have adhered for so many ages, to be lightly given up, upon the partial representations, or general invectives of any writer, or number of writers, arguing from the abuse of things against the use of them. We would not lock ourselves out of an old habitation, till we had provided a new and better one; nor part with a common friend upon the passionate accusations of an avowed enemy, without hearing what he could say in his defence, and giving him a fair trial. For, at this rate, we could have nothing of the least stability or permanency upon earth; and our whole lives would be employed in making and unmaking, building up and pulling down, without ever reaping the smallest fruit of our labours.

The author of Common Sense stands singular in his rage for condemning the English Constitution in the lump, and the administration of it from the beginning. The immortal Sydney himself gives it a different character, and speaks with reverence of the wisdom of our ancestors. "They evidently appear, (says he,) not only to have intended well, but to have taken a right course to accomplish what they intended. This had effect as long as the cause continued; and the only fault which can be ascribed to that which they established is, that it has not proved to be perpetual, which is no more than may be justly said of the best human Constitutions that ever have been in the world. If we will be just to our ancestors it will become us, in our time, rather to pursue what we know they intended, and by new Constitutions to repair the breaches made upon the old, than to accuse them of defects that will forever attend the actions of men."

Montesquieu himself, in the cool moments of philosophical reflection, unbiased by local prejudices, and remote, both in time and place; from the scenes he describes, has given us an instructive lesson on this head. "A very droll spectacle (says he) it was in the last century, to behold the impotent efforts the English made for the establishment of Democracy or Republican Government. The spirit of one faction was suppressed only by that of a succeeding faction. The Government was continually changing. The people, amazed at so many revolutions, sought everywhere for a Democracy, without being able to find it anywhere. At length, after a series of tumultuary motions and violent shocks, they were obliged to have recourse to that very Government which they had so odiously proscribed."

Every Government, in order to be complete, must have within itself the power of preserving its being, as well as pursuing its well-being. And such a power necessarily implies three things: 1st, Legislation, or the making laws and regulations for the good of the community; 2d, The execution of these laws; 3dly, The judging when they are duly executed, and punishing offenders. The great object of the whole is political liberty, which Montesquieu defines, "that tranquillity or peace of mind arising from the opinion each person has of his safety. In order to have this liberty, it is requisite that the Government be so constituted, as one man need not be afraid of another,"* either in respect of his person or property. Every man's own feelings can tell him that this is a true definition.

But the union of these three powers—the Legislative, the Executive, and Judicial, in one man, or any number of men, is not liberty, but tyranny complete; because there can be no safety for individuals in such a case, unless goodness were always united with power; which is not to be looked for, except under the perfect government of Heaven. "It is a mistake, (says the great Mr. Locke,) to think that this fault (the abuse of power) is proper only to Monarchies. Other forms of Government are liable to it as well as that; for wherever the power that is put into any hands for the government of the people, and the preservation of their properties, is applied to other ends, and made use of to impoverish, harass, or subdue them to the arbitrary and irregular commands of those that have it, there it presently becomes tyranny, whether those that use it are one or many. Thus we read of thirty tyrants at Athens, as well as one at Syracuse; and the intolerable dominion of the Decemviri, or ten men at Rome, was nothing better. Wherever law ends tyranny begins."

Even the union of but any two of these powers, the Legislative and Executive for example, in one man, or body of men, would leave no chance for liberty; because they who make the laws, being also to execute them, they would be led to frame oppressive laws for the sake of the power and wealth which they might derive to themselves by carrying such laws into execution.

Again, there is no liberty if the power of judging be not separated from both the other powers. For where the same persons who make the laws are either to execute them, or to judge of their execution, the life and liberty of the subject are wholly at their mercy. These principles are general, and they may now be applied to particular examples.

"In Turkey these three powers are united in the Sultan's person, and therefore the subjects groan under the weight of a most frightful oppression."

"In the Republics of Italy, where these three powers are united in a standing body of Magistrates, there is less liberty than in our Monarchies;" meaning those of France, Spain, &c. "Their Government is obliged to have recourse to as violent measures for its support as even that of the Turks." What a situation must the poor subject be in, * Montesquieu, B. XI. ch. 6.

in these Republicks! The same Magistrates, as a body, are absolute in everything. By having the execution of the laws, they possess whatever powers they are pleased to give themselves in making them. They may plunder the State without control; for they, first of all, in the character of lawgivers, appoint what taxes they please; and, being also the executors of the laws, these taxes come into their own hands, and may be put into their own pockets. Being likewise themselves judges, amidst all these oppressions, no man can have a remedy against them, and "every private citizen may be ruined by their particular decisions. Although in such a State there is no external pomp (such as arbitrary Princes have) that indicates tyranny or despotick sway," yet the people know it by a surer mark—"they feel it every moment." Even at Venice, where the power of the Magistracy is said to be somewhat softened, by having different tribunals erected, which temper each other, there is still this mischief, "that these tribunals are composed of Magistrates all belonging to the same body, which constitutes almost one and the same power," unaccountable to any other.

These three powers ought, then, for the preservation of liberty, to be lodged in separate bodies, and made to control each other. Montesquieu adds, that for the greater safety, the judicial power ought not to be given to a standing Senate; but that the judges should be of the same station as the accused; or, in other words, their peers—amenable to the law; only its mouth, and guided wholly by its decisions; that, in criminal cases especially, it is proper the person accused should have the privilege of choosing, in some measure, his judges, (that is, in our Constitution, a Jury,) in concurrence with the law, or at least he should have a right to except against so great a number that the remainder may be deemed his own choice.

The application of these general doctrines to the English Constitution, the corruptions that have crept into it, with the power left in the people for bringing it back to its first principles, and rendering it safer for us than any other we can probably substitute in its room, are important subjects, and too copious to be discussed in this letter. CATO.

GLOUCESTER COUNTY (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Inspection and Observation, }
April 11, 1776. }

Whereas the Continental Congress did lately resolve, "That if any person shall be so lost to all virtue and regard for this country as to refuse to receive the Bills of Credit emitted by the authority of Congress, or should obstruct or discourage the currency thereof, and be convicted by the Committee of the City, County, or District, where he should reside, such person should be deemed, published, and treated as an enemy of this country, and be precluded from all trade or intercourse with the inhabitants of these Colonies:" And whereas Lucas Gibbs, of the Township of Deptford, in the County of Gloucester, Blacksmith, being charged with a breach of this resolve, in refusing to receive the above Bills of Credit, and the said Lucas Gibbs appearing before the Committee of the County aforesaid, and being charged with said breach, acknowledged the same, and alleged, in his defence, scruples of conscience thereupon, as being money emitted for the purpose of carrying on war against Government:

The Committee, pursuant to the trust reposed in them, proceeded to consider the charge and defence; were of opinion, that as such charge appears to be true, and there being no exception made by Congress, and as such conduct tends to subvert the most essential rights and liberties of their fellow-citizens, and the freedom of America, and, by destroying the means of defence, to expose their lives and properties to unavoidable ruin, it ought not to be admitted. And it appearing, by his own acknowledgment, that he has heretofore received, and still continues to receive Bills of Credit emitted in this and the neighbouring Provinces, though frequently issued for the purpose of war, his objection being ill-founded, and the present pretence inconsistent with his former conduct; this Committee do unanimously hold up to the world the said Lucas Gibbs as an enemy to his country, and precluded from all trade or intercourse with the inhabitants of these Colonies.

By order of the Committee: JOSEPH HUGG, Clerk.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF NEW-YORK.

When we remember that there is no principle in divinity or morality, in law or physick, but what has been controverted by some from interest or prejudice, and that with some plausibility, we need not be greatly surprised to find, that notwithstanding the very general approbation which Common Sense and Independence have met with in these Colonies, some few should rise up and oppose them. What plainer dictate of reason, than that the mother and child are akin? Yet there have been learned, ingenious lawyers, who have argued against this with as much plausibleness as to persuade Courts that they were not akin, and to give a decision against it. What is more evident in religion, morality, and politicks, than that corruption and bribery are not for the good of the nation, and that it is very destructive for placemen and pensioners to have seats in Parliament? But though it has been often attempted to exclude them, yet it has always been negatived. It is the interest of the Court, and these Court members, to allow them, and therefore reason and good policy are not regarded. Such Americans as depend upon, or have expectations from the British Court, most certainly will be against separation, since, as Demetrius of old (a man who understood himself well) observed, with great propriety, "by this we have our wealth."

It is supposed, not without reason, that some of the most zealous opposers of Common Sense are secret enemies to this country—Tories in disguise, who, finding that toryism is become obnoxious, have chosen dependance as a more advantageous post from which they may, with greater reputation and success, promote divisions, and defeat all the measures the Colonies have concerted. Hence it is observed, that all who were suspected to be Tories are now fierce for reconciliation, and pretend to be dreadfully afraid at the mention of Independence. They have changed their ground, but not their principles. Others are influenced by motives not so unfriendly to their country, viz: ignorance and custom; as multitudes in Popish countries are prejudiced against Protestants and reformation.

The British Constitution has been mightily extolled. But by whom? By Court Bishops and their dependants; by Court lawyers and their dependants; by placemen and pensioners. "For by this we have our wealth." But notwithstanding all the praises which such gentry, the great leaders of the nation, have lavished upon the British Constitution, any person of candour, who shall examine it with impartiality, must soon be convinced that it is far from deserving any great commendation. To pass over the great imperfections of Kingly Government and hereditary succession, and the enormous expense which Courts require to support their extravagance, to the great oppression of the industrious poor; what right from Scripture, or reason, has the King to assume the arrogant title of Head of the Church, and to act in that capacity, when it often happens that he is not qualified to be a member of the Church? Was it not the most absurd thing in the world that King James the Second, a professed Papist, should be the head of the Protestant Church of England, to which he was the most determined enemy? or that an infant, or a woman, should be invested with this prerogative? According to the custom, (derived not from reason, but from the feudal tenures,) the lands descend to the eldest sons, who may indulge themselves in the greatest profusion, while all the rest of the children are left to shift for themselves. God Almighty is no respecter of persons; but the British Constitution gives to some to wallow in luxury to destroy themselves, and forces the greater part to live in poverty. And hence innumerable robberies and executions, which have scarce made their appearance in the Colonies, except imported from the British Constitution.

These mighty landed gentlemen are entitled by birth, to all generations, be they ever so worthless, to a seat in the House of Lords. When they are brought up in luxury, pride, and ambition, they are excellently qualified, no doubt, to be legislators. Yet such is this boasted Constitution, that legislators they must be, though they should know no more about law and right than about Arabick or fluxions. To the Lords Temporal there are added the Lords Spiritual, or the Bishops. But what reason is there for clergymen to have seats in Parliament? Are there not secular gentlemen enough to regulate the civil state of the Kingdom, without obliging the clergy to leave their proper functions to attend upon business inconsistent with their proper calling? The dependance of the clergy on the Crown gives great weight to the King, and helps to enslave the people, since they have been known to preach up non-resistance and passive obedience, for the sake of preferment.

And as to the House of Commons, who are to represent the people, they are chosen by a small pitiful handful of the inhabitants. Much the greater part of the men of property have no right to vote for members of Parliament. The poor beggarly Boroughs send a great part of the members of the House of Commons. This is British Constitution, but as contrary to reason as light is to darkness, and utterly inconsistent with all good Government. Where, then, is the divine excellence of the British Constitution?

However, the administration upon the Constitution is still worse. The votes of the electors are bought by the candidates. By this the poor beggarly electors, many of them, have their principal support; they depend upon the sale of their votes for their subsistence. And as the members buy their seats at a vast expense, they sell it to the Minister for as high a price as they can. Reason and conscience have had but little business in Parliament these fifty years. Money determines all. Thus bribery and corruption, places and pensions, have subverted any good principles and designs of the Constitution, and reduced the State to an enormous mass of folly and wickedness, jumbled together, ready to fall into dreadful and irrecoverable ruin.

Such as are for reconciliation with Great Britain perhaps impose upon themselves and others, by viewing the professed principles of the Constitution, or some of them, merely in theory, abstract from the present administration. But this is a most disingenuous method. They should take a full view of the whole fabrick, and then they would find a most unequal representation in the House of Commons, septennial Parliaments, and a House of Lords fit for —, and that such principles as are calculated for the good of the State, are generally subverted by the long wicked administration upon them. Now, if the Colonies should be reunited to Great Britain, it must be to her as she is now at present, where the electors are bought, and the majority of the Commons are kept in pay by the Minister, and all places of honour and profit are conferred, not according to men's merit, by their wisdom and bravery, but as they vote, where the nation's money is expended by millions to pervert reason and support the Minister. Now, what advantage can it be to America to be united to such a prodigious mass of corruption, and be subject to the will of a Prime Minister, to learn from him the arts of corruption and bribery, of oppression and cruelty, to be taxed or murdered, according to his whim or caprice? We have been grievously oppressed; we have begged and prayed for relief. To what purpose? We might, we should certainly prevail, if we had more money than the Minister, and could secure more votes than he; but no hopes of redress without this. The experience of twelve years confirms this.

The appeal has been made from petitions to arms. This renders the arguments for continuing dependant, frivolous, and, indeed, ridiculous. What do arguments avail against plain facts? Upon whom do the Continental forces at Boston, New-York, and the Carolinas, depend? Upon whom do our armed vessels depend? Can any person be hardy enough to assert that they depend on his Majesty, are commissioned or employed by him, or are acting by his authority? Upon whom do the Continental Bills, that pass current in the country, depend? By whom are they emitted? If we can be weak enough to be persuaded out of our senses, and to think that we are still dependant, would it be possible to persuade the British Ministry of this, unless we had the Spanish mines to bribe and blind them? They were jealous of this long ago, and often declared we were aiming at independency, before there were any thoughts of it among us, or any appearances of it. But they must be as foolish as they are wicked, if they should believe that we are dependant on Great Britain now, when we have openly raised fleets and armies against her. Will they believe empty professions in opposition to such incontestible facts? No. They look upon us to be independent, and will reduce us to subjection if they can, just all one as if we had explicitly declared it. So that we have no reason to hope for any kind treatment from them by our connection, if any yet remains. But, by declaring independence, say the objectors, we shall lose our friends in the House of Commons. And what then? They may be sincere and zealous in our cause, but they have not been able to do us any good; nor they never will be able to do us any good, since the Minister, having the disposal of places and pensions, and the national purse, can always secure a majority to vote for and support his measures. The whole strength of the nation is exerted as much against us as if we had not one friend in Parliament. We shall then at worst lose the friendship of those who are unable to help us. We are, then, obliged to them for their good-will, and wish them well. If they are generous friends, they will consider our necessity, and still exert themselves in our favour; but if they should forsake us, we shall lose nothing. Now, the great thing in question is, whether we shall ruin ourselves for the sake of their unavailing friendship?

Great Britain cannot find money enough to supply her hungry courtiers and their dependants, but has been forced to lay a tax upon us. She has lost, it is said, twenty-seven millions by this unnatural war. Where will she find millions to repair the damages done to Boston, Charlestown, Falmouth, Norfolk? Where a fund to pay the millions emitted by the Congress, on our reconciliation? Have we any reason to expect she would be able or willing to refund to us all these just damages? Not the least. Upon the scheme of dependance we must put up with our losses, and bear our expenses, which must ruin the country. But if we renounce all connection with Britain forever, unless upon the plan of common trade, as with other nations, we can then seize upon the unoccupied lands, and sell them, which will procure a sufficient fund to answer every purpose we can desire, and set us free from slavery and taxation to all generations. But without this, we have no funds, and the necessary consequence must be, that the credit of our paper currency will sink, and we shall be beggared and ruined. Independence is the only thing that can save us.

Other nations, if we prove cowardly after all the pretences we have made, will think there is no danger in attacking us. We may depend upon it, they will put in for a share of the trade by force, or by planting Colonies. They did not know the importance of America before, but now it is held up to view to all the Courts of Europe, and carefully studied. Some of them will be ready to become our allies for a share of our trade. But if we slight that offer, and obstinately adhere to Britain, they will doubtless resent our conduct, and put in their claims the first fair opportunity. Dependance on Britain will keep our country in a perpetual state of war. But let us assert Independence and Freedom with an open and manly boldness, and we shall be a safe and happy State.

New-York, April 11, 1776.

CAPTAIN BILLINGS TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fort Montgomery, April 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The day I left New-York we got (with our sloop) as far as one Mrs. Striker's, a widow, about seven miles from the city, where we came to anchor, waiting for wind and tide. Going on shore, some of our people went to the barn, where was a negro man at work, and, in their play, they discovered a gun curiously secreted under the floor of the barn. They came and informed me of the same, when I went, with sundry gentlemen, to view the place. I made a discovery of a second, crowded under the floor, and hid by a quantity of hay crowded in after the guns. I examined the negro, and found him to equivocate. I then went and conversed with Mrs. Striker on what I had discovered; but could get no satisfaction, further than that one Mr. Steple borrowed the guns, viz: one from Mr. Walton, and the other from Mr. Delancy; and she (Mrs. Striker) heard Mr. Steple order his servant to convey them home. But the servant declares that his master ordered him to hide them in the barn. I consulted Captain Rosekrans and Mr. Brinckerhoff, whose sentiments (with mine) were, that I should take the guns with me to Fort Montgomery, which I have done; and shall keep them until further directions from your honourable House. This Mr. Steple was absent at the time; some of my men affirm they saw him run at the sight of our frocks; but I left a billet, informing him of what I had done, and my determination of acquainting the Congress. They are good arms—one a King's arm, and the other a fowling-piece. Will be obliged for direction what further to do. Meantime, I am, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

ANDREW BILLINGS.

To the New-York Committee of Safety.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO COLONEL CURTENIUS.

Albany Committee-Chamber, April 11, 1776.

SIR: When we received your letter, we made the necessary inquiry, and find the enumerated articles extremely scarce, and not to be had at the prices you have set. However, we can inform you that Messrs. Henry, McClallen, & Henry, merchants in this city, have imported from Canada, this winter, a sufficient quantity of woollen cloth (blue, gray, and brown) to clothe two regiments; and also a good many bales of brown Russia, and Scotch sheeting, and osnaburghs. They have also a sufficient number of blankets, from two and a half points to four points. If the whole is taken, they promise to sell them at a reasonable advance. We would, therefore, advise you (as the prices of the above articles will exceed what you mention in your letter) to send up, or authorize some person to agree with them.

With respect to the guns you mention, we can inform you that the General has had out people to purchase all that could be found. The stockings are not to be had here. Would therefore advise you to send into Connecticut for them. We are, sir, your humble servants,

By order of the Committee:

ABRAHAM YATES, JUN., Chairman.

To Colonel Curtenius.

P. S. We want none of the articles mentioned, but the Russia sheeting and blankets. The last article is limited by the Continental Congress to sixteen shillings per pair. Query. Whether the Province will pay what they cost more.

COLONEL SALTONSTALL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-London, April 11, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: The Captains in the Third Regiment are inlisting and detaching one-third of their several companies, and shall soon be able to make returns of the companies to be formed, according to order. Am in doubt how to understand the following clause in your Honour's orders of the 2d instant: "And appoint them one Captain, two Lieutenants, and one Ensign, to each company, observing the ranks which they now sustain in the Regiment." Whether it is intended according to seniority of their several commissions, or that I may appoint such as are now Captains, Lieutenants, and Ensigns, at discretion, without special regard to the dates of their several commissions. Should esteem it a favour to be particularly directed in this matter. I do not apprehend the soldiers in the New-London companies will now amount to more than about two hundred and eighty men; and in Lyme, about two hundred and thirty; consequently, more than two companies will not be raised. The company under my command, stationed in this town, is augmenting with all possible despatch.

Your most obedient and most humble servant,

G. SALTONSTALL.

To Governour Trumbull.

Newport, Rhode-Island, Monday, April 15, 1776.

Thursday last, towards night, the Ship Scarborough, of twenty guns, a transport ship of two hundred tons and sixteen guns, a brig loaded with provisions, and a sloop loaded with salt, came into this bay, and anchored between Goat-Island and Conanicut. In the evening, two row-galleys, commanded by Captains Grimes and Hyer, with a number of volunteers from the Army on this Island, took the brig and sloop. After which, a battery at the north part of this town, a battery at Brenton's Point, and the galleys, played so briskly upon the ships, that they were soon obliged to move out of the reach of the batteries, and went under Conanicut. Captain Hyer, in one of the galleys, lay within musket-shot of the Scarborough, firing upon her, while Captain Grimes boarded and sent off the brig and sloop. The Scarborough did the galley some damage in her hull and rigging, and the musketry from her tops wounded one of Captain Hyer's people very badly, which was all the injury received on the American side. This bold action, of taking two vessels close under the stern of a twenty-gun ship, may possibly convince our enemies that the Yankees are not such dastards as the Tories in this country have represented them.

There were seventeen hands taken in the above vessels, who inform that the ships were from Georgia, the transport having on board one hundred and forty soldiers; that the Scarborough was commanded by Captain Barclay, and had on board Sir James Wright, Governour of Georgia, his family, and some other Tories of that place. That the brig was from Philadelphia, taken going into Georgia; that the sloop was from some of the Islands, commanded by Captain Gregory Cozzens, of this place, and taken near Georgia; that they were bound to Boston, and had parted with several other prizes, one of which (a sloop) arrived here on Saturday, and anchored between the two ships.

Saturday night and yesterday morning, a battery at Conanicut so disturbed the quiet of the Scarborough, the transport ship, and the sloop, that they took advantage of a fair wind and pushed to sea; but, as they passed the mouth of the harbour, a battery on the east side, near Castle-Hill, hulled the Scarborough twice, and sent one eighteen-pounder through the sloop. The Scarborough returned a very heavy fire on both the batteries, without doing the least damage. Our bay is now free from Pirates.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO CAPTAIN SAMUEL MCKAY, (A PRISONER.)

New-Haven, April 11, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 9th instant, and could wish that it was in my power, consistently with the duty I owe to my country, to grant you the relief you desire. I have made repeated applications to General Howe for an exchange of prisoners, but he has not thought proper to return me any answer. It has been in his power to set you at liberty; and if you are still continued a prisoner, the blame must lie entirely upon him.

The situation of your family is indeed distressing; but such is the event of war; it is far from being singular. The brave Colonel Allen, an officer of rank, has been torn from his dearest connexions, sent to England in irons, and is now confined to the most servile drudgery on board one of the King's ships. Your treatment, sir, and that of the other officers taken in arms against the liberties of America, has been very different; for the truth of this I appeal to your own feelings. Whenever it is in my power to release you by a mutual exchange, I shall do it with the greatest pleasure; and am, sir, your most obedient servant.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, April 11, 1776.

SIR: I am to inform your Excellency that Colonel Glover applied to me for a warrant upon the Paymaster-General, to pay those men who are in the service of the Continent, on board the Continental privateers just arrived from a cruise; but I did not think myself authorized, by your instructions, to grant a warrant. He informed me the men would not be induced to go out again, unless they received their pay. I therefore directed him to supply the places of such men as might leave the privateers, out of his regiment, until I could receive your directions in the matter.

The agent for the privateers, at Beverley, Captain Bartlett, has likewise applied for the same purpose. I must, therefore, beg the favour of your particular directions relative to the above-mentioned applications.

I have not been able to collect any material intelligence from the people taken on board the transport which Commodore Manly sent into Portsmouth. The general account they give is, that the enemy are going to Quebeck as soon as the river opens.

A fifty gun-ship, with three transports, lies in Nantasket Road. A man who made his escape from the ship informs, that the officers on board said they were to be there until the transports arrived, which are expected from Europe, and then to follow the fleet.

I am, your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,

ARTEMAS WARD.

To General Washington.

DOCTOR MORGAN TO A COMMITTEE OF THE MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Cambridge, April 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: It gives me much concern to hear that the intention of General Washington, and his orders to me to take possession of the shop, medicines, and utensils, &c., belonging to Sylvester Gardner and William Perkins, late of Boston, for the use of the Continental Army, and the resolves of the honourable House of Representatives and Council of this Province, should seem to interfere with your commands. I would willingly hope that, before any step is taken to counteract the orders of the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and the resolves of the Legislature of this Colony at large, I may be favoured with a conference with you—and I shall gladly meet with you when and wherever you are pleased to appoint—to explain to you the General's intention with respect to Doctor Gardner's shop, and the reasons on which his orders are founded. I imagine it will be no difficult matter to convince gentlemen of your weight, character, and integrity, as well as importance in the community, of the propriety of so general an order. As his Excellency General Washington ever made it the rule of his conduct to support the civil authority, and not to infringe it in a single instance, I flatter myself you will be very tender how you offer any insult to his orders, by explaining away the spirit and intention of them, which proceeded solely from what he esteemed the essential interests of the Army. Under his authority I now act. It is by his direction I have taken charge of the shops of Messrs. Gardner and Perkins, which he intended I should possess myself of. I mean to leave an approved list in your hands of what I take; and to obligate myself for the payment of every article I take into my custody, whenever I am called upon authoritatively so to do; but it is by no means my intention to relinquish a single article comprehended within my orders, that I think will be of service to the Army. If I leave any particulars behind, which are found in Doctor Gardner's or Doctor Perkins's shops, (as I, doubtless, shall many,) it will be from a consideration of their not being wanted for the use of the Army. But I flatter myself the gentlemen of the Committee, acting on a liberal plan, will not take on themselves (but leave it to one appointed for the purpose) to judge of this matter; and whilst they keep in view that the cause in which the Army is employed, is not merely a Provincial concern, but comprehends the interests of the United Colonies, and consider the recent benefits which the inhabitants of Boston have derived from the good order and discipline of the Army, and their being well supplied with everything necessary to them, as such, (in what relates to the sick is no inconsiderable part,) I am confident they will not suffer the misrepresentations of individuals (perhaps interested in the advice they give) to deprive the Army of all the advantages that may accrue from being furnished with the most ample provision of hospital stores, and which they must have, from whatever quarter they can be got, be the expense whatever it may. I doubt not, on being favoured with a conference with you on this head, every misapprehension will be effectually cleared up to our mutual satisfaction. If not, I have only to acquaint you that I must remain here till I receive fresh orders from the General, whether to recede from his instructions or not.

I remain, with the utmost deference and respect, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN MORGAN.

To the Committee of the General Court, now sitting at Boston.

INDEPENDENCE IN NORTH-CAROLINA.

In Congress, North-Carolina, April 12, 1776.

The Select Committee, to take into consideration the usurpations and violences attempted and committed by the King and Parliament of Britain against America, and the further measures to be taken for frustrating the same, and for the better defence of this Province, reported as follows, to wit:

It appears to your Committee that, pursuant to the plan concerted by the British Ministry for subjugating America, the King and Parliament of Great Britain have usurped a power over the persons and properties of the People, unlimited and uncontrolled; and, disregarding their humble petitions for peace, liberty, and safety, have made divers legislative acts denouncing war, famine, and every species of calamity against the Continent in general.

That British Fleets and Armies have been, and still are, daily employed in destroying the people, and committing the most horrid devastations on the country.

That Governours in different Colonies have declared protection to slaves who should imbrue their hands in the blood of their masters.

That the ships belonging to America are declared prizes of war, and many of them have been violently seized and confiscated.

In consequence of all which, multitudes of the people have been destroyed, or from easy circumstances reduced to the most lamentable distress.

And whereas the moderation hitherto manifested by the United Colonies, and their sincere desire to be reconciled to the mother country on constitutional principles, have procured no mitigation of the aforesaid wrongs and usurpations, and no hopes remain of obtaining redress by those means alone which have been hitherto tried, your Committee are of opinion that the House should enter into the following resolve:

Resolved, That the Delegates for this Colony in the Continental Congress be empowered to concur with the Delegates of the other Colonies in declaring Independency, and forming foreign alliances, reserving to this Colony the sole and exclusive right of forming a Constitution and Laws for this Colony, and of appointing Delegates, from time to time, (under the direction of a general representation thereof,) to meet the Delegates of the other Colonies for such purposes as shall be hereafter pointed out.

The Congress, taking the same into consideration, unanimously concurred therewith.

By order: JAMES GREEN, JUN., Secretary.

TO MR. ALEXANDER PURDIE.

Williamsburgh, Virginia, April 12, 1776.

The independence of the Colonies daily becomes more and more a topick of very anxious disquisition. The subject appears, in general, to lie under the difficulties of being misrepresented by our enemies, and misunderstood by some amongst ourselves. Without flattering myself that the following remarks will remove either, I shall be obliged by your inserting them.

It may, with certainty, be affirmed, that, among the ends which the Colonies (from South-Carolina to New-York, inclusively) had in view when they began the present contest, independence held no place; and that the New-England Governments, if they had it in view at all, considered it as a remote and contingent object. The terrors of immediate oppression engrossed our minds too fully to leave much room for ambition. Admitting this fact with regard to New-England, (of which, however, I know no proof,) it was not the effect of a seditious character in the people, but of a consciousness that, by their union and populousness, they approached more nearly than any single Colony to that period of power, when independence would have become a natural event, and dependance a political absurdity. That the Colonies were proceeding pretty rapidly to such a period of power, seems to be a point acknowledged by all dispassionate reasoners on both sides. The King's Ministers, indeed, have induced him to believe, and to tell his Parliament, that our professions of attachment and loyalty were meant only to amuse, while we were meditating a general revolt. The heart of an American tells him that the charge is erroneous, and the single external evidence of our having begun the war with so scanty a provision for its support, will prove it so to all the unprejudiced world. In truth, these professions were founded in such deep-rooted attachments, that even now, when our lives and properties are the sport and prey of every tender's motley crew that can catch them, many of our brethren shudder at the name of Independence.

The use of words, without settling their determinate meaning, often occasions disputes with men whose sentiments in reality exactly correspond. This appears to be particularly the case in the present question.

In many, the name of Independence is accompanied with the terrifying ideas of an everlasting separation from Great Britain, of the destruction of the finest Constitution in the world, as the phrase is, and of the substitution of Republican Governments in the Colonies. Then follows a dreadful train of domestic convulsions in each Republick; of jealousies, dissensions, wars, and all their attendant miseries, in the neighbouring Republicks; in which form of Government they seem to imagine that nature breeds

All monstrous, all prodigious things,
Abominable, unutterable, and worse
Than fables yet have feigned, or fear conceived—
Gorgons, and hydras, and chimeras dire!

Under the pressure of real calamities, which, if actually felt, cannot be exceeded, do men find comfort in the contemplation of those that are imaginary; and which, were we sure they would befall us, might claim our preference by being remote.

Others, with the ideas of the former, connect some dark mysterious scheme for tricking us into independence, to which most of our Continental measures, however speciously introduced, are supposed to be ultimately subservient. These men, my friends, are enemies to harmony. The motions of their spirits are dark and dull; and whatever be their professions or condition, let them not be trusted.

Of a much more numerous and respectable class are those who think that our opposition is founded in a virtuous determination to defend our liberty against a tyranny instant and impending; that no sacrifice, no suffering, should divert us from the necessary means of effecting so important a purpose; that if, in the course of events, a declaration of independence should become essential to our safety, we should instantly adopt the measure, considering it not as a primary object of the war, but, in a secondary view, as a means of conducting it successfully. Now, I verily believe this is all that nine-tenths of the Congress mean, notwithstanding that the presses of Philadelphia have lately brought forth Common Sense, Montgomery's Ghost, and other frightful forms, to the no small terror of many of his Majesty's liege subjects.

Without attempting to prove that these fears are much of the same puerile cast as those with which the armour of an heroic and affectionate parent impressed the son of Hector, I shall endeavour to show that the propriety of speedily declaring a temporary independence, at least, may be derived from a circumstance more generally interesting and solid than from the machinations of the Congress.

It is confessed, on all hands, that we cannot continue the war with very prosperous hopes, unless we can be supplied from foreign countries with warlike stores, (with many necessities of which the restrictions on British trade deprive us,) and unless some market be furnished for the productions of our labours. Accordingly, men expect with impatience the freedom of exportation, when this trade may be pushed to the utmost extent. But, alas! in the small essays we have already made, we have found foreigners reserved and cold. They will tell us, "In justice to your veracity, we must believe that you will be cordially reconciled to Great Britain so soon as certain acts of Parliament shall be repealed. Now, as she cannot carry on a vigorous war without you, she must either sit a silent spectator of our triumph, and of her own ruin, or repeal the acts, and, in conjunction with you, take vengeance for our friendly intentions, before we have received any advantage from them. We cannot, therefore, hazard so much with so precarious a prospect of an equivalent. We insist not that you should declare an everlasting separation from Great Britain, and thereby cut off all prospect of an honourable renewal of old friendships; but that you will, with the freedom, solemnity, and good faith of sovereign States, enter into a treaty of commerce for a certain time, and into a treaty of neutrality, at least, should our efforts to serve you produce a rupture with that power."

A commerce thus established would be beneficial and honourable. Such manly and vigorous conduct would render us respectable to foreigners, and formidable to our enemies. But if we can only venture to steal a foreign trade, I can see nothing but disappointment, disgrace, and contempt, from all quarters. In the one case, the malice of our enemies will be awed into moderation by the increase of our power; in the other, by its decline they may enjoy, uncontrolled by any other passion, the rich prospect of a revenge insatiable. Here, however, independence steps in to terrify us. For my part, I see no terror in it; but in an unconditional dependance, which seems, at present, our only alternative, I see a thousand. It wears, indeed, the rugged aspect of virtue; but, like the shield of Pallas, it petrifies alone the timid and the base. It is the invincible guardian of the brave and virtuous.

I fancy that many qualms on this subject would be overcome, if men would more thoroughly consider how very far we have already proceeded in effecting independence; and that many who have engaged in this business are irrevocably destined to the cord, whatever vain hopes they may entertain of drawing out a few strands from it, by an ill-timed and dangerous moderation. I apprehend that independence could in no way be more explicitly announced than by dissolving the Government on which it depended, and forming one with which it is utterly incompatible. "Besides the overturning from without, Governments are dissolved from within, when the Legislature is altered," are the words of Mr. Locke. We have not only altered the Legislature, but exercised the judicial, the executive, and every other power of independent sovereignty, except the least considerable one—of negotiating with foreign States. Why have we so unanimously and cheerfully assumed the greater acts of sovereignty, and yet hesitate about the lesser? If the absolute necessity of commencing the contest directed us, insensibly, to the former, why tremble when the necessity of continuing it as 'absolutely directs us to the latter? I am at a loss to give an answer, except that we shall be obliged to call ourselves (what, for some months, we have really been) independent. In this dread sound our terror seems to be comprehended. And shall we, by silent stealth, draw all its good effects, and shamefully deny our benefactor? I confess this conduct resembles more the dark guilt of rebellion, than the manly candour of a righteous resistance. While Congresses, Conventions, Councils of Safety, Military arrangements, Courts of Admiralty, County Committee Courts, Colonial Sheriffs, &c., are fresh in their memory, will our enemies believe us when we tell them we meant not to be independent? So mean a subterfuge would serve only to add the insolent lash of contempt to the scourge they have prepared for us.

The expectation of peace and reconciliation still fosters the irresolution of some men. The vague, unauthenticated hints of peace, (which were the harbingers of my Lord North's olive-branch,) divided our councils, and enervated our preparations for defence. This, it might have been thought, would have furnished us, and on no very reasonable terms, with the wisdom of experience; but some, under an infatuation without example, are now deluded with an artifice of the same kind. We fondly expect Commissioners of peace. The King, on the contrary, tells us expressly, that he shall send them to receive the submissions of the penitent Rebels, and that they shall be accompanied with a very respectable force. This very respectable, very humane, and peace-compelling force, is neither more nor less than all which they could at present muster for our destruction. One of his servants tells us we may obtain anything by a constitutional application; while another, in his presence, (who has the sole power of enabling us to try the experiment, should we incline,) refuses by his concurrence to make it possible. And could this be done by the author of a late pathetick letter? It is adding insult to injury with a vengeance.*

Their smiles are not to be trusted, and their resentment should not be dreaded; the treachery of the first is not less formidable than the effects of the last.

I am, sir, yours, &c.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM PETERSBURGH, VIRGINIA,
DATED APRIL 12, 1776.

In my way through Virginia, I found the inhabitants warm for independence. I spent last evening with Mr. —, from South-Carolina. He tells me that the people there have no expectation of ever being reconciled with Britain again but only as a foreign State. They have formed a Government for themselves. John Rutledge, Esq., is appointed President, with all the powers that are vested in the Governour. From several letters I have received from North-Carolina since that Convention met, I find they are for independence, as they either have, or intend to repeal the instructions that were given to their Delegates, and to leave them at liberty to vote, upon every occasion, as they may think best. Mr. — was some little time at Halifax. He says they are quite spirited and unanimous; indeed, I hear nothing praised but Common Sense and Independence. The people of North-Carolina are making great preparations, and say they are determined to die hard.

I assure you, my good sir, the vehemence of the Southern Colonies will require all the coolness of the Northern ones to moderate their zeal. I suspected, when I was with you, that, whenever they were urged, they would go to great lengths.

GENERAL CHARLES LEE TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Williamsburgh, April 12, 1776.

MY DEAR FRIEND: I am much pleased with the appointment of the Congress, of the two Engineers, and not less so with the artillery establishment; but, at the same time, am a good deal dissatisfied by an omission of the Provincial Congress of Virginia, in not having mentioned a Company of Artillery, which they had already raised, and at the head of which a Captain Innis was placed. You perhaps know him. He was formerly usher of the German school here; is a man of extraordinary virtue, good sense, and knowledge. The thought of discharging such men is extremely disagreeable. I hope some means may be devised of providing for him in a manner adequate to his merit. If a Commissary of Ordnance is to be an established office, it would suit him. There is, I understand, to be, likewise, a Commissary of Musters. I would beg leave to recommend a Mr. Archer, who has a most unexceptionable character, and lost his all—his household goods and slaves—in the destruction of Norfolk. These sufferers have certainly (when qualified for the discharge of their duty) the first and most solid claim to the favour of the Congress. As I can have no jobs in view, as I have no predilections or connexions, I shall make no scruples of appointing to act, and intreating the Congress to confirm my appointments.

I have myself no doubt that the first attempt of the tyrant's mercenaries will be on Virginia. My opinion of your troops and officers is, thank God, so good, as to put me entirely at my ease with respect to action corps to corps. I only wish your Provincial Congress and Committee of Safety had taken some precautions for the security of your great navigable rivers against their piratical inundations, and, in my opinion, nothing could be easier effected. Perhaps I may differ from the generality of seafaring people; but, as they have their prejudices, and are, like other professions, a servum pecus, I shall not give up my opinion. I would, then, propose fitting your rivers with twelve or eighteen oared boats, mounting a six-pounder at the head of each, fortifying the sides with occasional mantlets, musket-proof, and manning them with stout volunteers, whose principle should be boarding. I am mistaken, when we are sufficiently provided with fleets of this kind, if a single tender will show itself in your rivers. I have already, for experiment sake, sent out one boat, armed and principled in this manner, on a cruise, and expect with impatience the issue. The men have their cutlasses and pistols, and seem to taste the project. I shall order twenty for each great river. The expense is trifling; and the spirit—the very principle of coming to close quarters—will inspire naturally the people with confidence in their own force and valour.

Another great point I seem in a fair way of obtaining: the conciliating your soldiers to the use of spears. We had a battalion out this day. Two companies, of the strongest and tallest, were armed with this weapon. They were formed something like the Triarii of the Romans, in the rear of the battalions, occasionally either to throw themselves into the intervals of the line, or to form a third, second, or front rank, in close order. It has a fine effect to the eye; and the men, in general, seemed convinced of the utility of the arrangement. In two days I shall visit Norfolk, Suffolk, and Kemp's Landing.

Yours, affectionately,

CHARLES LEE.

To Richard Henry Lee.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO RICHARD HARRISON.

[No. 115.]

Annapolis, April 12, 1776.

SIR: By Captain Kell we send you a cargo of flour, which we hope will get safe to hand, and meet with a good market. As to the species of returns, we have heretofore written you fully. We have nothing to add at present, only that you would please to observe that our bay is so full of men-of-war and tenders, that we are of opinion that, whatever returns you send, should be in small vessels, that sail well, and may occasionally run into some of the inlets on the seaboard side of Worcester County, or come in close under Cape-Charles. We are, &c.

To Mr. Richard Harrison, Martinico.

MARYLAND DELEGATES TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, April 12, 1776, nine o'clock at night.

GENTLEMEN: Yours of the 9th instant was delivered to us this day at twelve o'clock; and we immediately handed the packet enclosed to the President. It contained the act of Parliament for restraining the trade of the Colonies, passed in December last, and which was received here in the beginning of February. Our friends in South-Carolina supposed we might not have received the act, and therefore sent the first copy they received.

There having been an arrival of powder lately, on account of the Congress, we (just before the receipt of your letter) borrowed a ton, and shall send it to Chestertown, to wait your order in the distribution thereof. Every other Colony has been supplied from the Continental magazine, and this was spared to us without hesitation.

We are, gentlemen, your most humble servants,

T. STONE,

T. JOHNSON, JUN.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO THE ASSEMBLY OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE, ETC.

Philadelphia, April 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: While the British Ministry are taking every step that cruelty and revenge can dictate for the destruction of American liberty, it is incumbent on these United Colonies to exert their utmost efforts to defeat them. Happily for our country, their military operations have not been attended with that success which they so sanguinely expected. This circumstance, however, far from abating their rage against us, has had the effect constantly produced by disappointed passions; it has roused them to make new exertions of power against us; and we now behold American property, by a late act of Parliament, made legal plunder. Such a train of rapine and violence can be equalled only by the spirit with which it is likely to be executed. Having authorized the seizure of vessels belonging to these Colonies wherever found upon the high seas, there is too much reason to apprehend the execution of the edict (which we may expect in its greatest extent) will, for a time, prove a severe clog to the trade of America. Under these circumstances, the Congress, in hopes of checking, in some degree, an evil which they cannot, at present, remove, and acting on the same principle of self-preservation and retaliation which they have hitherto adopted, have been induced to come into sundry resolutions relative to the fitting out letters of marque and reprisal. The trade of America is an object of so much consequence, and the protection of it so necessary, that I make no doubt of your giving all the encouragement in your power to any measures that may be deemed expedient for its security and existence.

I herewith transmit bonds, commissions, and instructions, which the Congress has thought proper to request the several Assemblies, Conventions, and Committees of Safety, to make use of on the occasion.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Assembly of New-Hampshire.

[Same to the Honourable Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay; Assembly of Rhode-Island; Assembly of Connecticut; and Convention of Virginia.]

COLONEL WHIPPLE TO MESHECH WEARE.

Philadelphia, April 12, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have some papers containing the late resolutions of Congress. Blank commissions, &c., will be forwarded by the President. I hope Colonel Bartlett will soon be here; I expect he will set out before this reaches you. If the accounts cannot be got ready, a petition from the General Court, or, if they are not sitting, from the Committee representing the exertions of the Colony in the common cause, and the disadvantages of emitting such large sums in Colonial bills, will have a very good effect, and, I am inclined to think, would obtain a grant of about two-thirds the sum the Colony is in advance.

Congress have been so exceedingly engaged, I have not been able to call their attention to the report of the Committee on the application of your Committee, but hope I shall very soon be able to transmit their determination.

I am, with great respect and esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

To the Honourable Meshech Weare.

SAMUEL GALE TO JOHN McKESSON.

Fairfield, April 12, 1776.

SIR: On the 23d ultimo, I was informed by a private hand, that your body had resolved on my release, and on the illegality of my imprisonment. Whether their proceedings have or have not arrived here, is to me unknown. Though Mr. Burr used to call on me often at first, and though I cannot help mentioning his civility when Mrs. Gale was here, yet he seems much altered of late. He has not called on me since the 12th of March, notwithstanding he has been in the house almost every day. Whether this alteration be owing to false tale-bearers here, or to some ill-disposed person in New-York, or to what other cause, I know not. It has been hinted to me, that he may perhaps think me not sufficiently humble for a close prisoner. I must acknowledge that an illegal detention, even within the walls of a loathsome prison, though in a strange country, without friends, and with but very little money, has not, nor cannot, lead me to degrade the dignity of a freeman; neither can I (notwithstanding the hint) ever believe that Mr. Burr would expect it.

I had an opportunity of sending to you by another private hand, in a few hours after the departure of the former, by whom I informed you of my then remaining in this loathsome den, where I still continue; as also of my labouring under a fit of illness, which has since much increased, and still exists, though I have found myself much better these last three or four days than for some time before.

In this intolerable place, the wind, when cold, fairly chills every vein in my body. The smoke, when there is a fire, not only blinds, but nearly suffocates me; and the continued smell of the room has, I fear, tended to rot my very vitals. In the morning I have perpetually a sickness at the stomach; about noon comes on a fever, which, in about three hours, is succeeded by an ague, sometimes more, and sometimes less violent. Every of these intolerable tortures were so inexpressibly increased by the excessive weather of Saturday, the 30th ultimo, that they introduced thoughts and extorted expressions too wild to mention in cooler moments.

I have applied to two different attorneys for a habeas corpus, that the nature of my detention might be inquired into; but, to my entire astonishment, they informed me that that writ never issued in this Government, nor was there any law of the Colony that could administer relief. What, then, in the name of Heaven, is to be done?

I am strangely mistaken if it has not ever heretofore been looked upon as the essential right of a free people, that every individual should enjoy unmolested the liberty of doing and saying whatever was not prohibited by some law or rule prescribed. I also conceive that the greatest severity which reasonable creatures could, with any degree of colour, inflict on any offender, were the penalties which they had previously affixed to his crime. I recollect no rule, nor (though I have inquired as well of Mr. Burr, who detains me, as of others) can I find any published by any man, or body of men, that I have broken. Nay, the whole that is, or can be, laid to my charge, appears by one of the addresses of the Congress in 1774, to have been at that time an undoubted right, inherent in every freeman; and it will doubtless be granted that there must be a law, before there can be any transgression.

Yet, behold a freeborn Briton, who has ever maintained a good reputation among all ranks and conditions of men within the circle of his knowledge, seized in his own house, without knowing by whom, or by whose authority; dragged away by a Militia force from the bosom of his family, and from the city of his abode, without ever seeing or knowing his accusers, and without being examined, or admitted to make any defence; carried, a stranger, to a strange land, from whose inhabitants he can expect no kind of friendship, and whose laws afford him neither hearing or relief, there (like a felon of the degree of a shoeblack) locked up in a loathsome prison of less than five yards square, afflicted with cold, with smoke, and with unwholesome smells, in addition to a sickness under which he labours; in this situation remaining, capable only to enumerate the days and months of his oppression, and so (in all appearance) likely to remain, till death shall thus complete its slow approaches, inch by inch.

Let Heaven and earth bear witness, while the generous man and the brave, of what nation or language, rank or condition, denomination or party soever, shall lay his hand upon his soul and answer, Are not these things intolerable? Especially let him answer, after finding them to be directly contrary to all publick laws, resolves, and orders, both ancient and modern, and still continued, notwithstanding his release, and the illegality of his being taken has been long since determined on by a resolve of that body which holds the supreme rule of the Province to which he belongs, and from whence he was forcibly taken!

What in the world can these persecutions mean? Or, what can they be intended to produce? An alteration of faith? I shall ever hold myself open to conviction, and when I am convinced of any error, I shall frankly acknowledge it. But if this be a specimen of modern freedom, you would doubtless consider me a hypocrite of the first magnitude, should I tell you that I preferred it before the ancient system. Is it meant to secure the safety or exchange of prisoners? Such notions must have been founded in error or mistake; nor could they ever be produced but by a roundabout application through the channel of the civil officers; for neither of his Majesty's states, military or maritime, know anything of my ever being in existence; at least, if they do, it is totally without my knowledge or application. Or is it (as appears to me most likely) that some of my persecutors want to dip their hands in the blood of a martyr? If so, it would, in my opinion, be far less criminal, both in the sight of God and man, for them to let it flow in decent streams, than thus (with dastardly meanness) to drag it from me drop by drop.

Though I conceive it a duty incumbent on every man to use his endeavours for the preservation of his life, yet (I believe you knew it before these unhappy times came on; if not, Mr. Kelly, or Mr. Wells, can tell you) I never viewed death through so horrible a medium as some men do, and I have lately learned to consider it as a matter of relief, rather than as a punishment. To leave the wife of my bosom a disconsolate widow, and the babes of my loins without a helper, is doubtless an unhappy reflection; but I am of opinion that a single stroke, however violent, would, in the end, be less grief to those I leave behind me, than a continuation of that suspense and anxiety of mind with which they are now totally overwhelmed. However, as a duty which I owe to my Maker, I am led again to demand my life, liberty, and safety, at the hands of those who hold the governing reins of the Province of New-York, to which I belong; before whom I shall take it as a further favour in you, to lay this letter immediately on its coming to your hands.

Should any imprudent or offensive expressions be contained in this, or either of my other letters, I doubt not but your knowledge of my former treatment will lead your candour to consider them, not as any intentional offence, but as a matter flowing from that fountain of unmerited oppression, whose streams have continually washed over me, without intermission, for more than a twelve-month past. On this consideration, I would beg the liberty of going one step farther, and mentioning, that though I ever heartily wished for a more permanent and happy political arrangement between my native land and this, than has hitherto subsisted, yet, early in the unhappy contest, I (as well as thousands besides) conceived an important danger, that a new-raised military would, in time, wrest the sceptre from the hands of those who were intended to control it, and rule the inhabitants of the land solely by the force of arms, without their approbation or direction in the least; thereby depriving the reputable citizen and the industrious husbandman, that had at any time fallen within the compass of any of their displeasure, of the benefit of every law from whence any relief might come. Methinks I now view that dreadful morn already dawned! Let it not be said that I see clearly.

The sensible and the generous, whose sentiments are uncontracted, of whatsoever party or denomination they may be, will cease to wonder that persons who were heavily laden with this conception should hold opinions something different from those, who (though they would all equally detest so direful a production) considered its pregnancy as a mere visionary fable that existed not.

Whether this was a natural or a false conception; whether it has or has not arrived beyond the state of embryo, and acquired the motions of a living fœtus, every man must judge for himself. Let it never be said that it has arrived at a perfect birth!

Fatal experience has given me but too much reason to suppose its being already born; nor can anything short of an immediate release convince me to the contrary. If I am wrong, I should be heartily glad to be convinced of my error, and (as I said before) I shall then frankly acknowledge it. Should this be the case, I would beg the favour of you to despatch a person hither on purpose; for I cannot place much faith in receiving anything by the post, being fully of opinion that you have not been so long silent. I should also be glad he would bring a spare horse with him, as horses are not easily to be hired here.

I cannot conclude without saying that, however erroneous my opinions, or however imprudent my revealing them may have been, few, if any, have ever held more sincere wishes for the real welfare of this, and every other part of his Majesty's dominions, than myself.

I must repeat my thanks to you for the trouble you have taken; and should a continuance of this unhappy season lead you, or any of your acquaintances, into a disagreeable situation, you and they may rely on receiving every relief that can flow through any channel, by means of the application of, sir, your most obedient servant,

S. GALE.

To John McKesson, Esq., Attorney-at-Law, New-York.

PAROLE OF GOVERNOUR BROWNE, ETC., PRISONERS TAKEN BY ADMIRAL HOPKINS.

We, Montfort Browne, Esq., Governour of New-Providence, Thomas Irving, Esq., and James Babbidge,* prisoners in the power of the Governour and Council of Safety for the Colony of Connecticut, being delivered to them by the Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet of the United Colonies in America, having been kindly treated and protected by them, and enlarged on parole, do hereby solemnly promise and engage, on the honour of gentlemen, that we will not bear arms against the Colonies of America, in any manner whatever, for the space of twelve months, or until we may be exchanged; nor will we, during that time, take any measures to give intelligence to the British Ministry, or Ministerial Army or Navy, or to any person or persons whatever, relative to American affairs; but will proceed, with all convenient expedition, to the town of Windham, in this Colony, and peaceably abide within the limits of said township, and submit ourselves to the further directions of the said Governour and his Council of Safety; that we will not, directly or indirectly, attempt to procure any person or persons to rescue us; and that we will not go on board any British ship-of-war during the continuance of our engagement not to bear arms.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 22, 1776.]

Fort George, April 12, 1776.

SIR: The troops that arrived too late at Albany to cross the lakes on the ice are now at this post and Fort Edward, impatiently waiting for the lakes to become navigable. I hope a day or two will effect it. All is in readiness to move immediately the cannon are embarked, and all such stores as are not perishable.

General Thomas is seven miles from this place, where I have advised him to remain until the lakes open, as we have scarcely room to lay down at this place. The gentlemen Committee remain at Saratoga for the same reason.

The originals of the enclosed papers are this moment come to hand by the Canada post. The intelligence they contain is so interesting that I send this by express, and have also written to General Washington, repeating my wish that a reinforcement may be immediately sent up.

I have been long apprehensive that the imprudent conduct of our troops would create a disgust to our cause in the Canadians; it even hurts it in this Colony, as I have before taken the liberty to observe to you; nor will it be remedied without a stricter discipline prevails, nor even then unless severer punishments could be inflicted than the present military law allows of.

We have had a severe snow-storm this day, which is clearing up with a high northwest wind, which may probably break the ice.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

P. S. General Washington informs me that he cannot procure any hard cash.

Montreal, March 16, 1776.

SIR: This will be handed to you by Mr. Blake, in whose favour I have taken the liberty to draw upon you one order of the 13th instant, for three hundred and ninety-four pounds fifteen shillings and three pence, lawful money, which is for blankets, &c., purchased for the use of the troops; and one order of the 16th instant, for four hundred and seventy-one pounds eighteen shillings and nine pence, lawful money, in cash, borrowed of him for the use of the Army, and which we have had for some time, without interest. He has been very friendly to us, and granted us every assistance in his power. I therefore recommend him to your notice. He will tell you the reasons we have to apprehend that there is mischief contriving by the King's Troops, and the inhabitants, traders, and savages, in and about Detroit.

Many of our friends in this town, from a number of circumstances, are of opinion that those men, who I informed you of in my last had made their escape from this place, took with them a considerable sum of money. We are informed by some Savages that they left Legolet last Monday for Niagara and Detroit; and it is thought if a party went off immediately by the way of the Mohawk River that they might be taken. After being fully informed by Mr. Blake, perhaps you will think it will be necessary to make a diversion that way as early as possible; for should a large number come down to this town, while the bulk of our Army are at Quebeck, they may give us trouble.

I have made a calculation of what powder we have in this country, and find there is not more than sixty rounds for six thousand men, supposing we had no use for cannon. I am afraid that it will be so difficult to pass the lakes in a little time, that unless the men are hurried, our numbers will fall greatly short of what were expected.

Your favour of the 6th instant I have received, and am very sorry that the whole of the provisions, cannon, artillery, stores, &c., which were designed for this country, could not be sent forward. I hardly know what we shall do. Our money is already gone. Hope there is some upon the road. The Deputy Paymaster is still here. He sent some time ago fifteen thousand dollars, in paper, to Quebeck; but I believe that he has not a sufficiency to pay off the Army by him. I expected to have gone to Quebeck myself before this time, but the troops coming in so slowly, and there has been so much to do here, that, as yet, it has been impossible. I am glad to hear that General Lee is on his road. Hope to see him in this Province in a few days.

If you can possibly be spared from New-York, I think it of the greatest importance to our operations in this country that you remain at Albany till we can be remitted and supplied with necessities; am, therefore, exceeding glad to hear that you intend it. •

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,
DAVID WOOSTER.

Head-Quarters, before Quebec, March 26, 1776.

The contents of your last favour I have not time to answer by this conveyance. This is only to give you some idea of some late interesting transactions.

The Priests in two or three Parishes below Point-Levi having been brought to Head-Quarters some weeks since, on account of their diabolical conduct, and were released on solemn promises of amendment, have, in conjunction with a party sent from town, imbodyed several hundred Canadians, and, it is said, have two twelve-pounders. Against this body, our men from the Point (two hundred in all) marched yesterday morning, engaged the enemy, took thirty prisoners; how many killed cannot learn. We had one man wounded. This was not the enemy's main body. This account is, as I am informed, from Major Dubois, who commanded on the occasion. Aaron Platt and Philadelphia Hughes were in the party. We impatiently wait the issue of this affair, as much depends on it. One hundred and fifty Jerseymen and Pennsylvanians are to march for Point-Levi this day. I have only time to add that I am, &c.,
GERSHOM MOTT.

To Captain Goforth, commanding at Three-Rivers.

Head-Quarters, Montreal, April 1, 1776.

SIR: General Wooster left this place for Quebeck, the 27th last month. He has honoured me, though unequal to the task, with the command of this District. I shall, therefore, to the utmost of my abilities, do for the best; and I conceive it my duty, as well as inclination, to inform you of every material circumstance as they occur to me, as well as to give you a particular account, from time to time, of this important district; and perhaps it may not be thought amiss if I add my own ideas of the whole country, and affairs in general. You are not unacquainted with the friendly disposition of the Canadians when General Montgomery first penetrated into the country. The ready assistance which they gave on all occasions, by men, carriages, or provisions, was most remarkable; even when he was before Quebeck, many Parishes offered their service in the reduction of that fortress, which was at that time thought unnecessary. But his most unfortunate fate, added to other incidents, has caused such a change in their disposition, that we are no more to look upon them as friends, but, on the contrary, waiting an opportunity to join our enemies. That no observations of my own may remain obscure, I beg leave to observe, that I think the clergy (or guardians of the souls, and conductors of the bodies) of these enthusiasts have been neglected, perhaps in some instances ill used. Be that as it will, they are unanimous, though privately, against our cause; and I have too much reason to fear many of them, with other people of some consequence, have carried on a correspondence the whole winter with General Carleton in Quebeck, and are now plotting our destruction. The peasantry in general have been ill used; they have in some instances been dragooned, with the point of the bayonet, to furnish wood for the garrison, at a lower rate than the current price; carriages, and many other articles furnished, for which certificates were given, not legible and without signature—the one half of consequence rejected by the Quartermaster-General. It is true, they have been promised payment, from time to time; yet they look upon such promises as vague, their labour and property lost, and the Congress and the United Colonies as bankrupt; and (what is a more material point) they have not seen sufficient force in the country to protect them. These matters furnish very strong arguments to be made use of by our enemies.

To take a view of our little Army here, I have pretty good information that our strength in camp before Quebeck did not, on the 18th of March, much exceed that on the day after General Montgomery's fall. General Arnold had at that time about four hundred men in a small-pox Hospital. Neither order nor subordination prevails, and of course shortly no soldiers. On the 15th of this month, those who wintered in the country are free, and, in my opinion, neither art, craft, nor money, will prevail on many of them to reinlist to serve in Canada. Colonel Livingston's Regiment, consisting of about two hundred, will be free on the same day; very few, of them, if any, will re-engage. Of my intended regiment I have about two hundred and fifty. The want of money obliges me to stop; where I shall remain until matters take a change, if ever, in our favour, as not a man more will now engage, and those which I have enlisted will go to the right about in case the Canadians in general join against us; at least such is my opinion. With respect to the better sort of people, both French and English, seven-eighths are Tories, who would wish to see our throats cut, and perhaps would readily assist in doing it.

The taking of Quebeck is altogether casual. The keeping of the country, according to the present appearance of affairs, is totally against us. No preparation has been, or can be made to guard the river, for a very good reason—no money or men of skill to do it; the whole country left without any other kind of law than that of the arbitrary and despotick power of the sword in the hands of the several commanding officers—too frequently abused in all cases of this nature.

You may remember, sir, in a conversation with you, at Albany, I urged the necessity of sending immediately to Canada able Generals, a respectable Army, a Committee of Congress, a suitable supply of hard cash, a printer, &c. Indeed, I had before represented those measures in person to Congress—at least to the Committee of Congress—and we have since been flattered, from time to time, with one or all those essentials.

The Savages hereabouts are cool; they keep aloof from us; we are to expect little or no friendship from them, and, indeed, little or no precaution has been taken for that purpose. It is excepted by some that numbers will come from the interior country, and fall on our frontiers, early in the spring.

Enclosed I transmit you extracts from some private letters, which accidentally came to hand from the camp before Quebeck. I believe the contents, as the news has come to town several ways. The Canadians taking up arms so early against us is of the most important consequence. We have brought about ourselves, by mismanagement, what Governour Carleton himself could never effect.

Having endeavoured to lay before you a true state of facts as they occur to me, if I have done my duty thereby, I shall be happy; if I have exceeded, I beg you will impute it to pure zeal in my country's cause, and the ardent desire I have, on all occasions, to contribute all in my power for the interests of the United Colonies. And should you be of opinion that any of my remarks are worthy the attention of Congress, you will please to communicate them.

I am, sir, with true respect, your most obedient servant,
MOSES HAZEN.

To Major-General Philip Schuyler.

Camp before Quebec, March 26, 1776.

I have just time to let you know that I and my family arrived at Head-Quarters on Saturday, 23d instant, in good health. I am informed that five hundred Canadians, and a few Regulars from the garrison, have assembled together, twelve leagues below Quebeck, with two twelve-pounders, and are getting more formidable every day; and have intercepted some provisions of ours. We have sent a party of men after them, to take their standard (which they have erected) and bring it to Head-Quarters. For my part I dread the consequence, as our party does not amount to one hundred men. God (and he only) can determine our fate. I think we have sent one gondola and some armed batteaus in order to intercept an armed schooner from Quebeck; and they are cutting more out of the ice—I mean the Regulars.

Excuse haste. I know your prudence will know how to handle this dangerous news.
JOHN BROGDEN.

To Captain Goforth, commanding at Three-Rivers.

P. S. Nothing shall escape my notice to you of all that passes; and if you think me worth your notice, let me have your opinion. Thanks be to God, this moment, as I was concluding this letter, news came in that Major Dubois had sent a letter to General Arnold that our men met with the advanced party of the enemy, killed and wounded a good many, and took thirty prisoners, and routed the rest, and are advancing to the main body. A party of one hundred and fifty men is gone to reinforce our party. We expect further news very soon. If we carry our point, I think Quebeck will soon be our own. J. B.

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER OF CAPTAIN GOFORTH.

Reports are various with respect to Indians. Some say five thousand are coming down to cut off Montreal; others say they are to pass Montreal, come to Three-Rivers, and hasten to Quebeck to the relief of their father, (Carleton), who is now confined within the walls, and must be relieved, or they will lose all their trade. Whether reality or fiction, time will soon discover. Should have written to the General before now about some flagrant abuses that have been committed by the private soldiers on their march to Quebeck, had I not expected to have had the honour to receive him at this place before now. A Priest's house has been entered with great violence, and his watch plundered from him. At another house they run in debt about twenty shillings, (English), and because the man wanted to be paid, run him through the neck with a bayonet. Women and children have been terrified, and forced, with the point of the bayonet, to furnish horses for private soldiers without any prospect of pay. I have not had it in my power to discover the offenders, but have issued a proclamation. Captain Stoup, of the Jersey Forces, left with me a silver tablespoon, which he thinks was taken by one of his men from some inhabitant of Montreal. Please to advertise it, that the owner, sending the marks, may have it again.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL THOMPSON.

Fort George, April 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I enclose you a letter from General Washington, which I have taken the liberty to leave open for your perusal. Should he not have reached New-York, you will please seal and forward it to him, by express, wherever he may be; as also that of Mr. Hancock. If there is a possibility of sparing troops from New-York, they will certainly be sent. I wish you, therefore, to detain all the vessels you can to transport them to Albany, until the return of your expresses from Congress or the General, excepting such as may be employed in transporting provisions, which must be sent up with all possible despatch; together with two or three tons of powder, if it can be spared.

I am informed that the garrisons at the posts in the Highlands are very weak. If so, you will please to send a reinforcement, under the command of an active officer.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Brigadier-General Thompson, or Officer commanding at New-York.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort George, April 12, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday I had the honour to receive your favour of the 3d instant, by Bennet, who overtook me on my way to this place. All is in readiness to move, as soon as the lakes open, which, I hope, will be in a day or two. General Thomas is here, six companies of Burrell's Regiment from Connecticut, two companies of the First Pennsylvania Battalion, and three of the New-Jersey. The remainder of these corps are gone on, whereof two companies are about forty-five miles below Crown-Point; the rest have reached Canada. We have also here two companies of Van Schaick's, of this Colony; and five companies of the Second Pennsylvania Battalion are at Fort-Edward, waiting for the lake to open, as I have no quarters for them at this place. The remainder of Van Schaick's are not yet raised; and two companies of the First Pennsylvania Battalion are on their way from New-York.

I should be extremely happy, my dear General, to pay my devoirs to you at New-York, but I do not see a possibility of quitting this quarter, without risking all in Canada; unless some other General Officer should relieve me, I shall, therefore, presume to remain, unless I receive your further orders.

Four o'clock, P. M.—This moment the post from Canada is arrived. I enclose you copies of all the papers I received. The intelligence they afford is so alarming, that I beg leave to repeat my wish that a considerable body of troops should be immediately sent up.

I have stopped the courier at this place, and he goes back immediately to advise our friends in Canada that the troops now here will soon be in Canada; and I have presumed to add, that they will be followed by three or four thousand more. This intelligence will keep up their spirits, and intimidate our enemies.

I have heretofore observed to your Excellency that I had never received a return of the Army in Canada. I am, on that account, still incapable of letting you know the strength of our Army there. I am equally in the dark with respect to the arrangement made in officering the two regiments that were to be raised out of the troops that wintered there.

The provisions at these posts is very trifling. None of what General Lee has contracted for, is come to Albany; and, unless a speedy supply is sent up, our troops in Canada must suffer. I have written on this subject to General Thompson, before I left Albany; and although I make not the least doubt but that he will forward it, if he can, yet I beg leave to mention it, lest he should forget to mention it on the arrival of his superior officer at New-York.

I am seized with a copious scorbutick eruption, which I have frequently experienced, and imagined it threw off some other more disagreeable disorder. I believe it will not confine me, or prevent me from doing my duty.

I am, dear General, most sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, April 12, 1776.

SIR: I am to inform your Excellency that Colonel Warren, the Paymaster-General, acquaints me he has not money enough left in the Treasury (since what was drawn for the Commissary and Quartermaster) to pay the five regiments which remain here for the month of March.

Mr. Quartermaster Parke had a warrant for five thousand five hundred pounds twelve shillings, and Mr. Commissary Avery had a warrant for four thousand five hundred pounds, to defray the expenses in their several departments; and they both assured me that they could not do with less.

Your Excellency will be pleased to give the necessary directions with respect to a supply of money.

I am, your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,

ARTEMAS WARD.

To General Washington.

GENERAL WARD TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 23, 1776.]

Boston, April 12, 1776.

SIR: Some time since, I wrote you, requesting leave to resign my command in the Army, on account of my ill state of health, and desiring some person might be appointed in my place; but, as yet, have had no answer.

I must renew my request, for the same reason. I cannot be content to continue in office, when I am conscious I am not able to do the duties of the same; for I think it would be dishonourable.

Devoutly praying for the Divine blessing on our righteous cause, I subscribe myself your most obedient and very humble servant,

ARTEMAS WARD.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. Dr. Tucker, and about twenty-four men, the day before yesterday, in whaleboats, near Cohasset, took one of the enemy's vessels, two hundred tons burden, laden with rum, valued at six thousand pounds sterling, and carried her into Cohasset.

COLONEL KNOX TO COLONEL BURBECK.

Cambridge, April 12, 1776.

SIR: In the written instructions which his Excellency General Washington was pleased to give to me, it is expressly ordered that you are to go immediately for New-York by the most direct road.

You will, therefore, set out as soon as possible, and proceed, with the utmost expedition, for that place.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

HENRY KNOX.

To Lieutenant-Colonel William Burbeck.

COLONEL BURBECK TO COLONEL KNOX.

Cambridge, April 12, 1776.

SIR: I see, by your instructions from his Excellency, I am ordered to New-York directly. When I came out of Boston, the Provincial Congress voted me one hundred and fifty pounds during the war, and four shillings sterling a day for life. It would be ungenerous for me to leave their service, as they have provided so well for me. If I leave their service, the four shillings a day is lost to me. As I am advanced in years, I am unwilling to part with it.

I am not able to set out directly to New-York, because I am finishing the drafts for cannon, mortars, and carriages, for the Province.

I hope, sir, the above will excuse me for not complying with your orders.

Your humble servant,
To Colonel Henry Knox.

WILLIAM BURBECK.

Pursuant to the within precept, we have taken pains to know the minds of the inhabitants of the Town of Bedford, with respect to the within obligation, and find none unwilling to sign the same, except the Rev. John Houstons, who declines signing the said obligation, for the following reasons, viz: Firstly. Because he did not apprehend that the honourable Committee meant that Ministers should take up arms, as being inconsistent with their Ministerial charge. Secondly. Because he was already confined to the County of Hillsborough, therefore, he thinks he ought to be set at liberty, before he should sign the said obligation. Thirdly. Because there are three men belonging to his family; already inlisted in the Continental Army.

As soon as ever we received your directions, requesting us to desire all the males in this town to sign to a Declaration, (Lunaticks, &c., excepted,) in obedience thereto, we immediately proceeded to give publick notice of your intentions, and otherwise, as we thought would have the most effectual tendency to have put into execution, in order that we might make a return by the Representative; but having so short a time to accomplish the matter, in so great a town, and being unwilling to omit anything relating to our duty, and which might be for the benefit of the whole, we solemnly deliberated upon the matter, asked the advice of our Representative, and others of safety and steadiness; and as we were not limited to a certain time to make a return, we purpose to make one as soon as it may be done with convenience; so rest your humble servants,

Moses Welch refuses to take up arms, and pleads conscience for an excuse.

These do certify the reasons why we, the subscribers, do not sign the resolutions of the Congress, in taking up arms: We do not believe that it is the will of God to take away the lives of our fellow-creatures; not that we come out against the Congress or the American liberties; but whenever we are convinced to the contrary, we are ready to join our American brethren to defend, by arms, against the hostile attempts of the British fleets and armies.

GEORGE START,

To the General Assembly, or Committee of Safety, for New-Hampshire.

We produced to the inhabitants of this Town, in Town-meeting, the paper proposed by the Committee of Safety to be signed by the inhabitants of this Colony. Few, if any, of the inhabitants, were willing to engage and promise as there proposed, to oppose, by arms, to the utmost of their power, the hostile attempts of the British fleets and armies, as this seemed to the inhabitants plainly to imply far more than any common enlistment into the service, even engaging as soldiers directly and during the continuance of the war. As to exerting ourselves faithfully when engaged, this, at least, was within the compass of our power; but it did not appear to the inhabitants prudent or necessary for any, or in any degree lawful, for all thus to engage. The town directly adopted the form of Association signed on this paper, which they and we hope, expresses all required by the General Congress.

JACK THOMPSON TO S. BURLING.

St. Eustatia, April 13, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you the 9th instant via Maryland, to the care of Mr. Clement Biddle, Merchant, in Philadelphia, in whose hands I begged you long since to keep letters for me, as he would have more frequent opportunities to forward them than you from New-York; they having four pilot-boats in this trade, and they outsail every ship they meet with.

The sloop Wharton and Captain Porter are out, from this, nine weeks; no account of them. David Morris and two others, who sailed three weeks after them, are safe arrived in Philadelphia. Am very uneasy about Mount, and still I am very certain he was not taken in the West-Indies. We have daily advices from most of the Islands; but in case she is arrived, and not in your power to send her out again with safety, (which I should be very sorry for,) in that case, you and T. G. must be mindful of the remittance, and believe it would be as easy to make from Philadelphia, if not more so, than from New-York. The merchants there have large sums owing them at St. Kitts and Antigua, and the factors want to remit; and T. & A. no doubt would think hard of a disappointment, particularly at this time, when they have fathered so many American vessels, and they all want cash.

I apprehend you will have a warm summer, as all the troops have quitted Boston for New-York; and the preparation you are making, I hope, will enable you to give them a warm reception. I am astonished the merchants at New-York, Philadelphia, and other places on the Continent, do not fit out privateers as in last war, with commissions from Congress, to take all vessels coming from, or going to, Europe, from any part of the world whatever, as English bottoms. The Admiral has given two commissions at Antigua and one at Dominica, to vessels fitted out by the merchants and planters, to take all American vessels they can meet with; and I must say, I do wish the Americans would return the compliment. If two or more privateers were once to appear in the West-Indies, all kinds of produce, particularly sugar and rum, would fall twenty-five per cent.

Since we had advice of the fleet sailing from Philadelphia, the shippers to Europe offer ten per cent. against American privateers only, and many of the merchants who have written for insurance, expect to be disappointed.

By a vessel from Madeira, we are advised that three outward-bound Indiamen were laying there, waiting for convoy, with large quantities of wine on board; and I am very well convinced if a few privateers were sent into these seas, it would prevent any sugars being shipped this season, they are so damnable frightened since these few vessels sailed from Philadelphia.

Twenty-nine sail of transports under convoy passed here last Saturday, from Antigua, with troops and stores for the Army that was at Boston. Rum is very plenty in every Island, eighteen and twenty pence per gallon. The transports have taken in a large quantity at St. Kitts and Antigua, which kept the price at two shillings and six pence. Lumber is forty pounds per thousand; and in making sugar-hogsheads, every second stave is made out of boards brought from Egg-Harbour, and they will not have hogsheads for rum nor molasses; and the Congress would do right to forbid any lumber being shipped from any part of the Continent. And a few privateers to windward, to pick up the Irish vessels with beef and pork, would be the plan; and twenty or thirty sugar-ships convoyed in safety to any part of America, would be glorious prizes; and then to sell the cargoes on reasonable terms, would enable the Congress to carry on a war for seven years, if their vessels were constantly kept cruising. I am very well convinced every English Island in the West-Indies would be ruined in three years; and you may be assured if some such plan is not adopted by the Congress, America is ruined. The Army at Boston is constantly supplied with bread, flour, wine, rum, molasses, gin, beef, and pork, from the West-India Islands, and that will continue to be the case, let the Army go where they will, unless they receive a check from the privateers.

The great Mr. Burk, who was taken last winter going into Boston with a cargo of rum and sugar, has returned to Antigua, and is now fitting and loading three vessels for the same purpose. I am exceedingly sorry he made his escape, or was suffered to leave the Continent, as he is concerned in the two privateers that are fitted out there.

No beef nor pork in market; butter, six pounds twelve shillings per firkin; tobacco, five pounds per cwt.; rice, forty shillings; corn, sixteen shillings; pease, none; flour, twelve pounds per barrel, and plenty; hams, eighteen pence per pound; cheese, eighteen pence; sheep and poultry, any price you will please to ask.

My compliments to friend Helm and family, Captain Rutgers, and others.

I am,
To Mr. S. Burling, New-York.

JACK THOMPSON.

EDMUND RANDOLPH TO VIRGINIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Williamsburgh, April 13, 1776.

SIR: It distresses me much that I should be obliged to refuse the distinction intended for me by the Congress, in their appointment of me to the office of Mustermaster for this District. The citizens of Williamsburgh having elected me to represent them in Convention, and an ordinance excludes all persons holding any military post of profit from a seat therein, I cannot desert them without the highest violation of gratitude. I must, therefore, entreat you, sir, to transmit these my reasons for not entering upon the duties of the above office, to the Congress, and my sincere acknowledgments for the favour.

I am, sir, with esteem and respect, your most obedient servant,

EDMUND RANDOLPH.

To the President of the Committee of Safety.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF VIRGINIA.

MY COUNTRYMEN: The fears of many lest we should not be able to provide sufficient funds for the support of an expensive war, has been the reason why they have been so reluctant to break that connection with Britain which has been the source of so many evils, and may probably incline them to spend that time in negotiation which they ought to employ in action; but a little attention to the advantages that we shall derive from unrestrained commerce, may dissipate their fears, and point out to them an ample compensation for all the expenses, the dangers, and the toils of the war. I shall only produce the trade of this Colony as an example; with which you are best acquainted. This has hitherto been almost wholly managed by foreigners, and in foreign bottoms; and will be so again, if, by any negotiation, our enemies can betray or bribe us to an accommodation on their own principles. You are without merchants, ships, seamen, or ship-builders; and thus want several very abundant sources of wealth, as well as nurseries of arts, and of numerous useful subjects to the State. Your trade is confined to a single spot on the globe, in the hands of the natives of a distant Island, who fix the market of all commodities at their pleasure, and we may be very sure will rate yours at the lowest, and their own at the highest prices, they will in any conscience bear. Every article of merchandise, that is not the produce of Britain, must first pay its duties to the Crown, perhaps must be increased in the price a very large advance per cent. there, and then be re-exported to Virginia, and undergo an additional advance of seventy-five, and sometimes near one hundred and fifty per cent. here. This disadvantage is felt much more sensibly by those who are acquainted with the trade of the Northern Colonies, where they are not altogether so shamefully gulled as we have been from the first plantation of this Colony. You can there buy linens and broadcloths from the retail merchants at the same price your factors here tell you they obtain them at prime cost in Britain. By this means you fairly lose seventy-five pounds currency on every one hundred pounds sterling worth of merchandise you import from Great Britain that is not native to that country. If we suppose your imports from thence annually to amount to seven hundred thousand pounds sterling, (which can be no extravagant supposition,) and suppose upon one half of that sum you lose in the proportion which I have already mentioned, there will be lost two hundred and sixty-two thousand five hundred pounds per annum, which might be saved by a free and independent trade; or, to be sure that we are within bounds, fix it at two hundred thousand pounds.

Let us next advert to the amazing injury you sustain in the dependant trade, by your merchants being all foreigners. This is a situation not peculiar to you, but affects all the Southern Colonies, from Maryland to Georgia. I am not well enough acquainted with the trade of Virginia to know exactly how many foreign houses, or companies, have an interest in it, or how many factors are employed by them to manage it; but I suppose I shall be far enough within bounds if I say fifty of the former, and two thousand of the latter. Whether I am right or wrong in the numbers, the principles of my calculation will be equally just, and may be very easily applied to enlarge and diminish the profit or loss to the merchant and the country, by readers who are better acquainted with the subject than I am. It is not unreasonable to say, that every house or company makes fifteen thousand pounds a year, net gain, by the trade of this Colony; and, consequently, fifty houses will annually export seven hundred and fifty thousand pounds sterling to Scotland and England; which will be just so much saved to the Colony, whenever its own natives shall become its merchants. And allowing to the factors, on an average, one hundred pounds each per annum, (as some have much more, and others perhaps may have less;) if, out of this annual income, we suppose them to spend thirty pounds in the country, there will be seventy pounds a year laid up for their own use, and expended in Britain, for what they cannot, or do not choose to purchase in America. But because they pay taxes, and are of some other small service to the Colony as long as they stay in it, we will rate their gain at ten pounds less, and suppose them to lay up sixty pounds a year, which is so much taken out of the trading stock of this country, and only waits for a sufficient addition to be carried off and expended beyond sea. Here is another loss of one hundred and twenty thousand pounds per annum; and the whole together amounts to eight hundred and seventy thousand pounds sterling per annum that we lose by foreign merchants; besides the great number of useful arts that are closely connected with the management of commerce by the natives of any country. How many thousand excellent servants might be employed in ship-building, in manning your fleets, in raising and manufacturing all kinds of naval stores? Reflect a moment on the present condition of Spain, and on her condition two centuries ago. She presents us with a striking instance, out of a great number which Europe, Asia, and Africa afford, of the ill effects of resigning her commerce into the hands of foreigners; then the most opulent and formidable power in Europe, now among the most despised and neglected; then able to give laws to almost all the world, (the United Netherlands were but an inconsiderable part of her extensive and powerful Empire,) but now, grown indolent and negligent of commerce, even the little Province of Holland, in her turn, gives the laws of the sea to her former mistress.

I am afraid this subject, though very important, begins to grow dry and unentertaining to the publick. I shall therefore produce but one more instance of the loss we sustain by this dependant trade; and that is in our staple, upon which the Government of England, and the merchants of Scotland, have it in their power to put what price they please. At present we esteem two-pence half-penny per pound, or about twenty shillings per cwt. a very good average price; and at this rate a careful planter may keep himself above want, and have enough besides to pay his taxes, and give a dinner now and then to a friend. This tobacco is exported to Britain, and pays seven-pence half-penny sterling duty per pound, and their merchants make their fortunes out of it afterwards. The duty that tobacco pays in the British ports is almost four times the price it bears in Virginia; which, by a free trade, and exporting it directly to the countries that consume it, would be so much clear gain to us. The planter, then, instead of twenty shillings, would receive five pounds per cwt. But, making large allowance for the discouragements that such an article of luxury might be under in our hands, if we were separated from Britain, which now consumes a large proportion of it, I shall suppose its common price to be three pounds; that is, forty shillings more than we receive at present. If, then, we suppose that there are annually one hundred and ten million pounds, or one hundred and ten thousand hogsheads of tobacco exported out of the Colony, (which, perhaps, is pretty near the truth,) we shall gain an advantage of two million two hundred thousand pounds a year, besides half as much more by the great quantities of hemp, flax, cotton, wheat, and flour, that are beginning to be raised or manufactured; that will enable my countrymen to be as generous as their natural temper inclines them to be, and to pay a tax of forty shillings, with greater convenience than they can pay one of fifteen shillings at present. To present you in one view the whole of what you lose by a dependant trade, and would gain by a determined resolution to emancipate yourselves and it into the liberty for which I hope Providence has designed both, and to listen to no pretended Negotiation that does not carry upon her face candor and fairness, and openly, and without disguise, extend freedom in the one hand, while she offers peace in the other:

1st. On imports, as above, - - -	£200,000
2d. Merchants' net profits, £870,000 sterling, - - - - (currency)	1,087,500
3d. Planters' gross profits, - - -	2,200,000
4th. On wheat, flour, hemp, flax, &c., at least half as much; but say, - - -	1,000,000
5th. That part of the gross profits of the merchants that will go to artists of different kinds, ship-builders, seamen, makers of sails, cordage, anchors, and a variety of other tradesmen, must exceed their net gain: suppose it - -	1,500,000
Sum total, - - -	£5,987,500

That is, it will increase the real property among us annually to near six millions. This, in seven years, (by which time we shall undoubtedly have discharged our part of the Continental expense) will amount to above forty millions of pounds currency that we shall be more wealthy than we should have been if we had continued dependant on Great Britain, and in the same circumstances that a few years ago we esteemed very prosperous. I make no allowance for the gradual improvement of commerce, because I am willing to make all my calculations at the lowest rates that things will bear; and it is very possible that I am now a million or two below the truth. Besides, we may let the increased profits of some of the last years of this period balance our unskilfulness and poverty for a few years in the beginning of it. Here is a fund sufficient for defraying all the expenses that even the most timorous amongst us can suppose to be necessary for the preservation of our liberties against the avarice of a nation much more powerful than the English, and not a farthing of our present property touched. And although we should not be able to enjoy an unmolested trade for several years to come; yet, whenever that desirable period shall arrive that we shall be as free as we ought to be, we shall speedily be able to redeem all the Bills of Credit it may be found necessary to issue for that purpose. For if we lay but the moderate tax of a shilling in the pound (which we should hardly perceive) only on those gains that will be wholly additional to the gains of our former limited and dependant commerce, we shall be able to sink all the bills issued in this Colony, and our quota of those that have been issued by the Congress, and have in the publick coffers besides upwards of five millions of dollars for other necessary uses.

If we aim only at interest in the present contest, it appears plainly what part we ought at once to resolve upon. If we mean to unite with our interest the considerations of equity, and the dictates of natural affection, there is a degree of injury where affection ceases, and is converted into resentment; and I know of no principles of equity that forbid us to defend ourselves, or that require us to risk everything we have been contending for in tedious and treacherous negotiations. Does any of my countrymen ask me whether I am an enemy to all treaty, and inquire what prospect shall we have if these maxims prevail, of ever seeing a period of our trouble? I answer, No; but I would treat with them as the Roman Consul did with the King of Asia. And since they have first drawn the sword, I would make a circle round them with the sword, and demand their peremptory, unevasive answer to every requisition our country has a right to make from them, before they leave the spot. The controversy has been agitated long enough for both nations to understand each other. Each perfectly knows what she is willing to yield, or on what she will firmly fix her foot, determined to hold it, or perish in the attempt. What need is there of delay? An hour may decide it as well as an age. We are too serious to be playing over with them all the tricks of what they are pleased to call negotiation, but which is really nothing else than downright lying and sharpening. It is no time to parley with a robber about your purse when he has his pistol at your breast. You must either give or take in a moment. It would become us, in the opinion of some men, mighty well, to be sure, to forbear such high language, and rather to manage our cause by supplication and crying to a great King and a powerful nation! We have cried and roared long enough already, and what have we got by it? Our petitions have been turned out of doors, and we have all been called Rebels and savages, and what not, because we have roared so loud as to disturb his Majesty's good repose, and oblige him to wear out his horses driving from Kew to St. James's. If we are blameable, it is for using these ineffectual applications too long. The time is come in which we ought to do something decisive; and the more desirous our enemies seem to be to involve us in knotty and intricate negotiations, the more determined should we be not to unravel them, but to cut them with the sword. They well know that tedious, inactive delays, must bring our affairs to a ruinous condition; and if they can waste our time in negotiating, the battle is won without striking a stroke. Our resources must be greatly diminished before we engage in action; and when they have worn us out with subtle deliberations, and wasted our treasure, while they only wanted to gain time by artful compliances and demands, they know very well how, by a fetch in politicks, to throw everything into confusion again, and to expose us naked, and perhaps distracted with mutual discords among ourselves, to superior wealth and superior power. I design no reflection on those who may be appointed to treat with them on the part of America; on the other hand, I do not doubt their abilities. But it is always in the power of Ministry, who will be treacherous, and whose interest lies in gaining time, to overreach the wisest politicians, if they will descend to follow them through the labyrinths of a negotiation that is only meant as a wile to mislead, or to blind them. But we have not only an accumulated debt to dread by the tedious delays that are unavoidable in the common forms of negotiating, but infinite dissensions among ourselves. An enterprise that depends upon the concord and exertions of the people, will ever infallibly fail if they are long held in a state of doubtful inactivity. All wise politicians, who have governed them with success, have found it necessary to keep them employed in constant action. I can scarcely forbear to consider it as miraculous, that this extensive Continent has hitherto been led to pursue one determinate plan with so much unanimity and perseverance. But there is no error we ought more to dread than wearing out the patience of the populace by inaction. When their minds have long hung in suspense, at such a crisis as the present, they naturally fall into one of these two dangerous evils—either an entire languor and passivity of temper, or an impatience that at length breaks out in faction and sedition. In two of our neighbouring Colonies, which have been farthest removed from the scene of action, we have already seen this observation unhappily verified. And the suspense in which all the Colonies have been held for a considerable time is beginning to verge towards impatience, which will very probably soon burst out into violent mutual dissensions, if it shall be defrauded out of a proper enemy, by an unseasonable negotiation, especially when it is artfully managed by emissaries who will refuse neither promises nor rewards to inflame it to their purpose. For God's sake, then, my countrymen, let us waste no time in unnecessary and dangerous delays; let us act with vigour and decision; let us propose to them the terms we demand in a clear and unequivocal manner, and require of them an immediate and unequivocal answer. Suffer them not to waste an hour, (for every hour is precious,) under the artful pretence of considering propositions more maturely, which they ought to have been well determined on long ago; or of not having brought with them sufficient powers, a usual artifice of statesmen, so that they can propose or answer nothing decisive without sending two or three times across the Atlantick. And since they have set us the example of treating at the point of the sword, cut short the negotiation they would be willing to protract, and make your appeal at once to the sword.

A PLANTER.

QUERIES OFFERED TO THE FREEHOLDERS AND PEOPLE OF VIRGINIA AT LARGE.

Williamsburgh, April 13, 1776.

Is it your intention to be freemen or slaves? If it is your intention to be free, should you not adopt the sure means of being so, whilst these means are in your hands, and not put it in the power of fortune to wrest them out of your hands? Are not these means obvious to every common understanding? Is it not manifest that you have already sinned beyond forgiveness in the eye of the accursed Ministry of Great Britain, and of that more accursed tyrant, who will employ no Ministry unless they previously stipulate to work your ruin? Is there any circumstance in the whole life or character of this tyrant which gives you reason to think that he will relent? Was he ever known to forgive those that he had once oppressed or injured? Is there any symptom of virtue in either House of Parliament which can flatter you that they will check the disposition of their masters? Is there any appearance of vigour and spirit in the people of Great Britain which can open a prospect of relief? Is it probable that a people who have suffered their own most sacred laws to be baffled, violated, and trampled upon with impunity, should rouse themselves in the cause of others, who are removed three thousand miles distant from them? On the contrary, is it not plain that they are scarcely less hostile to your rights and happiness than the tyrant himself? It is true a few virtuous men have appeared your advocates; but have not the virtuous, and friends to liberty in other parts of the globe, been equally your advocates? Have not the first geniuses of France, inspired by the sacred love of freedom and humanity, stepped forth as champions of that cause which is in fact the cause of all mankind? The Rhensels, Voltaires, and Alemberts, have exerted their talents in your defence; and they have exerted them not in vain: their works have been read with avidity and applause. Every man who thinks, every man who feels, through the different States of France, Italy, and Germany, is your friend, and sends up vows for your success; while, in England, argument, reason, wit, and eloquence, have been absolutely thrown away. As an evidence of this truth, has a single County petitioned in your favour? Some few manufacturing towns have indeed expressed their apprehensions that the present measures may be detrimental to their own commerce and interest; but on the injustice and inhumanity of these measures they have been utterly silent. Have not your fields been laid waste, your property confiscated, your citizens butchered, and your cities reduced to ashes? Have not the Savages been tampered with to deluge your frontiers with blood and slaughter? Have not your slaves been instigated to murder you and your wives and children? Are not these things (monstrous and incredible as they are) notorious? But in what manner have they affected the people of England? Have they shown the least resentment, indignation, or even compassion? Have they not, on the contrary, voted, or suffered their Representatives to vote fresh means for prosecuting the diabolical plan? Have they not negotiated with every power of Europe for hiring instruments, to insure your destruction? Are these things facts, or are they not? And can you now sit patiently, with your arms across? Will you not rouse yourselves at the great call of nature? Will you suffer a few coward hearts, contemptible, confused heads, or perhaps treacherous bosoms, to keep you fascinated in a state of torpor, till the chain is fixed about your necks, by which you will be inextricably held? But, to speak without a figure, I will tell you plainly, fellow-citizens, your situation, and point out your interest and duty. You have already proceeded so far that, were your cause less righteous than it is, you could not in policy recede. You have overturned every form of the Constitution, if such a defective patchwork fabrick as yours can be called a Constitution; you have assumed the legislature into your own hands; you have raised troops; you have waged war; and you have, in appearance at least, expelled your Governour. In short, you have committed a multiplicity of acts, which a Prince less tyrannical, a Ministry less abandoned, and a Nation less imperious than that of Great Britain, might choose to construe treason, and which, if fortune, or your own indecision, should throw it into their power, they will infallibly punish as such. If you succeed, all these things, which you have done, will redound to your honour; but if you miscarry, (which may Heaven and your own spirit avert,) the horrible slavery which must be the lot of you and your children, will be represented in history as scarcely adequate to the blackness and magnitude of your crimes. If anything in human affairs is certain, it may be affirmed that success or miscarriage are at your own option. Decision insures the former; hesitation incurs the latter.

You have an Army, the soldiers and officers of which have displayed more valour, order, and discipline, and the Generals more ability, than the enemy or yourselves could possibly have expected. They have been crowned with most wonderful success. And are they now to be stopped in the career of their good fortune? And are your liberties to be risked on the chance of a die, merely through complaisance to the fears, if not the treachery, of the most despicable and worthless part of the community? I speak not from passion or prejudice: I appeal to your own sense and experience. Look about you. Who, what are these men, thus sobbing and whining after their darling dependance, which they can neither understand themselves, nor do attempt to explain to others? Are they not the very men who, from the beginning, have either openly opposed, or thrown obstacles in the way of, every spirited measure of resistance? In short, are they not men of suspected principles, muddy, perplexed understandings, or of a timidity ridiculous to a proverb?

I shall now conclude, fellow-citizens, with urging and insisting upon these incontrovertible truths: that although you have a numerous and gallant Army, although your Generals and officers are zealous and capable, although it has pleased Heaven to bless them hitherto with almost one continued series of success—I say, that although these things are, they are all in vain, unless you likewise exert, at this important crisis, that manly decision which has long been expected from you. The gallantry of your troops, the zeal and capacity of your officers, will only serve to make their defeat and destruction more humiliating and lamentable; and that they must ultimately be defeated, ruined, or dissolved, is most infallible, unless they are furnished with the requisite means of carrying on the war. They have not these means; they have neither arms, tents, blankets, nor a sufficient stock of ammunition. They can only be supplied with these requisites by a more certain, and less precarious intercourse with other States, than the little, dirty, disgraceful, smuggling method now pursued. This intercourse cannot be established without a declaration, on your parts, that you are a free and independent people. Whilst you remain in the predicament of Rebels, they are, in decency, obliged to keep aloof; but when you can be considered as an independent State, the eternal rules of policy will point out to them the advantages and honour which must result from a close alliance with you. For Heaven's sake, why, therefore do you hesitate? The pusillanimous mortals who labour to raise spectres in your imaginations similar to those which haunt their own, know very well that reconciliation and reunion with your butchers are impossible. You may, indeed, be their slaves, but to be their brethren and fellow-subjects is out of the nature of things. Procrastination only prolongs the calamities of war. Every day's delay swells up the expense of America's blood and treasure. Will you, then, I repeatedly demand, throw away the lives of so many thousands of your most valuable citizens, plunge yourselves into an enormous debt, from which you can never be extricated; will you stake the liberties of yourselves and posterity on hazard and fortune, merely in complacency to the fears of a few timid, or perhaps to the designs of a few disaffected men? Or will you, by a brave, spirited, and manly injunction on your servants in Congress to declare you a free and independent people, bring the calamities of war to a shorter issue, and fix your liberties on a firm and durable foundation?

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY OF VIRGINIA.

[No. 116.]

Annapolis, April 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Ristean, the bearer, has the misfortune of having a brother in captivity, taken by Lord Dunmore, and entertains some hopes of obtaining his release if he can gain access to him. He is a native of this Province, and well known to some of us to be a warm friend to American liberty; we should therefore be obliged to you if you would afford him any opportunity for that purpose that would not be injurious to the cause in which we are embarked. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Safety of Virginia.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THOMAS SMYTH.

[No. 117.]

Annapolis, April 13, 1776.

SIR: We are sorry any uneasiness should prevail among the independent Captains on the Eastern-Shore, from a supposition they have not equally the attention of the Council of Safety with those on this side the bay. We aim at doing what is right, and wish to avoid every appearance of partiality. The companies here are as unhappily circumstanced, both as to arms and clothing, as they are with you. We were disappointed in having as many guns at Baltimore as we expected; and as there are a good many on hand in Annapolis, and we had a probability of receiving sixty or eighty more from Frederick within a few days, we thought it most advisable to wait a little while for them, that you might be furnished at once with at least as many as we had in view to send when you were with us. The hats, blankets, and lead, did not get down until three or four days ago, and we were obliged to send a second messenger to Baltimore before we could learn the quantity of musket powder they had there. These matters prevented our supplying you so early as we were anxious to do.

We have sent you from hence, by Mr. Waters's boat, ninety-four muskets, twenty-one rifles, with bullet moulds, pouches, and horns, five hundred and ten hats, three pieces osnaburgh, fifteen hundred gun flints, twenty musket bullet-moulds, forty blankets, two and a half reams of cartridge paper, fifty pieces of check, fifteen pieces of Russia linen, and forty-five pieces of cruger; and have ordered Major Gist to send from Baltimore one ton of musket gunpowder, four ton of lead, four hundred and fifty-four cartridge-boxes and belts, four hundred and fifty-four bayonet-belts, three hundred gun-slugs, and also sixty of the muskets and accoutrements now in the possession of Captain Nathaniel Smith's Company. The osnaburghs are for Captain Veazey's Company; the blankets for the others; and the arms, &c., with forty muskets and accoutrements, and twenty rifles, which we have purchased from Mr. Thomas Ringgold, with those you have bought, and also the linen, are to be equally distributed, to avoid all complaints. If you have leisure, we request you will parcel out the arms for each company. Cecil County is already sufficiently supplied with powder and lead. The gentlemen from below say the addition of one barrel will not be enough; we therefore would have you send them each another; and to keep up an equality, which may prevent uneasiness, we desire you will also add one to each of the other Counties, except Caroline.

We desire you will contract for the other rifles, but think the shoes too dear. If Mr. Hands can come over with you the last of next week it will be a great relief to us. Mr. Carroll is fearful of a fit of the gout. Mr. Tilghman is anxious to get to the Eastern-Shore, and the rest of us are much fatigued. We are, &c.

To Thomas Smyth, Esq.

MARYLAND DELEGATES TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, April 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: There is not an ell of light duck in this city, or we should have bought some, agreeable to your request. We advised with persons here who understand what articles are fit for tents, and they inform us that the cruger sent by Mr. Bowly from hence, is very proper for that purpose. We wish to know if you have received the cruger and other linens imported in the Wild Duck. We directed them to be lodged at Baltimore for your order, and expect they are arrived before this. Enclosed you have a memorandum of the several prices. Be pleased to inform us if you have heard from Vanbibber. No important occurrence since we last wrote you.

We are your most obedient servants,

THOMAS STONE,
THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN.,
R. ALEXANDER.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

CASSANDRA TO CATO.—NO. II.

Philadelphia, April 13, 1776.

SIR: Though the Common Man's advice has come rather too late; though his manner of stating the points to be discussed decides to which party he belongs; though he has studiously evaded the main question, and thereby shown the publick that security to our rights forms no share of the debate he wishes to open; and though the manner in which he attempts to expose Cato and Cassandra evidently proves whose faults he is most inclined to conceal, yet I heartily join him in his censure on personal reflections. I thank him, too, for his candour in tacitly informing the publick that you have not come to the point as yet, though you have already published five letters, and heartily close with his proposal of laying aside all personality. I shall therefore proceed to the main point; and if you are willing to enter the lists as a fair antagonist, and meet me on the ground of reason and argument, on that ground will Cassandra meet you: but if, contrary to your own proposal, and the advice of your friend, you continue to amuse your countrymen with declamation and assertion, and study to terrify rather than inform, to address their passions rather than enlighten their understandings, I shall still be personal. Your talent lies in strong painting and declamation, and you expect to hold up such a terrific picture to the imaginations of the people, as will effectually frighten them into submission; but the exhibition of your person at the side of your productions will ever prove a perfect antidote to their poison. Giving you this fair warning, I shall now proceed to your third, fourth, and fifth letters, and nothing which can point out the man shall drop from my pen until Cato gives occasion for it.

I agree with the Common Man thus far, that some propositions he mentions ought, one day, to be discussed; but as there is one point, not only prior to any of them, but of infinitely greater importance than them all, viz: an absolute security for the enjoyment of our liberties, I must and will insist on the discussion of this point first, as not only prior in order, but most essential; and when it shall be fairly proved that our rights can be as effectually secured in a state of dependancy as in an independent state, then, and not before, will be the proper time to examine which would be most to our advantage. We entered the contest with a determination to secure our rights at every hazard. This is, therefore, what we are to provide for. If two ways of equal security should present themselves, then will come on the other question, viz: Which will not only secure our liberties but bring us the greatest advantages besides? Now, when Cato, the Common Man, or any other man, shall exhibit a plan by which we can absolutely secure our liberties and continue dependant, then Cassandra will be ready to enter upon the discussion of this point. But Cassandra assures Cato, the Common Man, and every other man, that no sophistical proposals of any man will turn his eyes from the main object until he sees a way of permanent security to our rights; and he trusts his countrymen, who first armed for this purpose, will still continue of that mind, and then he fears neither the threats nor efforts of Cato and the aristocratical junto, who are straining every nerve to frustrate our virtuous endeavours, and to make the common and middle class of people their beasts of burden. Those freemen who nobly refuse to be ridden by a King, Lords, and Commons, will scarcely be tame enough to take Cato and his party on their backs. I shall therefore proceed.

Passing, for the present, those parts of your letters which contain nothing but the most illiberal abuse and scurrilous invectives against Committees, Conventions, &c., I shall take up your political creed, and examine, with the greatest freedom, the arguments on which you have founded your faith. You believe "that the true interest of America lies in a reconciliation with Great Britain on constitutional principles; and that you wish it upon none else." Sir, I earnestly entreat you, as you wish not to mislead your dear countrymen, to explain what you understand by a reconciliation on constitutional principles, that I may not mistake your meaning. It will save much writing on both sides to give such definitions of general terms as we are determined to abide by. I wish to see the whole truth laid fairly before the people, that they may coolly consider, and, with the utmost impartiality, weigh every circumstance, and choose that alone which promises the greatest security to their rights and privileges, and affords them the surest prospect of wealth and happiness. I shall, therefore, cheerfully define every term which Cato may think dubious, or calculated to mislead; and I demand the same of Cato. If he is the honest man he wishes to appear, he will not refuse me. Let us canvass everything to the bottom; and let not dark hints, unproved assertions, or ungenerous inuendoes, against the designs of incorruptible patriots, be hereafter palmed on the people for argument; but when truth is exhibited to them in the fullest and fairest manner, let them judge for themselves. Upon due information, I doubt not, they will judge right; and that judgment I am resolved to abide by.

But why does Cato labour so incessantly to bias his reader by so many and such long and pathetick harangues of the horrors of war, and its powers of desolation? Slavery is certainly a much more terrible evil, in every respect, than war; for the evils of war are both tolerable and temporary; while the miseries of slavery are intolerable and endless. War may cut off thousands in the bloom of their youth; but slavery destroys the very seeds of generation, not only in the animal, but vegetable world. How does it look, Cato, in a patriot of your magnitude, to be continually haranguing on the horrors of war, at a time when everything we hold dear and valuable depends on the success of our arms? Were you in your beloved mother country, and the Pretender, with a foreign force, (suppose Russians,) ravaging her coasts, would you harangue on these horrors to discourage resistance? I confess myself at great uncertainty what part you would act on such an occasion; but I strongly presume that in case you did, you would be accounted a disaffected traitor, and treated accordingly. But I ask pardon, sir; you do not like to be questioned. Surely, were you in the councils of the enemy, your native appetite for peace would soon put an end to their murderous designs! You are not conscientiously scrupulous, neither; for you declare you will turn out against us if there be any attempt to set the French and English by the ears. Take no help! Take no help! Fight alone, Whigs, till you are all cut off; and then we Tories will submit and have the whole. This is the language of Cato. Now, though I am as confident that your publications are intended to reduce us to slavery as you can be that mine propose a continuation of the war; and though I can more easily prove the one than you can the other; yet I have not endeavoured, by alarming descriptions of the miseries of slavery, to prejudice my reader against the arguments of my opponents. Cassandra has no point to carry, and, therefore, detests such shifts. God forbid that I should ever consider my own interest as separate from the general interest of mankind! And with equal fervency of devotion I pray that all who have, may be finally defeated in their attempts against these Colonies. You have filled nearly the one-half of the five letters you have already published with horrible descriptions alone. Do you imagine, Cato, that we are all affected with nervous complaints, and that you can do more for your cause by alarming our fears than informing our judgments? If this be not your design, pray publish as many, as terrible, and as animated descriptions of the miseries of slavery as you have done on the horrors of war, and then leave the people to judge which they would choose. Do not let us throw them into a panick and confusion, and then desire them to examine with coolness and deliberation. There is a dignity in honesty, and a pleasing fortitude in conscious integrity, which I could wish Cato to experience. The subject demands a clear, plain, full, rational, and manly discussion; and it ought to have it. It is certainly worthy of all the labour we can bestow upon it. Liberty or slavery is now the question. Let us but fairly discover to the inhabitants of these Colonies on which side Liberty has erected her banner, and we will leave it to them to determine whether they would choose liberty, though accompanied with war, or slavery, attended by peace.

The present contest is a contest of Constitutions, and the war a war of Legislatures. The common wars of nations are the wars of one crowned head against another, in which the people have little share, and are as little consulted. The crowned head on each side declares war, or negotiates peace, without conferring with them. But this war is a war between the British Parliament and the Colonial Assemblies; it is, in fact, become a war between the People of Great Britain and the People of America; and though both have heretofore acknowledged the same King, (and he, in duty, ought to have remained neuter,) yet, as he has joined the British Parliament against us, he has become a party in the quarrel. Hence, so far as the present is a contest of Constitutions, the Parliament has evidently won the field; for the whole force of the Legislature of Great Britain has been, from the first day of the controversy, armed against us; but we have, in no one instance, been able to call forth the strength of our Legislatures to oppose. Nay, we have constantly had them against us, ready to join the foe. I ask, how happens this, Cato? Why are you so in love with such a Constitution? As you are not fond of answering silly queries, I will endeavour to answer them myself: it is, because our Legislatures are dependant on our very enemy, and theirs is independent of us. Our constitutional connection with Britain gives her so prodigious an advantage over us, that, if we had strictly adhered to our chartered Constitutions, we would have been enslaved before this time; and it will ever be so as long as we are dependant.

Both the King and Parliament of Great Britain are the choice of the People of Great Britain; but though our Assemblies are our choice, our Governours are not; they are either nominated by the King of Great Britain, or some one of his British subjects, which effectually destroys their utility to us in this, and every such controversy, which has already, or is likely hereafter to happen. Their salaries, though the gift of the people, are evidently no counterpoise to their nomination, if facts can prove any thing—and for this plain reason, that, though we grant the wages, yet it rests in the power of the King whether they shall enjoy it or not, as, after the appointment, the continuance of it depends entirely on him.

The King of Great Britain, though our King, will ever join the Parliament against us as often as a contention happens. The Parliament are his tools; and their illegal claims are only a specious covering for his endeavours after arbitrary power in the first place; and, in the second place, his Crown, his dignity, and his support, depend entirely upon their grants, and not upon ours. He will, therefore, take part with them on every occasion. On the contrary, his Representatives are not so dependant on us as to oblige them to take part with us. This is not all; for in every Province where they had the power, they not only refused to concur in our measures, but also prevented us from making use of our Representatives, that we might not have the shadow of a Legislature to support us; and even in those Provinces where his power has not extended so far, he has constantly gone as far as he could. This is not all yet; for in many they have corrupted the ignorant and illiterate by bribes, set up the Royal standard against us, and obliged us to fight under every disadvantage. Is it not so, Cato?

There is, therefore, a capital defect in our chartered Constitutions; a defect which makes an essential difference between the present state of our liberties and that secured to Englishmen by Magna Charta; a defect which, if not effectually removed, will oblige us ever to hold our liberties at the point of our swords, or by that most precarious of all tenures—will and pleasure. The immortal Barons were too wise to be duped by fair promises. They drew their swords, determined to obtain absolute security; and they did obtain it. They obtained, by Magna Charta, the constitutional right of levying war against the King as often as he should attempt to infringe upon the liberties of the people. Were our Governours the choice of the people, and dependant on them for their salaries, we would, in the present case, be able to make a constitutional resistance to oppression—to oppose Constitution to Constitution. But this not being the case, the Parliament has plainly the advantage. It is necessary, therefore, to our security to have our Governours as much dependant on the people of America as the King is on those of Great Britain, before our Constitutions can be of any service to us against British encroachments; or that, when our Governours refuse their concurrence, our Representatives shall have the privilege of setting them aside, and acting legislatively without them. This is a clause as essential to the security of America as the clause which grants to the people of Great Britain the right of declaring war against the King when he attempts to disturb their privileges. Will Cato stand it out till this is obtained?

But as the contest is between us and the Parliament, we ought now to inquire how we can be secured against Parliamentary encroachments? The Constitution of Great Britain is such, that what this Parliament does, the next can undo. And it is impossible for one Parliament to pass a bill which will not be liable to a repeal by any future one, without destroying the very essence of its own Constitution. Is there any remedy against this defect, Cato? Let us see the constitutional dependant principles, if you are a friend to liberty, which will give absolute and permanent security to our liberties, and not leave us at the mercy of our enemy; and then we will talk further on the subject. We have gone too far, and have too much sense to rest our future safety on the probability of her letting us alone for the future.

Our constitutional connection with Great Britain is the very plea alleged by Great Britain for her attempts to enslave us. Now, if this Constitution is the very foundation of her claims; if she, in consequence thereof, had declared us Rebels, which she could not, unless she supposed we violated the Constitution by our resistance; and if it was not in our power to make effectual opposition, in strict conformity to the Constitutions she gave us, why is Cato so fond of reconciling us on these principles, and on no other? This looks not like honesty, Cato. If you love America, and if your attachment to the cause is real, answer to these things. A lover of truth and liberty will be afraid of no queries whatever. You say you have viewed the ground on which you stand, and are not afraid to tread it in the sight of the most vigilant son of liberty. Here it is. Come forth, then; here I wish to find you. But, I beseech you, examine it thoroughly first; explore its hidden recesses; for I am well assured it contains a secret mine, which, if once sprung, will either blow up you and your party, or our liberties.

This Continent has had a twelve years' constant experience that the Constitution of the Colonies could not protect them from British oppression. Can you deny it, Cato? However it be against your present designs, yet this you must acknowledge. Can you tell the first day a Committee existed on this Continent? Did not that day tell the world we had no Constitution that could withstand British oppression? Can you remember the time our Assemblies were first dissolved for attempting to correspond with one another on the subject of our grievances? Did not that time convince even Cato himself that our Constitutions were not equal to the task of protecting themselves? Do you recollect the hour our worthy Governour refused to call our Assembly to consult on ways and means to preserve our liberties? Did not that hour inform you that the chartered Constitution of Pennsylvania could do nothing for us? Now, if after so long and so severe a trial of their defects, we should still take up with them on the recommendation of Cato, might not the world, particularly that part of it which you say is looking at us, laugh at our stupidity and folly?

Your first argument in support of your creed is, that "Agriculture and commerce have hitherto been the happy employments by which these Middle Colonies have risen into wealth and importance. By them the face of the country has been changed from a barren wilderness into the hospitable abodes of peace and plenty." I forbear to point out your constant endeavour to separate the interest of the Middle Colonies from the rest, as if the wealth of the whole arose not from the same sources; or as if your description of one or two would not answer for all. I also forbear to mention the care of your party to have your letters, though addressed to the People of Pennsylvania, reprinted in New-York and Maryland papers. When you have gone through the demonstration, how we can have effectual security to our liberties under so defective Constitutions, then, and not till then, I shall call upon you to prove that agriculture and commerce would decay, if the whole world were our market instead of the British Islands, and a few foreign ports to which we are most graciously permitted to export a few articles. I will also call on you to convince us that a severe restraint on our trade in many instances, and in some a total prohibition, tends to enrich us. And here it may not be amiss to show how poor the Hollanders have grown since they became independent, and were obliged to support all the expenses the Common Man has mentioned.

But Cato has given uncommon proofs of his attachment to trade, by declaring that he will arm against us as soon as we form any alliance with such powers as are able and willing to draw off the British fleets from blocking up our ports. Our ports are now effectually shut by the fleets of Great Britain, and there is a total stop put to our exports. We have not yet a fleet which can open them. Our grain is spoiling, and the powers of Europe longing for an opportunity of taking it off our hands. All this can be removed by the alliance proposed. But Cato sees this would eternally frustrate the designs of his party. He has therefore laboured, by every artifice of cunning, to prevent our taking any step of the kind. He hopes the country will, by this means, be brought to submit, and he will triumph in our folly. But where is the real danger to our liberties, Cato, in accepting the assistance of our neighbouring fleet until we have time to fit out one for the purpose? Were we to do this, would not agriculture and commerce flourish as usual?

"That much of our former felicity was owing to the protection of England, is not to be denied; and that we might still derive greater advantages from her protection and friendship, if not valued at too high a price, is equally certain," says Cato. I could pardon a few Israelitish murmurings and hankerings for the onions of Egypt; but to be incessantly called back to what we enjoyed while Joseph lived, when behold a Pharaoh now reigns who knew him not, is insult not to be endured. Cato cannot pretend ignorance of the price of the friendship he so strongly urges us to court. If he does, he is certainly a very dangerous guide for the good people to whom his letters are addressed. Cassandra affirms that the price is no less than an absolute surrender of all our rights, liberties, and property; and these once given up, he would gladly be informed what more is left for any power to invade. All animals, under absolute domination, are nursed only to be fleeced. However problematical may be the question of nursing the Colonies, we have had the fleecing demonstrated with a vengeance.

Cato adds: "If the present differences can be accommodated, there is scarce a probability that she will ever renew the late fatal system of policy, or attempt to employ force against us." Two reasons induce me to think the mode of attack would indeed be altered; for, obstinate as the author of our oppression is, he cannot longer flatter himself of our falling an easy prey to his force, if now incessantly continued. His clemency would then certainly dispose him most graciously to enslave us by his experienced and much more successful method of intrigue. But as Cato allows it is not altogether improbable that his force may be employed against us in some future day, Cassandra would gladly be informed by what means we can be secured from that force, when, by the treaty of protection, we are cut off from the right of establishing a force of our own.

Conscious that this poor contrivance is prodigious stale, a thousand times repeated, and as often refuted by most stubborn arguments, founded on twelve years' invariable procedure, and really despairing to hold the people long in expectation of "former protection," or any more than a mere delusive change of the mode of attack, and that change as ill disguised as any that have preceded it, Cato adds, (as if all were one connected proposition,) "If they will not make up on constitutional principles, we have arms in our hands, and virtue enough to use them." As to corruption, Cato would have us believe there is hardly a man on the Continent in danger from that quarter. Would to God we had abundant evidence of this universal integrity. Respecting the arms, Cato, with much devotion I praise the Director of human affairs that we have them in our hands; and I pray and confide in His overruling providence, that we may there keep them till our rights are placed on a firmer foundation than the mere grace of a conniver at the destruction of millions on one side the globe, and contriver of the devastations now daily committing on the other. Well might Cato tell us of our arms, for he clearly foresaw that no wise man could conceive himself safe in reconciliation on his principles, without holding them in his hands continually.

This paragraph, after flourishing away on the original ground of the contest, concludes: "And if, hereafter, in fullness of time, it should be thought necessary to separate from the land that gave birth to our ancestors, it will be in our perfect state of manhood, when we can wield our arms, and protect our commerce and coasts by our own fleets, without looking to any nation on earth for assistance." Well said, Cato. Here we agree for once. But now that we are on good terms with each other, let me ask you, in a friendly manner, how we are to become masters of this fine fleet? Does Cato propose to insist upon it, as a term of constitutional reconciliation with the Ambassadors, that we shall be allowed to build such a fleet? Or does he conceive that when we arrive at just twenty-one years of age, and about to commence as house-keepers, our dear mother country will make us a present of such a fleet to set up with? I confess myself greatly incredulous of either. If Cato can clear up my doubts on these important heads, I will be much obliged to him.

"It has been asserted," says Cato, "that we are able, with our land forces, to defend ourselves against the whole world; that if commerce be an advantage, we may command what foreign alliance we please; that the moment we declare ourselves an independent people, there are nations ready to face the British thunder, and become carriers of our commodities to enrich themselves; and if this were not the case, we can soon build navies to force and protect a trade," &c. Of this, Cato here intimates his suspicion, "because," says he, "it is not fully proved." Cassandra will prove the first assertion from unquestionable authority, for Cato, in his fourth letter, says: "I will even go beyond him in expressing my good opinion of our situation. He thinks foreign assistance necessary to us. I think otherwise. We are able to defend our own rights, and to frustrate the attempt of any nation upon earth to govern us by force." Cassandra hopes, in a short time, to prove every assertion of Common Sense from the same authority. He wishes every position of Cato was equally consistent with Common Sense.

CASSANDRA.

P. S. As the Common Man has called us to a fair discussion of the point, we once for all request every printer on the Continent, who publishes Cato's Letters, to publish our replies, and particularly Mr. Sowers, of Germantown, that the subject may not only have a full diffusion, but a fair hearing.

NATHANIEL MILLS AND OTHERS TO NEW-YORK PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

Jamaica, Long-Island, April 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We, the subscribers, inhabitants of the Township of Jamaica, in Queen's County, on Long-Island, beg leave to acquaint you that we have heretofore been disarmed by order of the Continental Congress, which we peaceably and quietly submitted to, as not having it in our intention to act contrary to their resolves, or the resolves of your Congress. Notwithstanding which, we have lately been plundered of our cattle and effects, which have been publicly sold at vendue for half their value, in consequence of an order issued by Captain Ephraim Bailey, in this township, for not appearing in arms, and answering to our names, when it is well known we have been deprived of our arms, and thereby disqualified for any such service. Besides which, it appears to us quite contrary to a late resolve of the Continental Congress.

We therefore, gentlemen, request it as a favour that you will be pleased to take this matter into your serious consideration, and, if the treatment we have received does not proceed from any order or direction of yours, that you will be pleased to give us such relief as you may think necessary; in which, gentlemen, you will oblige your respectful, humble servants,

NATHANIEL MILLS,	JOHN RAMSON,
JABEZ WOODRUFF,	JACOB DEAN,
JOSHUA MILLS,	DIRCK <sup>his</sup> BARGIN,
JOHN LAMBERSON,	<sup>mark</sup>
NICHOLAS LUDLAM,	PETER MILLS,
JOSEPH OLDFIELD,	ABRAHAM COLYER.
SAMUEL MILLS,

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress, in New-York.

EGBERT BENSON TO DELEGATES FROM DUTCHESS COUNTY.

Rhinebeck Precinct, April 13, 1776.

SIR: The Committee in this Precinct have lately committed Mordecai Lester, Esq., and a certain Frederick Klein, to the Jail in Kingston, as the peace and security of the Precinct rendered the confinement of these persons absolutely necessary.

The Committee of that place, at the time of the commitment of Mr. Doughty, a few months since, declared their readiness to receive our prisoners, but expected we would make provision for their support. In consequence of this, we requested that not only with respect to Mr. Doughty, but any other prisoners we might send them, they would provide for them at the cheapest rate; and the members of this Committee, as individuals, engaged for the payment of it.

As we have no publick moneys, nor any authority to raise them, we shall, without the interposition of Congress, be obliged to defray this expense out of our own pockets. I am therefore directed by the Committee to write to you respecting this matter, with a request to use your endeavours that means may be devised for making the maintenance of these prisoners a publick charge, and that we may no longer remain liable in our private capacities.

Several persons are now in Jail at Kingston, and provided for by order of Congress. We therefore take the liberty of suggesting, as an expedient, that the Committee there may be directed to extend the order to our prisoners. Lester and Doughty possibly can, but Klein certainly cannot support himself. The Committee may therefore also be directed not to furnish the two former with necessaries, if it should appear that they have estates sufficient for their own subsistence.

When Mr. Doughty was taken into custody, we wrote a similar letter, respecting him, to Congress, and have never received an answer. I must therefore entreat an answer to this, because unless Congress should determine to make provision for supporting our prisoners, we shall be reduced to the necessity of discharging them.

We conceive it will not be expected we should stipulate to defray the expense of this business, or advance moneys for the purpose, without a prospect of being reimbursed. We do not, however, suppose this will be the case, especially as it may with such ease be charged upon the publick fund; and have no doubt but proper steps will be taken to release us from our engagements to the Kingston Committee.

We have not informed you of the particular instances of misconduct charged against these delinquents. However, the Committee is ready, upon the least intimation, to furnish such proofs and reasons as we trust will fully justify our conduct. And we have the satisfaction to find that not only the County in general, but even some that are disaffected, approve of the imprisonment of these persons, and that it is the only means of preserving peace in the Precinct. I remain your very humble servant.

By order of the Precinct Committee:

EGBERT BENSON, Chairman.

To the Gentlemen attending from Dutchess County, as Members in the Committee of Safety.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO DOCTOR FRANKLIN.

Fort George, April 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The lake is open in so many places that I am of opinion you may set out for this place as early as you can. I have received some despatches from Canada, which I enclose you, and by which you will see the necessity of sending a large reinforcement. Please to bring up with you the papers I enclose, as I have no copies of them.

The bearer goes express to Congress and to General Washington.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Dr. Franklin.

DOCTOR FRANKLIN TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 22, 1776.]

Saratoga, April 13, 1776.

SIR: We have been here some days, waiting for General Schuyler's orders to proceed, which we have just received, and shall accordingly leave this place to-morrow; though by the advices from Canada, communicated by him to us, and (as we suppose) sent forward to you, I am afraid we shall be able to effect but little there. We had a heavy snow here yesterday, and the waters are so out as to make travelling difficult by land, and there is a strong fresh in the river against the boats, but we shall endeavour to get on as well as we can. We join in respects to the Congress, and to yourself in particular.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

B. FRANKLIN.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

THEODORE STAUNTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Norwich, April 13, 1776.

SIR: Captain William Wilbur, of Groton, has intimated to me his willingness of serving on board the galley in the character of a master; by what I have heard of his character, and some personal acquaintance, I think him as suitable a person (if your Honour thinks fit to appoint him) as any that is likely to be procured.

I am your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

THEODORE STAUNTON.

To his Honour the Governour.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Baltimore, April 14, 1776—ten o'clock, P. M.

HONOURABLE SIR: The enclosed copies of letters were just now received by our Committee, by express, from the Council of Safety of Virginia, with a desire that they might be forwarded to you instantly; indeed, the intelligence they contain we think of too much importance to have been delayed a moment. In consequence whereof, we have prevailed on our commanding officer here to appoint Mr. David Phunket, a Lieutenant, in whose prudence and industry we can rely, to wait on you with this; and if your honourable body should think it necessary to take any steps, or give any instructions to the Council of Safety on the occasion, he will wait your commands.

We have the honour to be, with greatest respect, honourable sir, your most obedient servants,

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JUN.,	BENJ. NICHOLSON,
Chairman .	WM. BUCHANAN,
WILLIAM LUX,	JOHN SMITH,
Vice Chairman .	JOHN BOYD,
JAMES CALHOUN,	JOHN STERETT.
THOMAS HARRISON,

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress, at Philadelphia.

Williamsburgh, April 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We could not suffer a moment to pass before we transmitted the enclosed copies of intercepted letters, addressed by the Secretary of State to the Governour of your Province, which opens the schemes of Administration to us in a more explicit manner than any other intelligence we have been able to procure. We wish you to transmit copies of these letters to Congress without delay.

I am, for and by order of the Committee of Safety of Virginia, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN PAGE, Vice President.

To the Committee of Baltimore, Maryland.

N. B. A certain Mr. Alexander Ross, who was refused a permission by this Committee, has been on board Lord Dunmore's ship, and was the person intrusted with the care of the enclosed letters. He has escaped from us; but, as we think him inimical to the American cause, he ought to be apprehended.

J. P., V. P.

Whitehall, December 23, 1775.

SIR: The King being determined, in concurrence with his Parliament, to pursue the most vigorous measures for reducing his rebellious subjects in North-America to obedience, and for restoring legal Government, has given the Royal assent to the enclosed act, which I am commanded by his Majesty to transmit to you; and, at the same time, to signify to you his Majesty's pleasure that you do exhort all persons, upon whom the execution of this law shall depend, to pay a due attention thereto, and to use their best endeavours for carrying the provisions of it into effect; and I trust when his Majesty's deluded subjects in the Associated Colonies are better apprized of the fatal consequences of the conduct they have adopted, and see the determined spirit of the nation to maintain its constitutional rights, they will avail themselves of the means which the justice and benevolence of the supreme Legislature have held out to them of being restored to the King's grace and peace, and that a happy and lasting reconciliation and union will be effected. And I have the satisfaction to acquaint you that, in order to accelerate this desirable object, the proper steps have been taken for passing a commission under the great seal, in conformity to the last section but one of that act; and that the Commissioner, or Commissioners, to be appointed for that purpose, will have full power to inquire into the state and condition of the Colonies, and to confer with proper persons upon such points as may be necessary for effecting a restoration of the publick tranquillity.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE GERMAINE.

To Deputy Governour Eden.

The clause in the Act of Parliament, passed the 19th of DECEMBER last, which ascertains the powers of the Commissioners, is in these words:

"Provided, that in order to encourage all well-affected persons in any of the said Colonies to exert themselves in suppressing the Rebellion therein, and to afford a speedy protection to those who are disposed to return to their duty, it shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons, appointed and authorized by his Majesty, to grant a pardon or pardons to any number or description of persons, with such exceptions therefrom as shall seem fit and reasonable, by Proclamation in his Majesty's name; to declare any Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, or any County, Town, Port, District, or place, in any Colony or Province, to be at the peace of his Majesty; and from and after the issuing of any such Proclamation in any of the aforesaid Colonies or Provinces, or if his Majesty shall be graciously pleased to signify the same by his Royal Proclamation, then, from and after the issuing of such Proclamation, this act, with respect to such Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, County, Town, or Port, District, or place, shall cease, determine, and be utterly void; and if any captures shall be made after the date and issuing of such Proclamation, or any ships or vessels, and their cargoes, belonging to the inhabitants of any such Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, County, Town, or Port, District, or place, or if any ships trading to or from such Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, respectively, the same shall be restored to the owners of such ships or vessels, upon claim being entered, and due proof made of their property therein; and the captors shall not be liable to any actions for seizing or detaining the said ships or vessels, or their cargoes, without proof being made that they had actual notice of such Proclamation having been issued."

Whitehall, December 23, 1775.

SIR: It was not till the 27th of November that your despatch to Lord Dartmouth, of the 27th of August, was received here, when I had the honour of laying it before the King; and I have it in command from his Majesty to express to you his Majesty's approbation of your zeal for the publick service, and of the unalterable attachment you have shown to his person and Government from the first commencement of the unhappy disputes which have involved his Majesty's faithful servants in the Colonies in difficulties and distress, that are only to be equalled by the fortitude with which they are borne.

Your letter contains a great deal of very useful information, and your confidential communication of the characters of individuals, more especially of such as come over into England, is of great advantage; and you may rest assured that every possible precaution will be used that no part of your letter shall transpire.

An armament, consisting of seven regiments, with a fleet of frigates and small ships, is now in readiness to proceed to the Southern Colonies, in order to attempt the restoration of legal Government in that part of America. It will proceed, in the first place, to North-Carolina, and from thence either to South-Carolina or Virginia, as circumstances of greater or less advantage shall point out; if to the latter, it may have very important consequences to the Colony under your Government; and, therefore, you will do well to consider of every means by which you may, in conjunction with Lord Dunmore, give facility and assistance to its operations.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE GERMAINE.

To Deputy Governour Eden.

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JUN., TO THE BALTIMORE DEPUTATION, AT ANNAPOLIS.

Baltimore, April 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Captain James Nicholson having returned yesterday evening with his tender, we have despatched her to Annapolis, under the command of Lieutenant Nicholson and Captain Samuel Smith, with a number of picked men well armed, to be at your and the Council's command, in case the Governour should have escaped before you get down. As this boat can both row and sail, we judged her much better fitted for the pursuit than any vessel that could be found at Annapolis; and we are of opinion that it may still be possible to overtake the Governour before he may leave Colonel Fitzhugh's, where, it is possible, he may call. Captain Smith has directions to use every precaution that no alarm may be given by the boat's going down, and we confide in his prudent management of the matter. In case there is no occasion for his service, the vessel can instantly return back. This measure has been determined on by General Buchanan, Mr. Lux, William Buchanan, Doctor Boyd, Mr. Harrison, and myself; but they being now all gone to dinner, cannot find them to sign this.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JUN.

CAPTAIN NICHOLSON'S ORDERS TO LIEUT. NICHOLSON.

SIR: You are immediately to proceed, with the Defence's tender, off the harbour of Annapolis, and there to land Captain Smith. While he is ashore, you are to stand off and on the harbour, and examine every boat that comes out of Annapolis, or thereabouts, (taking care to distress no boat unnecessarily;) and if you find Governour Eden and Secretary Smith, or either of them, you are to make them prisoners. If Captain Smith has orders to deliver them to the Council of Safety, you will, in that case, deliver them up to him for that purpose; if not, bring them on board the Defence. If, upon Captain Smith's return, you find they are not at Annapolis, you are then to proceed down to Colonel Fitzhugh's, and assist Captain Smith, if necessary, in examining the Colonel's house and in making them prisoners. Provided they are not to be found in either place, and you have reason to think you can overtake them in standing farther down the bay, in that case you will proceed as far as prudence will direct you. You must be particularly careful in your watch while off Annapolis. Take care to consult Captain Smith in all cases.

Given from under my hand, this 14th April, 1776, at Fell's Point, Baltimore.

JAMES NICHOLSON.

To Mr. John Nicholson, Lieutenant of the Ship Defence.

N. B. If you find Mr. Ross, you will likewise make him prisoner.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL SMALLWOOD. [No. 118.]

Annapolis, April 14, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby requested to send a commissioned officer to apprehend Alexander Ross, of this Province, on suspicion of his having been instrumental in communicating intelligence to Lord Dunmore and other persons inimical to this Province and to the cause of America, and to bring him, with all convenient speed, before the Council of Safety. The officer you send will probably find him in the neighbourhood of Queenstown, in Queen Anne's County; and for so doing this shall be your justification.

Witness our hands, this 14th day of April, Anno Domini 1776.

To Colonel William Smallwood.

N. B. The officer is to command what assistance he may want after he gets to the Eastern-Shore.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THOMAS SMYTH.

[No. 119.]

Annapolis, April 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Very urgent affairs of the Province require your attendance in Council. We therefore request you will immediately join us at Annapolis.

We are, &c.

To Thomas Smyth and T. B. Hands, Esquires.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM JOHN ADAMS, DATED PHILADELPHIA, APRIL 14, 1776.

You justly complain of my short letters; but the critical state of things, and the multiplicity of avocations, must plead my excuse. You ask where the fleet is? The enclosed papers will inform you. You ask what sort of defence Virginia can make? I believe they will make an able defence. Their Militia and Minute-men have been some time employed in training themselves, and they have nine battalions of Regulars (as they call them) maintained among them, under good officers, at the Continental expense. They have set up a number of manufactories for fire-arms, which are busily employed. They are tolerably supplied with powder, and are successful and assiduous in making saltpetre. Their neighbouring sister, or rather daughter Colony of North-Carolina, which is a warlike Colony, and has several battalions at the Continental expense, as well as a pretty good Militia, are ready to assist them, and they are in very good spirits, and seem determined to make a brave resistance. The gentry are very rich, and the common people very poor. This inequality of property gives an aristocratical turn to all their proceedings, and occasions a strong aversion in their patricians to Common Sense. But the spirit of these Barons is coming down, and it must submit. It is very true, as you observe, they have been duped by Dummore. But this is a common case. All the Colonies are duped, more or less, at one time and another. A more egregious bubble was never blown up than the story of Commissioners coming to treat with the Congress; yet it has gained credit like a charm, not only with, but against, the clearest evidence. I never shall forget the delusion which seized our best and most sagacious friends, the dear inhabitants of Boston, the winter before last. Credulity and the want of foresight are imperfections in the human character, that no politician can sufficiently guard against.

You give me some pleasure by your account of a certain house in Queen-street. I had burned it long ago in imagination. It rises now to my view like a phoenix. What shall I say of the Solicitor-General? I pity his pretty children; I pity his father and his sisters. I wish I could be clear that it is no moral evil to pity him and his lady. Upon repentance, they will certainly have a large share in the compassions of many. But let us take warning, and give it to our children. Whenever vanity and gayety, a love of pomp and dress, furniture, equipage, buildings, great company, expensive diversions, and elegant entertainments, get the better of the principles and judgments of men or women, there is no knowing where they will stop, nor into what evils, natural, moral, or political, they will lead us. Your description of your own gaieté de cœur charms me. Thanks be to God, you have just cause to rejoice; and may the bright prospect be obscured by no cloud. As to declarations of independency, be patient. Read our privateering laws and our commercial laws. What signifies a word?

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO ADMIRAL HOPKINS.

New-York, April 14, 1776.

SIR: I have just received information that the Nautilus sloop-of-war is arrived here from Newport, said to be sent express from thence for the Asia, Phenix, and Savage, and that they are intended for New-London, in order to block up your squadron in that harbour. I thought it my duty to give you notice of this by express, that you might take your measures accordingly. The Phenix, Savage, and Nautilus, sailed this morning. The Asia still remains in the harbour.

I should be much obliged to you if you would forward the cannon and stores I left a list with you for, as soon as possible; and as the men-of-war are now out, I should be extremely glad if you would keep a good look-out, to see that the coast is clear before any more of the Continental Troops embark from New-London.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Admiral Eseck Hopkins.

LIEUTENANT JONES TO JOSEPH HEWES.

Alfred, New-London Harbour, April 14, 1776.

SIR: When, agreeable to your request, I undertook to write you an account of our proceedings in the fleet, I did not imagine that I should have been so stinted in point of time. I owed you a much earlier account; but since our arrival here, the repairs and business of the ship have required my constant attention. I will endeavour to be more punctual hereafter; in the meanwhile, hope you will excuse this omission till I can account for it personally. I pass over what was prior to our arrival at the Capes of Delaware, where we were met by the Hornet sloop, and Wasp schooner, from Maryland.

On the 17th of February, the fleet put to sea with a smart northeast wind. In the night of the 19th, (the gale having increased,) we lost company with the Hornet, and Fly tender. We continued steering to the southward, without seeing a single sail, or meeting with anything remarkable, till the 1st of March, when we anchored at Abaco, one of the Bahama Islands, having previously brought to a couple of New-Providence sloops, to take pilots out of them. By these people we were informed that there was a large quantity of powder, with a number of cannon, in the two forts of New-Providence. In consequence of this intelligence, the Marines and Landsmen, to the number of three hundred and upwards, under the command of Captain Nicholas, were embarked in the two sloops. It was determined that they should keep below deck until the sloops were got in close to the fort, and they were then to land instantly, and take possession before the Island could be alarmed. This, however, was rendered abortive, as the forts fired an alarm on the approach of our fleet. We then ran in, and anchored at a small key three leagues to windward of the town, and from thence the Commodore despatched the Marines, with the sloop Providence and schooner Wasp, to cover their landing. They landed without opposition, and soon took possession of the eastern garrison, (Fort Montague), which, after firing a few shot, the Islanders abandoned. The next morning the Marines marched for the town and were met by a messenger from the Governour, who told Captain Nicholas that "the western garrison (Fort Nassau) was ready for his reception, and that he might march his force in as soon as he pleased." This was effected without firing a gun on our side; but the Governour had sent off one hundred and fifty barrels of powder the night before.

Enclosed you have an inventory of the cannon, stores, &c., which we took possession of, and brought off in the fleet. We continued at New-Providence till the 17th ultimo, and then brought off the Governour and two more gentlemen prisoners. Our course was now directed back for the Continent, and, after meeting with much bad weather, on the 5th instant, off Block-Island, we took the Hawke schooner, of six guns, one of Captain Wallace's tenders, and the bomb-brig Bolton, of eight guns and two howitzers. The next morning we fell in with the Glasgow man-of-war, and a hot engagement ensued, the particulars of which I cannot communicate better than by extracting the minutes which I entered on the Alfred's log-book.

"At two A. M., cleared ship for action. At half past two, the Cabot, being between us and the enemy, began to engage, and soon after we did the same. At third glass the enemy bore away, and by crowding all sail, at length got a considerable way ahead, made signals for the rest of the English fleet, at Rhode-Island, to come to her assistance, and steered directly for the harbour. The Commodore then thought it imprudent to risk the prizes, &c., by pursuing farther; therefore, to prevent our being decoyed into their hands, at half past six made the signal to leave off chase, and haul by the wind to join our prizes. The Cabot was disabled at the second broadside, the Captain being dangerously wounded, the Master and several men killed. The enemy's whole fire was then directed at us, and an unlucky shot having carried away our wheel-block and ropes, the ship broached to, and gave the enemy an opportunity of raking us with several broadsides, before we were again in condition to steer the ship, and return the fire. In the action we received several shot under water, which made the ship very leaky; we had besides, the mainmast shot through, and the upper works and rigging very considerably damaged; yet it is surprising that we lost only the Second Lieutenant of Marines and four men, one of whom, (Martin Gillingwater), a Midshipman, prisoner, was in the cock-pit, and had been taken in the bomb-brig Bolton yesterday. We had no more than three men dangerously, and four slightly, wounded."

I have the pleasure of assuring you that the Commander-in-Chief is respected through the fleet, and I verily believe that the officers and men, in general, would go any length to execute his orders. It is with pain that I confine this plaudit to an individual; I should be happy in extending it to every Captain and officer in the service. Praise is certainly due to some; but, alas, there are exceptions.

It is certainly for the interest of the service that a cordial interchange of civilities should subsist between superior and inferior officers; and, therefore, it is bad policy in superiors to behave towards their inferiors, indiscriminately, as though they were of a lower species. Men of liberal minds, who have been long accustomed to command, can ill brook being thus set at nought by others, who pretend to claim the monopoly of sense. The rude, ungentle treatment which they experience, creates such heart-burnings as are nowise consonant with that cheerful ardour and spirit which ought ever to be the characteristic of an officer; and, therefore, whoever thinks himself hearty in the service, is widely mistaken when he adopts such a line of conduct in order to prove it; for to be well obeyed, it is necessary to be esteemed.

The fleet having been reinforced with two hundred men lent from the Army, is now in condition for another enterprise, and we expect to embrace the first wind for Rhode-Island, where I hope we shall meet with better success, as we understand that the Scarborough is now there. It is proposed to clean the ships at Providence, so that our detention there will admit of a return of letters from Philadelphia.

Meantime, with a grateful sense of past favours, I have the honour to be, with much esteem, sir, your very obliged, most humble servant,

JOHN PAUL JONES.

To the Honourable Joseph Hewes, Philadelphia.

MAJOR FRAZER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read May 7, 1776.]

Boston, April 14, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: I have taken the liberty to enclose you copies of the lists of vessels, and ordnance, and ordnance stores, left by our enemy in this town, all of which I have properly secured since they evacuated it. A more particular account of the cargoes found in the vessels, with an account of all other King's stores, I will forward as soon as I can ascertain the amount of each article. I was ordered in here by the Quartermaster-General the same day the enemy left the town, in order to take an account, and secure all King's stores; which I have been constantly employed about ever since, and hope to finish in about two weeks, when I shall render an account of the whole of my proceedings to Colonel Mifflin, Quartermaster-General. The amount of King's stores alone will, I am sure, be worth upwards of fifty thousand pounds sterling, besides a number of cables and anchors taken up out of the harbour, in three or four fathom of water. The anchors weigh from thirty-five hundred down to five hundred; some very large cables almost new. The value of these two articles, that I have already got, is computed, by good judges, to be worth three thousand pounds sterling. I have only had twelve hands employed in this work two weeks; they are men that I hired belonging to the town, who are very well acquainted with the harbour. I hope, in two weeks more, to clear the harbour, and get out a number more of anchors and cables, &c. The men expect to be allowed salvage, besides their pay, for every thing taken beyond low-water mark, as well as for the cargoes of salt, which would all have been lost had we not used the greatest industry to have got it out, as the vessels were all left scuttled. Your Honours will judge whether this demand is reasonable, and please to let me know your determination. If you think any extraordinary trouble is worth any more than my pay as Assistant Quartermaster-General, you will please to make me what allowance you think proper. His Excellency has been pleased to give me a Majority in the Sixth Regiment of Foot, which I shall join as soon as I finish the above business, which I am ordered to do; and I am, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN G. FRAZER,

Assistant Quartermaster-General.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. The Quartermaster-General has fixed upon Jonathan Williams, Esq., of Boston, as agent to dispose of all stores found here, except what we want for our Army. He has already sold, to a large amount, horses, wheat, flour, &c.

MAJOR FRAZER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, April 14, 1776.

SIR: I now enclose you a more particular account of the vessels left by the enemy at Boston; also, an inventory of the ordnance and ordnance stores. I have not included those that are at Castle-Island, because General Ward informs me that the Province claims the whole of them.

We have found, within this week, anchors and cables worth at least three thousand pounds sterling; they weigh from thirty-five hundred weight down to five hundred weight, (meaning the anchors,) taken out in three or four fathom water, at low tide. I hope the Continental Congress will allow us salvage upon these, as well as other things which we have secured. I have had only twelve men employed constantly in clearing the docks, &c., who do not belong to the Army.

On Thursday last, the people at Cohasset, observing a brig coming up the bay, armed themselves, and manned three or four whale-boats, went off, and, finding her to be a merchantman, boarded and took her. She was from the West-Indies, laden with rum and sugar; rum, three hundred hogsheads, for General Howe's Army, which they expected to find here.

On Friday morning last, ran away from the Renown, ship-of-war, now lying in Nantasket-Road, eight British seamen that belonged to her, who brought off the cutter, and landed at Point-Shirley, and are now in this town.

Commodore Manly's crew, that he took in the last rich prize, are in close prison in this town. Mr. Jackson, Mr. Brush, and three others, were examined by the General Court, who were all committed to prison yesterday, Brush in irons.

I expect to settle all my accounts, and finish all matters in my late department, this week; and I shall be much obliged to you to give me leave to come to New-York, to have a final settlement with Colonel Mifflin, and deliver up the books, &c. Mr. James Gray, who did the business in my department before my appointment, has lived with me ever since, and I think he is the most proper person to succeed me now, as he is very capable, and understands the nature of the business very well; and I hope your Excellency will be pleased to appoint him, which will infinitely oblige me, as he will be left entirely without business when I give up the place; and he has been in the American Army as long as any in it. Colonel Mifflin knows him very well, and has a very good opinion of him.

Major Parke tells me he proposes to set out for New-York on Wednesday next. If he does, he will leave a vast number of accounts unsettled, and other affairs unfinished.

The General Court of this Province want some of the barracks upon Winter-Hill, to cover one thousand men, which are to be raised immediately, and stationed at Noddle's Island.

I hope your Excellency and lady had a pleasant journey to New-York; and am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN G. FRAZER.

To General Washington.

JOHN G. FRAZER,
Assistant Quartermaster-General.

Boston, April 14, 1776.

LETTER AND PETITION FROM NOVA-SCOTIA TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

[Enclosed in General Washington's Letter to Congress, dated March 27, 1776.]

Cumberland, Nova-Scotia, February 8, 1776.

SIR: You may reasonably imagine that it is presumptuous in me to take such liberty in writing to your Excellency; still, its going from one whose principles are actuated from the genuine feelings of liberty, and an indelible anxiety for the happiness of his country, animates an assurance that it will meet rather with a feeling of sympathy than censure; more particularly as it is addressed to you, sir, who is at the head of that Army which is opposing the mandates of a corrupt and despotick Ministry, whose views and intent can be founded upon no other principles than to bring the subjects of Britain to as abject slavery as the subjects of the most arbitrary Eastern monarchy. Sensible I am of the importance of this proceeding, my inability of performing anything in this great struggle, and the danger I expose myself and family to in being treated with that accumulated vengeance used by such men, who are actuated by publick, as well as private prejudices; still, my fear and dread is yet more when I consider the state of my country, that, by lying passive, I expose myself and posterity to be bound in chains of slavery and wretchedness, and not only that, but have that infamous epithet entailed upon them, of being like those sluggish and slothful wretches, as represented of the tribe of Issachar. You will, therefore, pardon this impudence of mine.

The great contest between Britain and America has hitherto been only treated with speculation amongst us. A spirit of sympathy, I presume, for our brethren on the Continent, reigns in the breasts of the generality of the inhabitants. With gladness and cheerfulness would we be active in the glorious struggle, had our situation and circumstances been any way such that there was the least glimpse of success; but our remoteness from the other Colonies, and our form of Government, joined with the indigent circumstances of the inhabitants, render it in a manner impossible, without succour from some other quarter.

Time not permitting, and my mind impressed with accumulated troubles for our situation, nor is it necessary, for the present intention, to give a detail of the different proceedings and managements of Government; so much will suffice, to give your Excellency an idea of the rise of our impending calamity, if Providence does not stir up some means to prevent it.

The generality of the Province, as I before mentioned, sympathize with the Colonies. The least encouragement or opportunity would have excited the people to join in the defence of the liberty of America, always rejoicing when they heard any flying report that an invasion was intended. A necessity there was that the rulers in Government should use every means and method to prevent giving uneasiness to the people, if they had a mind to preserve peace. Yet, notwithstanding, the men at the head of the Government, with their emissaries, following the example of their patrons, the Ministry, stimulated with an expectation of recommending themselves by showing their zealously for the prerogative, prompts on the Governour to some proclamations laying certain restraints on the people. Then, joining in associations, offering their lives and fortunes in the defence of the supremacy of the Parliament; and then, to complete the matter, advise the Governour to call the Assembly together at a time when the small-pox was raging at a great degree. Many of the country members could not attend on account of the distemper. A bill was passed for raising a regiment by ballot; and another for raising a tax to support them. The preamble to the latter was such, that, in my view, it carried the greatest implication of a declaration of war against the Colonies. This flagrant proof of the intention of these miscreants roused a spirit among the people, and publick declarations were made which before were not heard. Some were immediately for applying to your Excellency. Business was entirely stagnated. Nothing to be heard but war—this County in particular. The inhabitants being called to appear by the Commanding Officer of Militia, they complied with the order; and, when met, they all, to a man, charged the officers, on their peril, to draw a person. The inhabitants then agreed that an Address, Remonstrance, and Petition, be sent to the Governour, praying his suspending the execution of said acts, and to dissolve the House of Assembly, and call a new one to meet immediately. The Governour gave no other answer than ordering the officers of Militia and tax-gatherers to desist, for the present, the putting the acts into execution. On the receipt of this, the County of Cumberland again met, and resolved, almost unanimously, that it was no way satisfactory, and that it was only to delay time till a number of troops could be distributed through the different parts, as we had sufficient reason to imagine so by the preparation and other intelligences at Halifax. We have, therefore, again petitioned, pressing his Excellency the Governour to answer our former request, by dissolving the Assembly, and, for the first time, hinting to him our feeling for the commotions in the British Empire, &c. In this time some recruiting parties came among us, as also a person whom we have found to be a spy. These, with others who live among us whose principles are actuated by private prejudices, besides their enthusiasm for arbitrary authority, are making strong solicitations to have troops sent among us, the fear of which has occasioned much disorder and discontent among us. Many are afraid of speaking. There are, also, among us several families which lately came from England. They, in general, speak something in favour of Parliament, and are willing to submit to little taxes, as they have been accustomed to pay such heavy ones in their own country. These encourage the minions of Government. We can have no certainty how matters are passing. News is constantly propagated to the disadvantage of the Americans, and of the intentions and success of the other side, and that almost every foreign power intends assisting Britain. Sometimes we have a flying report that the Americans have allies to help them; but this is generally stifled. All these things keep us in a flutter. The straggling manner in which people have settled this new country makes it very difficult, and, in a manner, almost impossible for them to act either offensively or defensively. The people, in general, have great families, which will occasion a lamentable scene should British Troops arrive here before any succour comes from your Excellency. We would greatly rejoice could we be able to join with the other Colonies; but we must have other assistance before we can act publickly. I would observe to your Excellency, concerning the Acadians, I have dwelt among them near six-and-twenty years. I am well acquainted with their manners and ways. I have taken great pains in conversing with them concerning their commotions. They are, to a man, wholly inclined to the cause of America. I have often pitied them in their situation, and the manner of proceedings against them from time to time. I have made proposals to them, and promised, if ever in my power, to do my utmost for their relief, and to lay the state of their matter before the honourable the Continental Congress, not doubting but they would be relieved. By this opportunity, I have sent a young man belonging to themselves; he may be able to answer any questions your Excellency may want to know.

A Committee was chosen lately by the inhabitants to fall upon such methods as might be thought conducive for the publick safety. On their meeting two or three times, suspicion arose that they intended sending to the Continent; the news of which was sent immediately to Halifax. The Committee, perceiving these things, found they could not continue, as they subjected themselves to be made prisoners. They therefore agreed to lay aside the sending to New-England as a Committee; but if any should choose to do anything of themselves, they might. The bearer, Captain Jonathan Eddy, declared that he would immediately set off by land, and lay our situation before your Excellency. A number drew up a small incorrect address, to recommend him to your Excellency. He will, no doubt, fully prove that he is capable for the undertaking. I have also, at the same time, sent two Frenchmen, to return immediately from Machias, in order to know what we are to expect.

Your Excellency may see by this, with the other information you may receive, our situation. You have, no doubt, an unlimited power to help the distressed in this critical time. I trust and rely that this, joined with your own humane disposition, will excite your Excellency to give us assistance. Should your Excellency incline helping us, it would be necessary to take care how any troops come. My grand view in this is, to prevent the effusion of blood; for should it be known when they come, I imagine that a force would be sent to oppose. The present situation of the Province respecting force is very trifling; and the fear our great men are in concerning an invasion makes it more so. They have but about two hundred regular troops in Halifax, including a number of raw recruits from Newfoundland and other places. The Twenty-Seventh Regiment, lately arrived, is stationed in the naval yard, and there endeavouring to fortify round the town; but I think it is but trifling. We have this comfort, that, should no other troops arrive, they may not send up to molest us. Had we, at this present time, two or three hundred men, it would secure all that part of the Province between this and Halifax, and am convinced that that number would prevent five thousand from coming through the woods. Captain Eddy will make known to your Excellency the most suitable manner how to introduce troops. I am, it may be said, more particular in this, in order to serve some friends. One of my brothers is an officer in the regiment at Halifax. Galling as this is to me, and the feeling of anguish for this calamity, will nowise deter me in my pursuit for the welfare of the publick. Determined I am to prosecute the matter, if God should spare me, to establish those rights and privileges in this Province which should, by right, be enjoyed by every human being. But should your Excellency, with the honourable the Continental Congress, determine not to give any assistance, it must occasion the most direful and horrible consequences. Let me beseech your Excellency to help us. Give us an opportunity of joining with the other Colonies. It all depends upon your bounty.

I must once more plead for your forgiveness for this liberty I have taken, as, also, excuse the incorrectness of my writing. I have not time to copy. And further, must earnestly request your keeping this from the publick. Much other information could be given; but the hurry of departure of the bearer prevents my saying more. I refer to him. Any assistance I can give your Excellency, either by intelligence or otherwise, I shall esteem it an honour and duty to perform.

My best wishes for the success of your arms. May the Supreme Ruler of the Universe protect you. May the civil and religious liberties of America stand firm and unshaken to the latest posterity, is my earnest prayer.

I am, with profound respect, your Excellency's most devoted, most obedient, and very humble servant.

To His Excellency George Washington.

To His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., Generalissimo of the Army of the Twelve United Colonies of AMERICA.

May it please your Excellency:

The liberty we take in addressing a person of so exalted a rank will, we presume, be fully pardoned when you perceive the occasion of it.

The inhabitants of Nova-Scotia, and in particular those of the County of Cumberland, have been under the greatest desire and apprehension ever since the great contest subsisting between Great Britain and the American Colonies. Our situation has been such that we have not had it in our power to do anything in conjunction with the other Colonies. The form of Government we are under, and the manner of executing its authority, has been such that we are rather to be looked upon as slaves than freemen.

With anxious desires have we been waiting for the success of your righteous cause, and that you would cast an eye of pity towards this forlorn part. We have, indeed, nothing to recommend us but misery and impending destruction and devastations. We trust our manner of proceeding will have the desired effect on you, as well as the others who are the instruments of supporting the liberty of mankind.

We have been harassed much, occasioned by different proceedings of Government; threatened are we because we have such sentiments concerning the cause contended for by our brethren on the Continent. News has been received that troops will soon be sent among us. This, in a manner, has roused many who were environed in lethargy. Committees have been appointed from the different towns (including the Acadians) to fall upon some method of safety, there being a number among us (vainly called Government-men) who are continually prying into our proceedings, and, with accumulated tales, give information to the Government at Halifax. Liable, therefore, are we to be cut in pieces, having no expectation of succour but what comes through your Excellency.

We agreed in our Committees that nothing should be done publicly, as it might aggravate the others to fall upon us sooner than they intended; and further, as we could not tell the intention of the honourable Continental Congress concerning us.

Therefore, as individuals who belong to the aforesaid Committee, do recommend Jonathan Eddy, Esq., to your Excellency, who will acquaint you with our situation; and praying with ardency that your Excellency will please relieve us, so that we may be able to give our sentiments publicly, and join with our little strength, in conjunction with the other Colonies, in preventing the ensigns of slavery from being set up in any part of this great Empire. And we further pray your Excellency will keep this our request a secret for the present.

We do, separately and jointly, pray for the success of your arms, and that you may be victorious, and vanquish all your enemies.

We are, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most devoted and very humble servants,

ABIJAH AYER,	JOHN ALLAN,
NATHANIEL REYNOLDS,	WILLIAM LAWRENCE,
AMASA KILLAM,	SIMON NEWCOMB,
JESSE BENT,	ROBERT FOSTER,
WILLIAM MAXWALL,	SIMEON CHEFTER.
GEORGE FORSTER,

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GOVERNOUR CARLETON.

Whitehall, February 17, 1776.

SIR: The events which happened in the Province under your government, in the month of November, left no room for any other consideration but that of sending as early as possible a relief to the Town of Quebeck, in case you should have been able, with the small garrison you had collected together, to maintain possession of it during the winter; such relief to be followed by a body of troops sufficient to retake the town in case it should have fallen into the hands of the Rebels, and to effect the recovery of the whole of the Province to his Majesty's possession.

To this end it was judged expedient immediately upon the arrival of Lieutenant Pringle, in the Nancy, to equip a small squadron of his Majesty's ships, consisting of the Isis, of fifty guns, the Surprise and Triton frigates, and the Martin sloop-of-war. This squadron has been accordingly prepared with the greatest despatch, and will be accompanied with three victuallers and two large navy transports, having on board provision for three thousand men for three months.

His Majesty has also thought fit to direct that the Twenty-Ninth Regiment should be distributed on board the different ships, in the manner stated in the enclosed paper; and the whole being now ready to sail, enclosed I send you a copy of my letter of instructions to Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon, and of the instructions given by the Admiralty to the Captains of the several ships, pursuant to the directions I had the honour to send their Lordships by his Majesty's command.

Every effort is making to push forward the second embarkation of troops, so that they may be ready to sail by the 20th of next month.

That embarkation will consist of six Regiments from Ireland, and two from Great Britain, together with four companies of Artillery, and a large battering train; the whole to be under the command of Major-General Burgoyne, who, together with Major-General Lord Cornwallis, is appointed by the King to serve under you on the side of Canada; but it will possibly be some time before you can have the assistance of Lord Cornwallis, as he is at present appointed to serve under Major-General Clinton, upon an expedition to the southward, but he will proceed to Quebeck with his regiment as soon as that service is over.

To this force it is proposed to add about five thousand foreign auxiliary troops, furnished by the reigning Duke of Brunswick and the Prince of Waldeck; of which about three thousand will be ready to embark in the Elbe, in the beginning of March, and the remainder as soon after as possible.

Enclosed I send you the state of the British Regiments that are to proceed under the command of Major-General Burgoyne; and I am to signify to you his Majesty's commands, that you do give the necessary directions for the disembarkation of the said troops, as well as of the foreign auxiliaries; and that you do employ them in such manner as you shall think most effectual for his Majesty's service.

Major-General Burgoyne will be so fully instructed in every point, in regard to the important services that are to be carried on, on the side of Canada, that it will be unnecessary now for me to say anything on that subject, and, therefore, I have only to enclose to you his Majesty's warrant, containing a signification of his Majesty's pleasure for your direction in carrying into execution the powers vested in you by your commission of posting officers to vacancies.

I am, &c.,

GERMAINE.

To Sir Guy Carleton, Quebeck.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GOVERNOUR CARLETON.

Whitehall, March 28, 1776.

SIR: I have already informed you in my letter of the 17th February, of which I now enclose a duplicate, that the force to be employed in Canada under your command would consist of nine British Regiments, and about five thousand foreign auxiliaries.

I hope that by this time the Regiments from Ireland are nearly ready to proceed, and this letter will be delivered to you by Major-General Burgoyne, who accompanies the first embarkation from hence, consisting, as you will see by the enclosed state, of about two thousand Brunswick Troops, being the first division of that corps, and also of the Twenty-First Regiment, from Plymouth.

It is impossible, on account of the difficulty of procuring transports, to say when the second division of the Brunswick Troops will be ready to embark, but I hope it will be in the course of next month.

Enclosed I have the honour to send you a list of commissions, by which his Majesty gives military rank in America to his General Officers serving there; and it is hoped that this arrangement will have the effect to prevent any embarrassment or inconveniency from any claim in the General Officers of the foreign troops to have command in consequence of superior rank to the natural born subjects of Great Britain, upon whom it is his Majesty's intention that the command shall in all cases devolve.

The defeat and repulse of the Rebels at Quebeck, on the 31st December, was a great and happy event; and I am commanded by the King to express to you the sense his Majesty entertains of your service on that important day, and of the services of all those who distinguished themselves upon that occasion.

It is hoped and believed that so severe a check will have had the consequence to deter the Rebels from any other such attempts upon Quebeck; and we trust the armament now sending out will arrive in time to prevent their forming any regular siege of that important post.

If the Rebels should attempt to keep possession of Montreal, or any other place in Canada on your side the lakes, the Army under your command will be sufficient to drive them from that part of the Province; and there is no doubt, if you succeed in these first operations, but that you will endeavour to pass the lakes as early as possible, and, in your future progress, contribute to the success of the Army under General Howe. If, contrary to all our expectations, Quebeck should have fallen into the hands of the Rebels, a battering train of artillery is sent out, with Engineers, and a strong detachment of the Royal Regiment of Artillery, to enable you to regain that place, either by immediately attacking it, or first seizing Montreal, and by that means cutting off all communication between Quebeck and the rebellious Provinces; but these operations must be left to your judgment and discretion, as it would be highly improper, at such a distance, to give any positive orders, especially as so much confidence is placed in your knowledge and military experience. I am, &c.,

GERMAINE.

To Sir Guy Carleton, Quebeck.

LETTER FROM ARTHUR LEE.

[London,] April 15, 1776.

DEAR SIR: On the 7th ultimo the Snow Dickinson, Captain Meston, consigned to Messrs. Montandouine & Frere, at Nantes, was brought into Bristol by her crew, and delivered up with all her papers. From these the Ministry are apprised of all the ships which have been sent to the different ports of France, and cruisers are despatched into the Bay of Biscay to watch them. John Sands, mate of the Dickinson, had made memorandums, long before he left Philadelphia, of every material transaction, which shows a premeditated plan of treachery. The proceedings of the Ministry, relative to this proof of the French interposition, have not yet transpired; but France does not seem to be settled or spirited enough to enter into a war, should England resent this business.

On the 5th of this month a fleet sailed with two thousand Brunswick Troops and General Burgoyne; it is therefore understood that they are gone to succour Quebeck. Six regiments, (about four thousand effective men,) made up with German recruits, are now ready for sailing orders at Cork. It is probable that they, too, are destined to Quebeck. The first divisions of the Hessians are not yet arrived, so that it is not likely the whole of them will sail till the latter end of May. They are, by stipulation, to serve altogether, and therefore will go to Boston or Long-Island. It is supposed the Provincials will possess the strong posts on Elizabeth River, which, if in the enemy's hands, will give them the command of Jersey, Staten-Island, &c. If the Provincials always have redoubts in the front and flanks of their Army, it is the opinion of the ablest in the profession, that they will be better than intrenchments or lines, and will foil the Regulars by breaking their line, or forcing them to sacrifice a number of men, which they cannot afford.

People here begin to feel the matter as very serious, since the publications of Dr. Price and Lord Stair have convinced them that new taxes must be imposed for supporting this armament, which, it is certain, will cost upwards of twelve millions. This, therefore, is universally believed to be the last effort of Administration; and if they do not succeed this campaign, it will be utterly impossible for them to find men or money for such another. The ships sent out are exceedingly ill-manned, and there is such a disposition to desertion among the German Troops, that if proper offers are made to them the Ministerial people are much afraid they will desert in great numbers. They have hopes, however, that divisions will take place among the Provinces and in the Congress, as they are satisfied that firmness and unanimity will force their own terms.

The City of London has addressed the Throne for an avowal of the conditions on which peace is to be restored. The answer was, in effect, unconditional submission. You may reckon, that in July the troops will be arrived, so as to enable General Howe to take the field. Lord Howe, though he has accepted of the command, is not yet sailed; he goes in the Eagle, of sixty-four guns. He is a brave man, but has a very confused head, and is therefore very unfit for an extensive command. As there will not be above two line-of-battle ships, if the Congress could procure five line-of-battle ships from the French and Spaniards, they might destroy or drive the whole British fleet from their coasts. Adieu.

JOHN HANSON, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Fredericktown, Middle District, April 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Committee have received the rolls of Captain Young's and Captain Good's Minute Companies, and the times of the men's attendance, agreeable to the resolves of the Convention. Their pay amounts to eighty-six pounds four shillings and six pence; which sum the Committee request may be immediately put into their hands, that the men may be paid off.

I am desired to acquaint your Honours that the quantity of powder now in the magazine in this town is only about six hundred weight; that though the powder belongs properly to the whole Province, yet they hope they may have the liberty (on any occasion where they conceive the good of the Province to be concerned) of making use of any part of it which they may think necessary, and they request your Honours' permission to do so.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

JOHN HANSON, JUN.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM JOHN ADAMS, DATED PHILADELPHIA, APRIL 15, 1776.

I send you every newspaper that comes out, and I send you, now and then, a few sheets of paper; but this article is as scarce here as with you. I would send a quire if I could get a conveyance. I write you now and then a line, as often as I can, but I can tell you no news but what I send in the publick papers.

We are waiting, it is said, for Commissioners—a Messiah that will never come. This story of Commissioners is as arrant an illusion as ever was hatched in the brain of an enthusiast, a politician, or a maniac. I have laughed at it, scolded at it, grieved at it, and I do not know but I may, at an unguarded moment, have ripped at it. But it is in vain to reason against such delusions. I was very sorry to see, in a letter from the General, that he had been bubbled with it; and still more, to see, in a letter from my sagacious friend *W.** at Plymouth, that he was taken in too.

My opinion is, that the Commissioners and the commission have been here (I mean in America) these two months. The Governours, Mandamus Councillors, Collectors, and Comptrollers, and Commanders of the Army and Navy, I conjecture, compose the list, and their power is to receive submissions. But we are not in a very submissive mood. They will get no advantage of us. We shall go on to perfection I believe.

I have been very busy for some time; have written about ten sheets of paper, with my own hand, about some trifling affairs, which I may mention some time or other—not now, for fear of accidents. What will come of this labour time will discover. I shall get nothing by it, I believe, because I never get anything by any thing that I do. I am sure the publick or posterity ought to get something. I believe my children will think I might as well have thought and laboured a little, night and day, for their benefit. But I will not bear the reproaches of my children. I will tell them, that I studied and laboured to procure a free Constitution of Government for them to solace themselves under, and if they do not prefer this to ample fortune, to ease, and elegance, they are not my children, and I care not what becomes of them. They shall live upon thin diet, wear mean clothes, and work hard, with cheerful hearts and free spirits, or they may be the children of the earth, or of no one, for me.

John has genius, and so has Charles. Take care that they do not go astray. Cultivate their minds, inspire their little hearts, raise their wishes. Fix their attention upon great and glorious objects. Root out every little thing. Weed out every meanness. Make them great and manly. Teach them to scorn injustice, ingratitude, cowardice, and falsehood. Let them revere nothing but religion, morality, and liberty.

*James Warren.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Received April 18, 1776.—Referred to Mr. Reed, Mr. Clinton, and Mr. Braxton.]

New-York, April 15, 1776.

SIR: I am now to inform you that, on the 4th instant, I set out from Cambridge, and arrived here on Saturday last. I came through Providence, Norwich, and New-London, in order to see and expedite the embarkation of the troops. The Third Brigade, under the command of General Greene, was at New-London when I left it, where there was a sufficient number of transports to embark them, and most probably would have arrived here before this, had it not been for a snow-storm which happened the night they sailed, which dispersed them, and I fear has done them some injury. General Spencer, with the last brigade, marched from Roxbury the day I left Cambridge, and would be at New-London, ready to embark in the return transports which brought General Sullivan's division to this place. The whole of the troops may be reasonably expected here in the course of this week. The badness of the roads, and difficulty of procuring teams for bringing the stores, baggage, &c., have greatly prolonged their arrival at this place.

I have not had time since I came to look fully about me, but find many works of defence begun, and some finished. The troops are much dispersed, some on Long-Island, others on Staten-Island, &c.

I have ordered four battalions from hence to Canada, and am taking measures to have them forwarded to Albany, by water, with all possible expedition. This will greatly expedite their arrival, and ease the men of much fatigue. I have written to General Schuyler of their coming, that he may have necessary measures taken to hurry their march to General Thomas.

I am informed by General Putnam, that the Militia that were called in for the support of this town, in case the Ministerial Army had arrived before our troops, are all discharged, it being unnecessary to keep them longer. All the ships-of-war, besides the Asia, moved out of this harbour on Saturday, and the Asia yesterday, some of which are now below the Narrows, and the rest gone to sea.

Your favour of the 10th instant, by Major Sherburne, directed to General Putnam, or the commanding officer here, came to hand on Saturday evening, with three boxes of money, which I shall deliver the Paymaster as soon as he arrives, and transmit you his receipt for the same.

Having received information from hence before my departure from Cambridge, that thirty pieces of heavy cannon were wanting, and essentially necessary for the defence of this place, in addition to those already here, I took the liberty of applying to Admiral Hopkins, whom I saw at New-London, for that number, with the mortars and stores he brought from Providence, a list of which he had transmitted you. He told me that, as many were wanting for the defence of Providence River and the harbour at New-London, it was uncertain whether I could have all I wanted, but that he would send me all that could be spared.

I have not been able to get a return of the troops since I came; as soon as I do, I will send it to you.

I am, sir, with great respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable the President of Congress.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, April 14, 1776.

(Parole, New-York)

(Countersign, Prosperity)

The General compliments the officers who have successively commanded at this post, and returns his thanks to them, and to all the officers and soldiers under their command, for the many works of defence which have been so expeditiously erected, and doubts not but the same spirit of zeal for the service will continue to animate their future conduct.

Exact returns of all the Regiments and Corps to be made up and sent to the Adjutant-General, as soon as possible. The commanding officers at the outposts are also to send a report of the numbers under their command, where and how disposed of. Exact returns also of all the ordnance and military stores, provisions, stores in the department of the Quartermaster-General, &c., to be forthwith delivered to the Commander-in-Chief, signed by the proper officer of the head of each department.

All persons infected with the small-pox are to be immediately removed to a secure place, to be provided by the Quartermaster-General, who will consult the Magistrates of the city thereupon. A proper guard, to be composed of men who have had that disorder, to be fixed at this Hospital, to prevent any intercourse but such as the manager shall license.

Pay abstracts are to be made out for each Regiment and Corps in this department, to the 1st of April, exclusive, (each month separate,) and lodged with Major Harrison, Aid-de-Camp to the General, that provision may be made for payment.

As the General is unacquainted at present with the various orders for the good government of the troops here, or the reasons which induced the giving of them; he directs that those, and all General Orders, be duly attended to and obeyed, until countermanded by himself.

The General flatters himself that he shall hear no complaints from the citizens of abuse or ill treatment, in any respect whatsoever; but that every officer and soldier, of every rank and denomination, will pride themselves (as men contending in the glorious cause of liberty ought to do) in an orderly, decent, and regular deportment.

One Captain, four Subalterns, four Sergeants, four Corporals, two Drums, and one hundred Privates, to parade this afternoon, at four o'clock, to go as guard to Governour's Island.

Two Field-Officers, four Captains, eight Subalterns, sixteen Sergeants, four Drums and Fifes, and four hundred men, from Heath's and Lord Stirling's Brigades, to parade at six o'clock, to-morrow morning, with three days' provisions, to go as a working party to Governour's Island. General Putnam will order boats to be ready at the ferry to transport them.

For the future, the Commissary-General is not to issue any rum to working parties, unless the return is signed by the officer commanding the whole party.

Head-Quarters, New-York, April 15, 1776.

(Parole, Philadelphia.)

(Countersign, Norfolk.)

The Quartermaster-General is immediately to provide transports to convey four Regiments to Albany. Poor's, Patterson's, Greaton's, and Bond's Regiments, are to hold themselves in readiness to embark at an hour's warning. They are to take with them their camp equipage, which the Quartermaster-General will furnish, taking the Colonels, or commanding officers' receipt for the tents, &c., supplied to each corps.

An exact return to be made this evening by the Majors of Brigade of all the guards; where mounted, and number of sentries furnished by each guard.

The Quartermaster-General is immediately to provide six whale-boats for the publick service; he will report when they are ready to be employed.

The Majors of Brigade are to attend at the Adjutant-General's Office, near Head-Quarters, at eleven o'clock, every forenoon, to receive the General Orders of the day. Such Brigade-Majors as are at a remote distance from the town may send an Orderly Adjutant to act for them.

Brigadier-General Thompson is to command the Brigade going to Albany; he will receive his orders as soon as the troops are embarked.

As the Army at this place is lately strongly reinforced, and more of the Continental established Regiments hourly expected, it is no longer necessary to detain any of the Militia; therefore Colonel Martin, with four companies of Militia, from Sussex County, in New-Jersey, are dismissed, with the General's thanks for the spirit with which they stepped forward in the service of their country on this occasion, and for their good behaviour and service since they joined the Army.

The officers and soldiers of Poor's, Patterson's, Greaton's, and Bond's Regiments, to be immediately taken off duty.

Lieutenant Dallace, of Colonel Winds's Regiment, together with the non-commissioned officers and men of that corps, who were lately employed at the Laboratory in making cartridges, are immediately to return to that duty.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, April 15, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Previous to the receipt of your favour of the 7th instant, I had been directed by the honourable Congress to detach four regiments to Quebeck, if they could be spared from the service here. I am very sensible of the great necessity of sending a respectable body of troops immediately into that country, and have accordingly ordered four of the strongest regiments to hold themselves in readiness, and am providing vessels to transport them to Albany. You may depend they shall be forwarded with all possible despatch. In the mean time, I beg you would make the necessary preparations for their subsistence. There will be about two thousand men, exclusive of officers, in the four regiments.

I beg you will forward the enclosed letter to General Thomas; and am, very respectfully, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL THOMAS.

New-York, April 15, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 7th instant, and cannot but express my concern at the great deficiency of the regiments destined for Canada; but as I am sensible of the necessity of having a respectable body of troops in that country, I am now preparing to send you four of the strongest regiments in the service; and you may rely upon it no time shall be lost in getting them forward as fast as possible. They will amount to about two thousand rank and file, and will go to Albany by water.

I have written to General Schuyler by this opportunity, and desired him to make the necessary preparations for their subsistence, and doubt not he will speedily despatch them to you.

I most sincerely wish you success equal to the importance of the cause; and am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General John Thomas, Albany.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOSEPH REED.

New-York, April 15, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 13th was this instant put into my hands, scarcely in time to acknowledge the receipt of it by this post, and to thank you for your great care and attention in providing my camp equipage.

I am exceedingly concerned to hear of the divisions and parties which prevail with you, and in the Southern Colonies, on the score of independence. These are the shelves we have to avoid, or our barque will split and tumble to pieces. Here lies our great danger, and I almost tremble when I think of this rock. Nothing but disunion can hurt our cause. This will ruin it, if great prudence, temper, and moderation, are not mixed in our councils, and made the governing principles of the contending parties.

When, my good sir, will you be with me? I fear I shall have a difficult card to play in this Government, and could wish for your assistance and advice to manage it. I have not time to add more, except that, with great sincerity and truth, I am, dear sir, your most obedient and affectionate humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Joseph Reed, Esq.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOHN ADAMS.

New-York, April 15, 1776.

SIR: This morning your polite letter of the 1st instant was delivered to me by Mr. Dana. I am much obliged to you for your introduction of that gentleman, and you may rely on my showing him every civility in my power.

I have ever thought, and am still of opinion, that no terms of accommodation will be offered by the British Ministry but such as cannot be accepted by America. We have nothing, my dear sir, to depend upon but the protection of a kind Providence, and unanimity among ourselves.

I am impressed with the deepest gratitude for the high honour intended me by Congress. Whatever device may be determined upon by the respectable Committee they have chosen for that purpose, will be highly agreeable to me.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, sir, your obedient and affectionate humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Adams, in Congress.

WILLIAM ALLISON TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Goshen, April 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In obedience to a letter and resolve of Congress, of the 4th of March last, I have enclosed to you a state of my regiment, and lament that I was not able to do it sooner, and that they are not better equipped; but as necessity covers many wants, I hope the Committee will impute the latter to that, and the impossibility of obtaining some of the necessary articles, rather than their want of zeal for the cause.

I have not the least reason to doubt the willingness of my officers and soldiers to march on the shortest notice, but am sorry to inform you that the regiment seems to have a general aversion to the Minute service; that a great deal of pains has been taken by my Captains to turn out their proportion of Minute-men, by voluntary enlistments, but to no purpose, and to draft, gentlemen, must be an arduous task to an officer while a general reluctance prevails among the people; have therefore omitted it at the present, and if it must be done, I hope the Committee will favour me with a line to that purpose.

You will pardon the digression, gentlemen, in my saying that I am much afraid the good end the honourable the Continental Congress had in view, will never be well answered in the Minute-men. If they go on in general throughout the Confederated Colonies as they have ever done in this part of Orange County, I think I dare, without the spirit of prophecy, say we must not lay any great stress on what they will do for us in the present contest. All which is humbly submitted.

I have the honour to be, respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient and very humble servant,

WILLIAM ALLISON.

To the Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York.

A state of the First Regiment of Foot, in GOSHEN Precinct, ORANGE County, as to Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Privates, Arms, Accoutrements, Ammunition, &c.; made out this 15th day of APRIL, 1776:

JOHANNES HARDENBURGH TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Rosendall, Ulster County, April 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter, dated the 1st of April instant, I received the 13th, and did immediately make inquiry what progress the recruiting officers had made in raising their men; and was informed by some of the officers, that two of the companies raised in Ulster County were completed and ordered to the fortifications in the Highlands; the other company, to be raised by Captain Cornelius Hardenburgh, I was also informed, had their complement of men; but as he was gone to New-York at the time I received your letter, I expect he will receive his orders there; but will also, on his return, give him notice of General Putnam's demand.

I also gave notice to Mr. Wynkoop, one of our Delegates, of the necessity of some of our Delegates attending at New-York, when he told me he was preparing to go there with the first opportunity that should offer.

Gentlemen, whereas several of our militiamen are without arms or ammunition, and we know not how soon their assistance may be required; I therefore think it reasonable that those who have agreed with the Congress last year to make arms for the use of the Colony, should deliver them as soon as possible, that those who are in want of arms may be supplied.

I remain, gentlemen, with esteem, your humble servant,
JOHANNES HARDENBURGH,
Chairman of the County Committee.

To the Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York, now at the City of New-York.

DR. FRANKLIN TO JOSIAH QUINCY, BRAINTREE.

Saratoga, April 15, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am here on my way to Canada, detained by the present state of the lakes, in which the unthawed ice obstructs navigation. I begin to apprehend that I have undertaken a fatigue that, at my time of life, may prove too much for me, so I sit down to write to a few friends, by way of farewell.

I congratulate you on the departure of your late troublesome neighbours. I hope your country will now for some time have rest; and that care will be taken so to fortify Boston as that no force shall be able again to get footing there.

Your very kind letter of November 13th, enclosing Lord Chatham's and Lord Camden's speeches, I duly received. I think no one can be more sensible than I am of the favours of corresponding friends, but I find it impossible to answer as I ought. At present I think you will deem me inexcusable, and therefore I will not attempt an apology. But if you should ever happen to be at the same time oppressed with years and business, you may then extenuate a little for your old friend.

The notes of the speeches taken by your son (whose loss I shall ever deplore with you) are exceedingly valuable, as being by much the best account preserved of that day's debate.

You ask, "When is the Continental Congress, by general consent, to be formed into a supreme Legislature; alliances, defensive and offensive, formed; our ports opened; and a formidable naval force established at the publick charge?" I can only answer, at present, that nothing seems wanting but that "general consent." The novelty of the thing deters some; the doubts of success, others; the vain hope of reconciliation, many. But our enemies take continually every proper measure to remove these obstacles, and their endeavours are attended with success, since every day furnishes us with new causes of increasing enmity, and new reasons for wishing an eternal separation; so that there is a rapid increase of the formerly small party who were for an Independent Government.

Your epigram on Lord Chatham's remark has amply paid me for the song. Accept my thanks for it, and for the charming extract of a lady's letter, contained in your favour of January 22d.

I thought, when I sat down, to have written, by this opportunity to Doctor Cooper, Mr. Bowdoin, and Doctor Winthrop, but I am interrupted. Be so good as to present my affectionate respects to them, and to your family.

Adieu, my dear friend, and believe me ever yours, most affectionately,

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

To Josiah Quincy, Esq., Braintree.

COLONEL BAYLEY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Newbury, April 15, 1776.

SIR: Colonel Bedel, on his march, sent to me to provide some trusty persons to pilot soldiers, by way of Massachusetts, to St. John's, who were to make return of that route to your Excellency. They were to wait for Colonel Bedel's arrival at St. John's or Montreal, but they found the lake so broken, that they must stay too long for him. Two of the five I sent, returned the fifteenth day; the other three went forward with the soldiers to Quebeck. As I had no actual survey of the country from Massachusetts to St. John's, I sent to Mr. Metcalf for a plan of that part, who has sent the plan enclosed, which he informs is done from actual survey, which agrees nearly with my representation. I also send the journal of Captain Thomas Johnson, as also the true distance of sundry places to St. John's by Massachusetts, and from the same place by Charlestown and Crown Point, and by Albany, which may be examined by the post roads and maps; and, if found true, it will appear that the cost of making the road will be saved in the soldiers' marching home from Canada, at the close of the present campaign, as it will save six days' pay and provision for all that live eastward of Connecticut River.

We have here provisions to supply all that may pass this way. I also inform that there is good water carriage from this place to St. John's, except forty-three miles. Mr. Johnson informs me that the lakes are so broken that the soldiers are detained at Crown Point, and that the French are fearful, as troops do not arrive as expected.

If I can be of any service to the American cause, in cutting the proposed road, or any other way, I am ready. I should think one hundred picked men from the Army, or elsewhere, will be enough to be employed in that business; no officer higher than a Sergeant. I will provide a surveyor, pilot, and overseer. None of my providing shall have more wages than they merit by their behaviour; and if I am employed to see the road completed, I shall expect no more than the Congress, or any of the Congresses or Courts in the Colonies, may think I deserve, after the whole is completed. I say this, because I will never receive anything for anything I do in the Continental service, unless it is thought to be really serviceable to the common cause.

Nothing new from Canada to be depended on. They had reports of considerable advantages our Army had got at Quebeck over the Ministerial Troops, killing and taking about three hundred; hope it is true.

These you will receive from a hearty friend of the American cause, and your very humble servant,

JACOB BAYLEY.

To General Washington.

P. S. Good men for the business purposed deserve good wages; but bad ones deserve none. Colonel Little is a good judge what men will do for the road.

JOHNSON'S JOURNAL.

Newbury, March 26, 1776.

Set out with a number of soldiers for St. John's, in order to make return of the way from Newbury to St. John's, by way of Massachusetts, to your Excellency, which is as follows:

Tuesday, 26th, set out from Newbury; lodged at the last inhabitant's; waited half a day for the rear of the soldiers.

Wednesday, 27th, marched six miles; good land for road.

Thursday, 28th, marched twelve miles; good.

Friday, 29th, marched twelve miles; good, except two miles.

Saturday, 30th, marched fifteen miles; good, except three miles.

Sunday, 31st, marched ten miles to Mr. Metcalf's; good; waited half a day for the rear.

Monday, April 1st, marched twenty-five miles to St. John's.

Tuesday, 2d April, tarried at St. John's.

Wednesday, 3d, returned to Mr. Metcalf's.

Thursday, 4th, tarried for the plan.

The 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th, travelled home; cut myself badly the second day, which made my journey longer. I find it the best country for a road I ever saw, for such a length of way.

This is from your very humble servant,

THOMAS JOHNSON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

FREDERICK V. WEISENFELS,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

THOMAS GRENELLY TO LIEUTENANT FLEMING.

Norwalk, April 15, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your last favour, of the 11th, I have received, and am sorry for the miscarriage of the other. My brother's declining has fixed me as to going, as I had no thoughts of going under the command of any one else, especially for the present. I am sorry that it has so happened, for I should have been very happy to be in a company with you and Mr. Reed. I have no particular objections of my own, but my father is not very willing that I should go, and I would choose he should be fully satisfied with it. I join with you in opinion about Major Beauman, who, I think, is a deserving man. I something expect to be in town in about ten days, when I hope for the pleasure of seeing you before you go from thence, (for I suppose you will not be stationed in town;) but if it should so fall out that I should not be there, you and Mr. Reed will please to accept of my sincerest and warmest wishes for your prosperity and welfare.

My best wishes to him; and believe me to be, dear sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

THOMAS GRENELLY.

To Lieutenant George Fleming, in New-York.

P. S. Mr. Griffiths is much obliged to you for your compliments, and begs you to accept of his in return. Please to acquaint uncle's family of our being all well, and desiring to be remembered to them all.

T. G.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO ADMIRAL HOPKINS.

Lebanon, April 15, 1776.

SIR: On representation from the Committee, who were directed last week to attend you respecting the prisoners taken in your late cruise, &c., that you would be glad to have our armed Brig Defence (now in the harbour of New-London) to attend and assist you in any further operations you may think proper soon to effect, we have considered your desire, and fully comply with the same, and have given orders to Captain Harding accordingly, a copy of which is enclosed.

At the same time we tender you our thanks for your favourable acceptance of our request respecting the cannon and military stores.

I am, in behalf of the Governour and Council of Safety, your most obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To Admiral Hopkins.

P. S. Captain Niles, in the Spy, is also ordered to attend your directions, provided you shall have any occasion for his services.

J. T.

GENERAL WARD TO MESHECH WEARE.

Head-Quarters, Boston, April 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 11th instant, by Captain Salter, I have received; in answer to which I am to acquaint you that the cannon belonging to New-Hampshire, which are here, shall be delivered to your order, whenever you please to send for them. I wish it was in my power to supply you with all the cannon you want; but the enemy destroyed and carried off so many, together with what are gone southward with the Army, that we have not enough for our fortifications.

I am, your most obedient servant,

ARTEMAS WARD.

To the Honourable Meshech Weare, Esq., and Committee of Safety.

RICHARD THURSTON TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Rowley, April 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We, the subscribers, being a Committee of Safety, &c., for the town of Rowley, having had a number of complaints against Jonathan Stickney, Jun.; and, upon examination of the evidences, and his own assertion before the Committee, we find him to be an enemy to America; and we think his crime so great, and of so aggravated a nature, that it was proper to send him to your Honours, that he might receive his just deserts; and, accordingly, we have sent said Hickney by Lieutenant Searl, the bearer hereof, and likewise the affidavits. The reason why said affidavits were not sworn to, was for want of a Justice in said town. The evidences are respectable persons, and offered to attest said affidavits before a Justice of the Peace.

In behalf of the Committee:

RICHARD THURSTON, Chairman.

To the Honourable Council now sitting at Watertown, in the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay, in New-England.

Rowley, April 8, 1776.

Mr. Jonathan Stickney, Jun., said, before the Committee of Safety, that he would not fight upon either side; but if he was obliged to fight, and was to choose, he would fight for the King. Also, that he thought God Almighty never suffered so ignorant a body of men to transact business of so much importance as our General Court.

Signed by order of the Committee:

RICHARD THURSTON, Chairman.

Rowley, April 8, 1776.

We, the subscribers, declare, that on the evening of the 26th of February last, we heard Mr. Jonathan Stickney, Jun., talk as follows: 1st. That they (meaning the Canadians) ought to esteem it an act of grace in his Majesty in establishing Popery in Canada; and that he was glad his Majesty was of so gracious a turn of mind; further, that his Majesty had a just right to sign any act of Parliament whatever, though ever so contradictory of his Majesty's Coronation oath.

Attest:

WILLIAM STICKNEY,
PARKER CLEVELAND.

Rowley, April 8, 1776.

Mr. Jonathan Stickney, Jun., said that the Continental Congress was a pack of rascally villains; that he longed to see the blood streaming from the hearts of those that upheld the destruction of that tea; and that our General Court was a pack of ignorant souls, for they were deceiving the people.

RUFUS WHEELER.

Rowley, April 8, 1776.

We heard Jonathan Stickney, Jun., say that the Continental Congress was a pack of rascally villains, and he looked upon the General Court to be men not fit for that purpose.

JOSEPH SEARL,
RUTH SEARL.

Rowley, April 8, 1776.

I heard Jonathan Stickney say, some time last January, that those that were the leaders of those affairs, (meaning those that destroyed the tea, and our Court and Congress,) he should be glad to see the stream running from their hearts.

TIMOTHY JACKMAN, JUN.

Rowley, April 8, 1776.

Jonathan Stickney, Jun., told me that, in his opinion, all the Continental Congress aimed at was Independence; that that was their first motive, and that he had rather see them in their gore than to see them ruling America independent. He said the bigger part of the Provinces had rebelled without any provocation, and he wished the leaders of that rebellion might be made turnspits for the nobility in England; that beheading was too honourable for them. He said those that destroyed the tea were a pack of damned rascals, and that was the whole cause of all our difficulties. He said King George was able to throw his dominion over America, and he hoped he would do it. He said those creatures who were vulgarly called Committees of Safety, were properly tyrants; that no arguments would convince them but the bright steel, and he hoped George would convince them by it; and many other things to the same import.

SAMUEL JOHNSON.

DEPOSITIONS RESPECTING THE ARSENICK MIXED WITH THE MEDICINES LEFT AT BOSTON BY THE BRITISH.By the Council and House of Representatives of Massachusetts, }
April 15, 1776. }

Resolved, That the Depositions of Doctor John Warren, Daniel Scott, and Frederick Ridgely, respecting a quantity of Medicines left in the Work-House of the Town of Boston, lately improved as an Hospital by the British Troops, be published in the Watertown Newspaper, by order of the General Court.

DEPOSITION OF DOCTOR JOHN WARREN.

I, John Warren, of Cambridge, Physician, testify and say, that, on or about the 29th day of March last past, I went into the Work-House of the Town of Boston, lately improved as an Hospital by the British Troops stationed in said town, and upon examining into the state of a large quantity of medicine there by them left, particularly in one room, supposed to have been by them used as a medicinal store-room, I found a great variety of medicinal articles lying upon the floor, some of which were contained and secured in papers, whilst others were scattered upon the floor loose; amongst these medicines I observed small quantities of what I supposed was white and yellow arsenick intermixed; and then received information from Doctor Daniel Scott that he had taken up a large quantity of said arsenick from over and amongst the medicine, and had collected it chiefly in large lumps, and secured it in a vessel. Upon receiving this information, I desired him to let me view the arsenick; with which he complied, and I judged it to amount to about the quantity of twelve or fourteen pounds. Being much surprised by this extraordinary intelligence, I more minutely examined the medicine on the floor, and found them to be chiefly capital articles, and those most generally in great demand; and judging them to be rendered entirely unfit for use, I advised Doctor Scott to let them remain, and by no means meddle with them, as I thought the utmost hazard would attend the using of them. They were accordingly suffered to remain, and no account was taken of them.

JOHN WARREN.

Colony of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, WATERTOWN, ss.

Then John Warren made solemn oath to the truth of the above written Deposition.

Before me,

JAMES OTIS,
Justice of the Peace through the said Colony.

April 3, 1776.

DEPOSITION OF DANIEL SCOTT.

Watertown, April 9, 1776.

Being ordered by the Director-General of the Continental Hospital to look over and take charge of the medicines left by the Ministerial Army in the Hospital in Boston, and being called upon by the honourable Council of this Province to give information of sundry medicines found in a room improved as a medicine-room in the house formerly improved as a Work-House in Boston, supposed to be poisoned, I do declare, on examination, that there was promiscuously scattered over the floor of said room, in a mixed manner, a quantity of medicine, of various kinds; and over a part of the most valuable was strewed a quantity of white and yellow arsenick, as I suppose about twenty pounds weight, (as I did, with the assistance of Doctor Frederick Ridgely, take up eighteen pounds.) The medicines which were unhurt by the arsenick, I suppose, may amount in value to about forty pounds, lawful money; and those which were rendered useless, I suppose, to about twenty; the latter of which I have in charge, and am determined, as soon as opportunity will allow, to bury, to prevent their being made any use of in future.

DANIEL SCOTT.

Colony of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, April 9, 1776:

Daniel Scott appeared and made solemn oath to the truth of the above Declaration by him subscribed.

Before

MOSES GILL,
Justice of the Peace through the Colony.

DEPOSITION OF FREDERICK RIDGELY.

Watertown, April 9, 1776.

I being ordered to assist in taking an account of the medicines left in the town of Boston by the Ministerial Troops, and now being called before the honourable Council of this Province to give information of some of them which were said to be poisoned, do declare, that, on examining the medicines in a house that had been occupied by the Ministerial Troops as an Hospital, (but formerly improved as a Work-House,) there was a considerable quantity of valuable articles promiscuously scattered over the floor; among a part of which was about twenty weight of arsenick intermixed, which rendered them useless; therefore, that part of them was omitted, which Doctor Daniel Scott said he would take the necessary care of.

FREDERICK RIDGELY.

Colony of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, April 9, 1776:

Frederick Ridgely appeared and made solemn oath to the truth of the above Declaration by him subscribed.

Before

MOSES GILL,
Justice of the Peace through the Colony.

ESSEX COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee appointed and held for Essex County, at Tappahannock, on Tuesday, the 16th of April, 1776:

The Sub-Committee of this County having reported to this Committee that it appeared to them, by the Deposition of James Connolly, that John and George Fowler had imported goods into this County contrary to the Association, from Antigua, and referred the consideration thereof to us; the said John Fowler appeared, was heard, and, on consideration of the premises,

Resolved, That it does not appear to this Committee that the said Fowlers imported the said goods into this County as alleged; but that the said goods were imported into Gloucester County, and from thence brought into their store in this County.

Resolved, (It appearing to this Committee that the Committee of Gloucester have had the said goods under their consideration, and determined thereon,) That this Committee will proceed no further with respect to the said goods, the said Committee of Gloucester having taken goods of the said Fowlers to the amount of the invoice produced to them.

Resolved, That this Committee are of opinion that the said Fowlers have violated the Continental Association, and that they be published in the Gazette, as enemies to America, agreeable to the said Association, the offence having been committed before the passing the Ordinance of Convention respecting such cases, and that it be recommended to the good people of this Colony to have no further dealings with them.

JOHN UPSHAW, Chairman.

MARYLAND DELEGATES TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, April 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We send by the bearer, (James Rue, a wagoner,) one ton of powder for the use of the Eastern-Shore. You will be pleased to receive it into your care, and advise the Council of Safety of the same, that they may direct the distribution. You will observe that Cecil County is not entitled to any of this powder, as we have already supplied that County from this place. Be so kind as to acknowledge the receipt of the powder by the return of the wagoner.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

R. ALEXANDER,
THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN.,
T. STONE.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND DELEGATES TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, April 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We this morning sent off in a wagon one ton of powder for Chestertown, which is directed to the care of Messrs. Smyth & Hands; if absent, to be delivered to the Committee of Observation. We have written these gentlemen to receive the powder, and to await your orders for the distribution. This powder we obtained on application from Congress, who grant supplies to the different Provinces, as the circumstances and situation of them make it necessary. Knowing the exposed and defenceless state of the Eastern-Shore, we have sent off this supply, which we expect will meet your approbation. You will observe Cecil County has been supplied by us from hence with five hundred pounds. We mention this, to prevent any part of the ton being sent to that County.

We send you by the post eight of the plates, with the devices, for the money. Rittenhouse says the remaining four will be finished in ten or twelve days.

We are, with respect, gentlemen, your humble servants,
R. ALEXANDER,
T. STONE.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

Philadelphia, April 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I received, and immediately communicated to Congress, your letter of the 14th, with the important papers enclosed. In consequence of which, the Congress have resolved that the person and papers of Governour Eden be immediately seized by the Committee of Safety, to whom I write by this opportunity.

The person mentioned in the enclosed resolution (Mr. Alexander Ross) is represented as a dangerous partisan of Administration, who has been lately with Lord Dunmore, and it is suggested is on his way to the Indian country, to execute the execrable designs of our enemies. I have no doubt but you will exert your utmost endeavours in seizing and securing him.

I am, with respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Committee of Baltimore.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, April 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By the letters of Lord Germaine to your Governour, copies of which you have enclosed, it evidently appears that Mr. Eden has been carrying on a dangerous correspondence with the Ministry of Great Britain, who seem desperately bent on the destruction of America.

The Congress, therefore, have come to a resolution that the person and papers of Governour Eden be immediately seized, from which there is reason to believe we may not only learn, but probably defeat, the designs of our enemies.

The Congress also being informed that there is one Alexander Ross in your Colony, who has lately been with Lord Dunmore, and is represented as a dangerous partisan of the British Administration, him, also, the Congress are desirous of apprehending, and for that purpose have passed a resolution, which you have enclosed with the other. The Congress, relying on your zeal, confide that you will exert your best endeavours in executing these resolutions.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

In Congress, April 16, 1776.

Whereas information has been this day laid before Congress, from which there is great reason to believe that Robert Eden, Esq., Governour of the Colony of Maryland, has lately carried on a correspondence with the British Ministry highly dangerous to the liberties of America:

Resolved, therefore, That the Council of Safety of Maryland be earnestly requested immediately to cause the person and papers of Governour Eden to be seized and secured, and such of the papers as relate to the American dispute, without delay, conveyed safely to Congress, and that copies of the intercepted letters from the Secretary of State be enclosed to the said Council of Safety.

Resolved, That the Council of Safety of Maryland be requested to cause the person and papers of Alexander Ross to be immediately seized and secured, and that the papers be sent safely to Congress.

And to prevent the said Alexander Ross from any opportunity to escape,

Resolved, That the like request be made to the Committees of Observation for Baltimore and Frederick Counties, in Maryland, in one of which Counties the said Ross probably now is.

Extract from the Minutes:

CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary.

Ordered by Congress to be transmitted to the honourable Council of Safety of the Colony of Maryland.

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL PUTNAM.

Philadelphia, April 16, 1776.

SIR: Congress finding, by intelligence from General Washington, that the greatest part of the troops that were before Boston are either on their march to New-York, or actually arrived there, judge it improper to keep a larger body of men together than is called for in that place. I am therefore commanded by the Congress to direct that you discharge the whole, or such part of the Militia of New-York and Connecticut, now in the pay of the Continent, as the publick service will permit, and also, that you discharge the whole of the Militia of New-Jersey.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Major-General Putnam, at New-York.

WILLIAM SCUDDER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Elizabethtown, New-Jersey, April 15, 1776.

I would inform your Honours that I received a warrant to enlist men for your Province, Henry O'Hara being Captain, for which I have enlisted and have in billet in New-Jersey, about thirty-five. They have been there about six weeks on my expenses. The Captain went to Albany seven weeks ago recruiting, and was to have returned in three weeks. I have had no intelligence from him since. I know not what to do with the men, as they call on me daily for money, or they will desert. Likewise, the Jersey people are vexed that their Militia is called away, while they are under pay and doing nothing.

I beg, gentlemen, you will take some method for my relief.

GOVERNOUR TRYON TO THE MAYOR OF NEW-YORK.

Ship Dutchess of Gordon, Sandy-Hook,
April 16, 1776.

SIR: As the commander of his Majesty's ships-of-war on this station found it expedient for his Majesty's service to burn down the Pilot-House at the Hook, I am to acquaint you, all possible care has been taken of Mr. Adam Dobbs and his property; and that if you will send down a sloop to the Hook, it will be suffered to bring up to New-York Mr. Dobbs, his servants, and effects.

I am, with regard, sir, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM TRYON.

To David Matthews, Esquire, Mayor of the City of New-York.

CHRISTIAN JACOBSON TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Richmond County, April 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your favour of the 12th instant came safe to hand, the contents of which we have duly considered.

Rest assured, gentlemen, that nothing on our part shall be neglected in quartering the troops under the command of Lord Stirling, so far as circumstance and ability will admit of, and we shall endeavour to procure room for them, provided the distance is not limited. We shall exert our influence with the inhabitants, to give them all possible assistance.

We should have been very happy, had it been our lot to have had Major Dehart, with the troops under his command, continued among us, whose conduct has gained our greatest esteem. We have before experienced the severity of persons in power, and fond of exerting it, and on slight information, have taken upon them to carry inhabitants out of this County into another Government for trial, which we wish might be prevented.

Mr. Derby Doyle was last week apprehended, and sent to New-York—we know not by what authority. Although he may be an offender, and deserving of punishment, yet we cannot approve of such conduct in taking him out of the County. We have reason to believe that something has been alleged against this Committee and their proceedings. If so, we are ready to be examined.

We are, gentlemen, with respect, your most obedient humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

CHRISTIAN JACOBSON, Chairman.

To the Chairman and Members of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

ADMIRAL HOPKINS TO LIEUTENANT HINMAN.

Ship Alfred, at New-London, April 16, 1776.

SIR: You are to take charge of the Cabot, and proceed with her directly to Newport, and land the ten guns there to General Babcock; but in case you cannot get into Newport Harbour, then you are to go into the river eastward of Rhode-Island, and land your guns at Howland's Ferry, and send an express to Brigadier Babcock with an account of it as soon as possible. If you cannot get into either of the above ports, go up to Providence, and deliver the guns to Governour Cooke.

Yours, &c.,

ESECK HOPKINS.

To Elisha Hinman, Esq., Lieutenant of the Cabot.

MAJOR BASSETT TO COMMANDING OFFICER AT BOSTON.

Martha's Vineyard, April 16, 1776.

SIR: I have sent you, under the care of a Sergeant, four prisoners, taken aboard the Schooner Valent, at Martha's Vineyard, bound for Boston, viz: Edward Marsh, Master; the Mate, and two passengers in the employment of the Ministerial Forces.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

BARACHIAH BASSETT,
Major in the Provincial Forces.

To the Commander of the Continental Forces now stationed at, or near, Boston.

MAJOR BASSETT TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Martha's Vineyard, April 16, 1776.

Please to pay Sergeant Samuel Bassett the expenses of the guard, in conveying four prisoners taken on board the Schooner Valent, bound for Boston, in the employment of the Ministerial Forces, from Martha's Vineyard to Watertown.

From your most humble servant,

BARACHIAH BASSETT,
Major of the Provincial Forces.

To the Honourable Council of the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay. *

*IN COUNCIL, April 20, 1776.—Read, and the Prisoners having been examined before the Council, Ordered, That they be sent to Concord Jail; Edward Marsh and John Loring, two of said Prisoners, not to have the privilege of pen, ink, or paper, nor any person to be suffered to speak to them, but in the presence of the Keeper of said Jail. The other two persons, viz: Basil Cooper and David Lang, to have the liberty of that part of the Jail yard that is enclosed, during their good behaviour, and giving their parole in writing not to depart without the limits of the same, in failure of which, they are to be committed to close prison; and that a mittimus go out accordingly.

JOHN LOWELL, Deputy Secretary pro tem.

GENERAL WARD TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Boston, April 16, 1776.

SIR: As I am left in Boston with the command of the Continental Troops in this Colony, I think it my duty to acquaint the honourable House with my situation. Five regiments are in this Colony—two in Boston, one at Dorchester-Heights, one at Charlestown, and one at Beverley. These regiments were stationed by General Washington's order. In Boston there are not seven hundred men fit for duty, at Beverley, not three hundred. I by no means think it prudent to take any men from Beverley, as all the prizes taken from the enemy remain there uncondemned, and considering near fifty of that regiment are on board the Continental privateers. The troops that marched to the southward were hurried off. Chief of the cannon then fit for service were ordered away, that we had not many, if any, cannon in our most advanced posts to annoy the enemy with if we had been attacked; and the stores scattered from Medford to Dorchester; the teams so drained off that we are not able to procure teams to move the ordnance and ordnance stores as I could wish. The harbour is now open to our enemies. The men-of-war have it in their power to cannonade the town of Boston. If the enemy should return, is it not possible for them to carry the town of Boston, and the lines we have occupied for ten months, and scatter destruction in all the adjacent towns? Nay, is it not probable? If such should be the case they would get to themselves more honour and more advantage than by vanquishing any other Colony in New-England; and our disgrace and dishonour would be in proportion. I would not willingly exaggerate matters, and fear when there was no occasion for fear. This matter has lain heavy on my mind ever since they evacuated the town. It appears to me indispensably necessary that the channel should forthwith be stopped, in whole or in part, so as to render it impassable to strangers with large ships. There is nothing to hinder the men-of-war's men from landing in Braintree, Squantum, or Dorchester, in the night, and spreading destruction all around them, and getting off without much difficulty, provided they know our state; and we have reason to fear that many among us would readily give them information of the same. I would by no means pretend to dictate to the honourable House. I mention them with submission, and with a mind full of anxiety for the future well-being of my country; and am, sir, your very humble servant,

ARTEMAS WARD.*

SENTIMENTS RELATIVE TO FORTIFYING BOSTON HARBOUR.

The necessity of immediately securing the harbour of Boston is acknowledged by all. The neglect of it gives great anxiety and uneasiness. Whether the variety of sentiments, relative to the mode of execution, has not contributed to prevent it, I am not able to say. The fortifying near the town of Boston can have only that town for its object. Our other towns within Hull and Pulling-Point, also our navigation, must be almost as much exposed as ever. A plan that would take in the whole, if practicable, must certainly be the most eligible. That it is practicable, there is no doubt. There is no army to hinder our beginning at the entrance into the harbour. The places there are admirably well calculated for fortifying, and some of them are of such importance that, should the enemy take possession of them, we should have occasion to rue the day, and curse our neglect.

Hull is the outermost land next to the bay, surrounded by water, except by a long neck, or beach, connecting it with the main. On it are two eminences, well adapted for fortifying—the one, Point Alderton, one mile and three-eighths from Beacon-Island, the other, called Loring's Hill, or North-Head. This town is a situation of the greatest importance, being such as would enable the enemy, if they once possessed and fortified it, (with the help of their shipping,) to keep off any army that we could raise. Not forty thousand men, perhaps, could dislodge them. The land is one of the most fertile spots in the Province—would afford them pasturage, hay, grain, and vegetables of every kind; houses deserted by the inhabitants would afford them a safe lodging. They would have the entire command of Hingham, Weymouth, Braintree, and, indeed of the whole seaboard, unless measures to prevent this were then pursued; the expense of which would probably ten times exceed what need now be expended to prevent it. The possession of this, with Pectick's Island, would secure them a safe harbour within Nantasket Gut for ships from twenty to thirty guns; and they would be as well accommodated for distressing us, and making inroads into the country, as if they possessed Boston. Now, by considering what it would be to them, may sufficiently show what it might be to us, and the necessity of our immediately fortifying it, together with Pectick's Island, but a little distance from the north head of Hull, or Loring's Hill, so called, and not exceeding half a mile. Within musket shot of this, vessels passing through the gut must come; and within this gut, on the south side of Hull, there would be as fine a retreat for privateers, and other vessels, as can anywhere be found; from all which it appears that these two places ought to be instantly fortified.

For the more effectual security of the harbour, George's Island is the best of any in it. Was this strongly fortified, and well furnished with every necessary, with common success it would prevent any ship-of-war from passing. All ships-of-war, from twenty guns and upwards, must pass by it to go through the Narrows, or through the western passage, that is, by the Moon, and west end of Long-Island, and must come within musket shot of it. Fronting the channel, the land is so high that it would be difficult for a ship to bring her guns to bear, and they must be exposed to a fire in their course up as far as shot could reach them. If it is thought best to risk our defence upon forts, without blocking up the channel, it cannot well be effected without fortifying this Island; and a strong fortress here, with those on Hull and Pectick's Island, and the aid of two or three row-galleys, would probably secure the harbour, having first driven out the fifty-gun ship that now lies here, which, it is imagined, might be easily done.

But if George's Island is not fortified, the harbour may be secured by stopping up the Narrows by hulks or vaisseaux-de-frise, fortifying the Moon and west end of Long-Island. It is affirmed that there is a sufficient depth of water through the western passage for ships of any burden. Whether there is or not, may be easily ascertained; but if there is, what matter is it if the Narrows are stopped up forever? These two Islands, together with Pectick's Island and Hull, well fortified, and Narrows blocked up, would be a security to a greater part of the harbour, with the aid of galleys. These might keep off any vessels that would come through Broad Sound, and would be a noble protection to the Islands; and if such could be immediately obtained, they would greatly facilitate the operations on the Islands.

The foregoing plan, well executed, would be productive of innumerable advantages. It would secure Hull, (a rich spot of land,) give the inhabitants possession of their houses and improvements of their lands, and afford a fine harbour for vessels within Nantasket. We should be able to discover our enemy's ships long before they could injure us, Hull affording a most extensive prospect. The Islands in the harbour might be improved the present summer; from whence vast quantities of pasturage, hay, grain, and sheep, be raised, and cattle fattened; a constant communication, by water, to all the places within the harbour; Boston be supplied with fresh fish, and all other necessities, for which they must shortly be much straitened. A vast charge of land-carriage for goods brought into the out-ports might be saved. In short, so many are the advantages that would result herefrom, that it would compensate for any expense that we should be at; and if we mean to enjoy any commerce, it is indispensably necessary. The door of trade is now wide open; and who will venture to come into this port if, after having run the risk of seas and enemies, they must here be taken in the harbour? If we mean to avoid much larger expenses, and to secure ourselves against an *MAY 7, 1776.—The Committee of both Houses, to whom is referred the consideration of a Letter from General Ward, have considered the same, and, from various circumstances, are led to conclude that the probability of the enemy's return to this Colony is such as renders it highly necessary that part of the Militia be called to the lines near Boston with all possible despatch; and that due care be immediately taken to provide proper magazines of provisions, and sufficient supply of intrenching tools and camp utensils for their use and support.

All which is humbly submitted.

Per order:

J. WINTHROP.

enemy that may invade us, it cannot be omitted. The neglect may be fatal. Now there is nothing to oppose our doing it. As much work may be done in one day now as may be in ten when the enemy is annoying the labourers. And ought we not to take it for granted that what they can do they will do? Are they not unwearied in their exertions to ruin us? Are we to take for granted that they have not men, strength, or inclination to attack us again? Might we not easily be surprised under our perfect defenceless state, they knowing that our Army is removed? What scheme could they contrive more probable to effect our ruin than to return with their fleet and army? The measures at present pursued for fortifying the Castle, &c., tend to the security of Boston only; but this would secure the whole harbour, from within Pulling to Alderton-Point; and without this an army might land anywhere from Hull to Dorchester, and from Pulling-Point to Noddle's Island. These things being considered, it is imagined that no one could hesitate about the propriety of the measure. The present time is, perhaps, the only time. This opportunity once lost may never be regained. What may be done to-day it is not wisdom to leave until to-morrow.

ADDRESS OF THE PROVINCIAL SYNOD OF DUMFRIES TO THE KING.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty, the humble Address of the Provincial Synod of DUMFRIES.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's dutiful subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Provincial Synod of Dumfries, now assembled about the affairs of the church within our District, beg leave humbly to approach the throne, with hearts full of affection and loyalty, to declare in the strongest manner our warm and steady attachment to your Majesty's person, family, and Government, and to express our abhorrence of the rebellion now subsisting in your Colonies in North-America.

This rebellion we consider as unnatural towards the Parent State, and ungrateful to the best of Sovereigns, whose reign has been so much distinguished by wisdom, justice, and clemency.

We are happy to assure your Majesty, that the people under our charge entertain the same just sentiments; and we shall not fail, great sir, at this critical juncture, to enforce upon them principles of loyalty to your Majesty, and of submission to Government.

That the Divine Providence may so guide your Majesty's Councils, and prosper your arms, as that the present civil war may be brought to a speedy and happy conclusion, is the sincere prayer of, may it please your Majesty, your Majesty's faithful subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Provincial Synod of Dumfries.

Signed in our name and presence, this 17th day of April, 1776, by BRYCE JOHNSTON, Moderator.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN NORTH-CAROLINA, DATED APRIL 17, 1776.

I arrived here after a tedious journey. As I came through Virginia I found the inhabitants desirous to be independent from Britain. However, they were willing to submit their opinion on the subject to whatever the General Congress should determine. North-Carolina, by far, exceeds them, occasioned by the great fatigue, trouble, and danger the people here have undergone for some time past. Gentlemen of the first fortunes in this Province have marched as common soldiers; and, to encourage and give spirit to the men, have footed it the whole time. Lord Cornwallis, with seven regiments, is expected to visit us every day. Clinton is now in Cape-Fear, with Governour Martin, who has about forty sail of vessels, armed and unarmed, waiting his arrival. The Highlanders and Regulators are not to be trusted. Governour Martin has coaxed a number of slaves to leave their masters in the lower parts; everything base and wicked is practised by him. These things have totally changed the temper and disposition of the inhabitants that are friends to liberty; all regard or fondness for the King, or the nation of Britain, is gone; a total separation is what they want. Independence is the word most used. They ask, if it is possible that any Colony, after what has passed, can wish for a reconciliation? The Convention have tried to get the opinion of the people at large. I am told that in many Counties there were not one dissenting voice. Four new battalions are directed to be raised, which will make six in this Province.

We are endeavouring to form a Constitution, as it is thought necessary to exert all the powers of Government; you may expect it will be a popular one.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

[No. 121.]

Annapolis, April 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have had an alarm here of a very interesting nature. We think it advisable to communicate the intelligence by express, at the same time letting you know what we have done therein; and we are induced to expedite our despatch, because we do not know but that the Congress may have taken some steps in the same affair, copies having been forwarded to them from the Committee of Observation for Baltimore County, to whom the whole packet was transmitted by the Committee of Safety of Virginia, we think very improperly, as the address ought to have been made in the first place to us.

Some time past, Alexander Ross (a great scoundrel, we fear) applied to our Board for a permit to go to Lord Dunmore, under pretence of private business, and getting some money that was due to him, as he alleged. He brought us a letter from two gentlemen of the Congress, (Messrs. Alexander and Rogers,) which, no doubt R. Alexander remembers. We refused to give him any other permit than to the Committee of Safety of Virginia. Thither he went, we are told, but could not get a permit to Dunmore. He got a letter, it is said, to the Committee of Hampton; they declined giving him any passport. He went to Lord Dunmore without, and on his way back was stopped by Captain Barron, who took from him some letters to Governour Eden, particularly a circular letter; also, a private letter from Lord George Germaine, which, we take it for granted, you have seen, some of the Committee of Baltimore assuring us that they forwarded duplicates to the Congress. On receipt of these letters, (Monday afternoon,) we immediately gave orders to apprehend Ross, and the next morning a deputation from our Board, together with W. Paca, Esquire, (then in town,) waited on the Governour, showed him the copies of the intercepted letters, and requested a sight of his letter of the 27th of August to Lord Dartmouth. The Governour declared to us that he had sent away the copy of that letter, with all his other papers of consequence, last fall, and could not remember the particulars; but observed, we might be convinced there was nothing of a nature unfriendly to the peace of this Province, because the troops going to the southward were not ordered here. He asserted, also, upon his honour, that he had not endeavoured to inflame the Ministry, by traducing the characters of individuals; some he had spoken well of; others he had recommended as sufferers. The gentlemen of the Congress he had spoken of as acting within the line of moderation.

The deputation informed him they were instructed to ask his parole that he would not leave the Province till the meeting of the Convention. He complained of being unjustly suspected; gave us his letters from William Eden, Esquire, (his brother,) one of the Under Secretaries; also from Lord Dartmouth, (copies of which we had leave to take, and herewith transmit you.) He desired time (till this day, twelve o'clock) to give his definitive answer. He has given it, and we send you a copy thereof. We look upon it as giving his parole, in effect, that he will not leave the Province till the Convention, and will endeavour to promote the peace thereof in the mean time. He wishes to continue in that line of conduct as long as he can, consistently with his station, and will not leave the Province after the Convention, provided they will assure him that, when he finds he can no longer stay with peace and consistency, he may have leave to depart and carry his effects. This we promised to recommend to our friends in Convention. William Paca agrees with us in opinion that we may rest satisfied with this answer, and not call the Convention sooner than the 27th of May, unless something further should intervene.

You have probably heard that our Convention did not meet agreeable to their late adjournment. On Friday evening twenty-six members, who were collected, agreed to separate, and that G. Duvall should write a circular letter, informing the Delegates that the members assembled recommended the holding a Convention on the 27th of May. We enclose, also, a copy of their circular letter.

The indignity offered our Board by the Committee of Safety of Virginia, and the want of confidence in the Baltimore Committee, (to say nothing more harsh,) we cannot help complaining of. We know of no good cause for this insult in passing us by, nor can we conceive what motives could induce such treatment. We send you by Mr. Green (who will hand you this) thirteen hundred and seventy-two pounds seven pence, currency, in gold, for the Continental service. W. P. has delivered in the money he brought from the Treasury. Be pleased to forward the money-plates by Mr. Green, if not already sent.

We are, &c.

To the Deputies for Maryland in Congress.

P. S. The last ton of Continental powder, if not already sent to Chester, we would have ordered to Baltimore, having already sent powder to the Eastern-Shore. The copies of the Governour's letters, &c., are sent in confidence, and are not to be printed. Our answer to his Excellency's letter you shall receive by the next post.

The following is a copy of Lord DARTMOUTH's Letter to Governour EDEN.

[No. 4. Duplicate.]

Whitehall, July 5, 1775.

SIR: Your brother has been so obliging as to communicate to me, from time to time, such intelligence as you have transmitted to him respecting the affairs in Maryland, and about ten days ago I had the satisfaction to receive your letter of the 5th of May. I sincerely wish you may not have been too sanguine in your hopes that the time is not far distant when peace and harmony will be restored, and confidence re-established on a permanent basis; at the same time I observe, with satisfaction, what you say of the temper and moderation of the persons chosen to represent the Province of Maryland in the Continental Congress; and I am not without some reason to believe that there may be others in that Congress of the same disposition.

At present, however, the rebellious proceedings of the people, in most of the Colonies, wear the appearance of an actual revolt; and it is his Majesty's firm resolution, in consequence of the advices which he has received, that the most vigorous efforts should be made, both by sea and land, to reduce his rebellious subjects to obedience; and the proper measures are now pursuing, not only for augmenting the Army under General Gage, but also for making such addition to our naval strength in North-America as may enable Admiral Graves to make such a disposition of his fleet as that, besides the squadron necessary for the New-England station, there may be separate squadrons at New-York, within the Bay of Delaware, in Chesapeake-Bay, and upon the coast of Carolina. After what has passed, there can be no doubt what ought to be the plan of operations for the squadron upon the New-England station; and I think it necessary to acquaint you, for your own information, that Admiral Graves will be instructed to exert the most vigorous efforts for suppressing the rebellion now openly avowed and supported in that country, and to seize and detain all ships and vessels belonging to the inhabitants thereof, such only excepted as are the property of persons who are friends of Government, and have shown an attachment to the Constitution.

There is still some room to hope that the Colonies to the southward may not proceed to the same lengths with those of New-England. It is, however, his Majesty's intentions that the commanders of the separate squadrons I have mentioned should be instructed to prevent all commerce between the Colonies within their respective stations and any other places than Great Britain, Ireland, or his Majesty's Islands in the West-Indies; that they should receive on board and give protection to any officers of the Crown who may be compelled, by the violence of the people, to seek for such an asylum; and to proceed, as in case of a town in actual rebellion against such of the seaport towns, being accessible to the King's ships, as shall hereafter offer any violence to the King's officers, or in which any troops shall be raised, or military works erected other than by his Majesty's authority, or any attempts made to seize or plunder any publick magazine of arms or ammunition.

With regard to the plan of operations to be adopted by General Gage, it must depend upon his own judgment, and the opinion of the able Generals with him; and I have only to add, that it is his Majesty's express command that you do exert every endeavour, and employ every means in your power, to aid and support him and Admiral Graves in all such operations as they may think proper to undertake for carrying the King's orders into full execution, and restoring the authority of his Majesty's Government.

The attention you appear to have given to the preservation of peace and good order in your Government, is very much approved of by the King; and I have his Majesty's commands to assure you of his Royal acquiescence in your wish to return to England, when the state of your affairs in your Government will admit of it. In the mean time, I hope your private affairs here will not suffer by the very honourable resolution you have taken of remaining in Maryland so long as the present disorders continue.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

DARTMOUTH.

The two following are copies of Letters from WILLIAM EDEN, Esquire, one of the Under Secretaries of State, to His Excellency ROBERT EDEN, Esquire.

Downing-Street, November 15, 1775.

MY DEAR BOB: Tom Eden is so violent a patriot, that he will not let me write one word worth your reading, as he says that my accursed politicks have already brought a slur on the blood of our family. Take plain facts, therefore, without any comment. Lord Dartmouth has quitted the seals for the privy seal, which was vacated by the dismission of the Duke of Grafton, his grace having made a crane-necked turn in his politicks since last year. It is another of my disgraces to be honoured with the friendship of your new principal, who, I believe, will fill his department ably and actively, and is particularly intimate with the Commanders-in-Chief on your Continent. Lord Rockford has retired on honourable and amicable terms; we are removing to his office as senior, but retain the Northern Department. Lord Weymouth succeeds to the Southern; the other smaller promotions you will see in the papers. About four-fifths of the House of Commons continue as blindly devoted as your humble servant to a system of exertion that this nation can make beyond any nation in the world, and that we are fools enough to think the nation thoroughly disposed to make. You, who are a moderate man, and wish well and kindly to both parties, at the same time that you dislike the extremes of the language and the conduct pursued by both, will distinguish truth from falsehood in the strange jumble of misrepresentations with which our newspapers are stuffed. I shall only add, for the present, that I hope we shall all find some bridge at last to lead us back to our old good humour and prosperity; but we have a rough road to go over, before we can arrive at it.

Believe me ever, very affectionately, yours,

WILLIAM EDEN.

Downing-Street, December 24, 1775.

MY DEAR BROTHER: I am very unable to say a tenth part of what I ought to say to you this evening, when there is so much to be said, and so few opportunities of saying it; but my head is disabled by this influenza, (which has disabled us all by turns,) and my attention, as far as I am competent to employ it, is engaged by official business.

Our campaign this year has certainly not been brilliant; and the news (reported a few days ago, and confirmed this morning) of the taking of St. John's, completes our disgrace. We have wanted a few hard knocks to rouse us, and I trust that we are roused—at least we had the knocks; I also trust that we are not stunned by them, but animated to a just sense of the contest in which we are engaged, and determined (and let me add able) to take measures equal to its difficulties. You have rather a predilection for America. Let me repeat to you, however, what I have always said, and what the cheerful disposition of the people of this country, under all their disappointments in this business, confirms: "We are too steady and too resolute to give way, and either you or we must give way." If we were less steady than we are, we could still be too much for you, by the relative advantages which we enjoy, in spite of the great expenses to which you are putting us, in great naval equipments, and in more numerous armies than have ever yet been seen in America. It is a cursed business. We may be mistaken, but we think you, in general, in a state of phrensy. You will neither hear reason, nor act reasonably; and the only question now is, whether you will be brought back to common sense and general happiness, or whether you shall succeed in destroying both us and yourselves. As for your Excellency, individually, you are behaving in a manner to deserve great credit. You are acting the dignified, determined part, and are showing yourself a friend to both sides of the Atlantick. You have all due honour for it here, and I hope you will be treated with equal candour on your own side of the Atlantick.

The bill, which had the Royal assent yesterday, puts an end to all commercial intercourse between us. I hope the Southern countries will begin to see the consequences of continuing upon themselves the miseries which that bill must bring on them, and that they will learn (what they might have learned long ago) that if they succeed in their present united enterprise, they will immediately find themselves in a state of subjection to the New-Englanders, and that the longer they persevere in that enterprise, (if they are fortunate enough in the end to fail in it,) the more they must suffer.

For other matters, I must refer you to the papers from the post-office; and remain, very affectionately, yours,

WILLIAM EDEN.

The following is the copy of a Letter from His Excellency ROBERT EDEN, Esq., to CHARLES CARROLL, J. HALL, and WILLIAM PACA, Esquires.

Annapolis, April 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: However unwelcome might be your errand, your polite behaviour to me yesterday merits my acknowledgments; and, on mature consideration of the proposal you made to me, I find it incumbent on me to tell you that I will not accord to it; nor can I, whilst I act, in any degree, as Governour of this Province, give my parole to walk about in it a prisoner at large, under any obligation whatever. The necessity must be obvious of my ceasing to act as Governour, should I become a prisoner. Neither will I voluntarily give you any satisfaction on that head, further than that I had, and have, no intention, during these times, of leaving the Province whilst my continuing here can, in my own opinion, tend to preserve its tranquillity. My resolution was—as the letters you have of mine show—to continue here whilst I could serve the Province; nor shall the indignity now offered to me alter it. I shall persevere in my line of duty by what I think the rule of right, but not without some chagrin at knowing myself, unmeritedly, the object of suspicion; although I have the satisfaction to think that a considerable part of the most respectable persons in the Province entertain a very different opinion of me than is to be inferred from your proposed arrest.

May I not challenge you to say to the world if any troops have arrived at, or any hostile measures been proceeded in against this Province, from any request of mine, or information from me to the Secretary of State?

I have above told you my resolution of continuing in my station as long as permitted, or the ostensible form of the established Government can contribute to preserve the peace of the Province; and I will add one further assurance, in hopes it may be satisfactory to you, that, as your Convention is to meet shortly, they shall find me here, and willing to continue acting in the same line I have hitherto done, so long as Maryland can reap any peaceful benefits from my service; provided I can have assurances that my peaceable departure shall not be impeded whenever I find my remaining any longer here unnecessary, or that my private affairs at home indispensably demand my return.

Consistent with my honour and insulted station, I cannot add more, but that, if made a prisoner, I shall consider myself treated as an enemy, and such a proceeding as a breach of that confidence I have implicitly reposed in you; which

I thought my conduct, and the publick declaration of the Convention justified.

I am, gentlemen, with respect, your obedient, humble servant,

ROBERT EDEN.

To Charles Carroll, Esq., Barrister; John Hall, Esq.; and William Paca, Esq.

Answer thereto by the Committee.

[No. 120.]

Annapolis, April 18, 1776.

SIR: In times of publick distress and convulsions, when a free people are threatened with a deprivation of their civil liberty, exertions for its preservation, influenced by the purest principles, and conducted with all possible attention to form and ceremony, we hope will not be considered as an indignity or insult to any rank or station in the community. The proceeding which your Excellency reprehends in your letter addressed to Charles Carroll, John Hall, and William Paca, Esquires, and communicated by them to our Board, arose from an impression that we, who are entrusted with the publick safety, should pursue, with vigilance, every effectual measure, though the danger to be guarded against may rest only in possibility. The intercepted letters from Administration to your Excellency, we own, furnish grounds for conjecture and apprehension only of your having held an injurious correspondence; and, whilst we reflect on the general tenour of your Excellency's conduct, the friendly disposition you have often manifested, and the several favourable and impartial representations you have made to Administration of the temper and principles of the people of this Province, we sincerely lament the necessity of the times, which, urging us to guard against every possibility of danger, forced us to a measure so disagreeable to, and which may prove an unmerited treatment of your Excellency.

We acknowledge, sir, we know of no information you have given Administration countenancing or encouraging the introduction of troops into this Province; nor do we know of any measures whatever to have been concerted or pursued by your Excellency injurious to this Province, or America.

We thank your Excellency for your resolution of continuing in your station as long as permitted, or the ostensible form of the established Government can contribute to preserve the peace of the Province; and we cheerfully acquiesce in your Excellency's assurance, that, as the Convention is shortly to meet, they shall find you here. As far as our influence extends with that respectable body, it shall not be wanting to remove every obstruction to your peaceable departure whenever your Excellency's continuance here shall become inconsistent with your instructions, or your private affairs shall demand your return.

With ardent wishes for a speedy reconciliation upon honourable and constitutional terms, we have the honour to be, with sincere respect, your most obedient, humble servants.

THOMAS RICHARDSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Georgetown, April 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 19th of February did not come to hand until Friday last. I am very sensible of the honour the Convention did me by appointing me Supervisor to the Saltpetre Works for this District; but being myself a stranger to the process necessary for making that article, and not knowing any person who understood it that would undertake to carry on the business, I thought it my duty to resign, in hopes the Committee for this District might know, and would appoint some person qualified for the undertaking. Accordingly, some time before the rising of the Convention, I delivered Mr. John Murdock (one of our Committee) a newspaper in which was the resolve of the Convention concerning Saltpetre Works, desiring him to show it to the Committee, and inform them of my resignation; but have not heard of any other persons being appointed.

Having this occasion to trouble you, I must beg leave to intrude as much farther on your patience as to inform you that the Convention having appointed Mr. William Deakins to a Majority, and Mr. Aquila Johns to the naval service of the Province, the Georgetown Militia was left without any subaltern officer. The company have nominated Mr. Alexander McFadon First, and Mr. John Peters Second Lieutenants; and Mr. Edward Gale Ensign. If those gentllemen should meet your approbation, I hope you will honour them with commissions.

I am your most obedient, humble servant,

THOMAS RICHARDSON.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM LEWESTOWN, DATED APRIL 17, 1776.

Lewestown is, at this time, made up of officers and soldiers; and the people, altogether, seem determined to defend our little place. As for Tories, there are none such among us. That infamous name is quite done away since danger comes so near us. The Roebuck still remains in our Road all alone, and has, I believe, lost her tender: a few days ago some say they saw a sloop take her to the southward of our Cape. We have between fifty and a hundred men on guard night and day at the Light-House, Arnold's, and the Creek's mouth; and are determined to watch them closely. They made application to fish on our beach. We would not let them, but desired them to go to Newfoundland for that purpose. If they should attempt to fish on the beach, we are determined to show them Yankee play, as we did on Easter Sunday, when we were unloading Captain Field.* I do assure you that, if you were here, you would be pleased with the spirit of the people.

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
Philadelphia, April 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Yesterday morning, just before the meeting of Congress, the letters from Baltimore, which occasioned the resolution of yesterday, came to the hands of the President. By the same express, and, as I believe, under the same cover, came an anonymous letter, referring to a copy therein enclosed from General Lee to Mr. Samuel Purviance. I saw and read the copy, which was in Purviance's handwriting. Lee strongly urged the immediate seizing and securing of the Governour.

After the minutes of the preceding day were read, the President began reading the anonymous letter; but he had not proceeded far before he came to a part desiring that it might not be made known to the Congress, but, as I think, to such only as the President might think proper to trust with the contents. The President hesitated; for he had not before read the letter, and seemed desirous of running his eye over it; but, on being desired to read out, he did so.

From the enclosure above-mentioned, (as many expressions in the letter, and Mr. Purviance being the hero of the tale, which was told in the first person,) I had not the least doubt but that Purviance was the author; and Mr. Andrew Allen, who saw the letter, and is acquainted with Purviance's handwriting, says it was his. The letter informs that the writer had impressed on General Lee, on his way to Virginia, an idea that the Council of Safety was timorous and inactive, and represents the Council of Safety, and Convention too, as being afraid to execute the duties of their stations. His own and the conduct of the Convention, on an affair that you must remember, he contrasts to the disadvantage of the latter, whose inaction he imputes to want of spirit. He speaks of the orders he gave Captain Nicholson on the late alarm, and how the Council of Safety was alarmed and frightened at the spirit and boldness of them; represents himself as an object against whom the intentions of the Council of Safety are levelled, and, in proof, recites a conversation with, or saying of one of them, to the effect that he was a warm man, or a hot-headed man, whose power must be pulled down, or he would throw things into confusion.

* PHILADELPHIA, April 17, 1776.—From Sussex County, on Delaware, we learn that a small schooner, the property of Mr. Nehemiah Field, of Lewestown, returning from St. Eustatia, with some stores, and having information of the Roebuck, man-of-war, being in the Road, came to anchor a few miles southward of the Light-House, and sent a messenger to Lewes, desiring assistance to discharge the cargo. A company of Continental Troops, of the Delaware Battalion, stationed at Lewes, were immediately ordered to march to the assistance of the schooner. In the mean time, the schooner, perceiving the man-of-war's tender bearing down upon her, endeavoured to get into Indian River; but not effecting it, she ran ashore near to Mr. Henry Fisher's pilot-boat, (which some time since had been run ashore by the Third Lieutenant of the man-of-war and three hands, who were all taken prisoners.) The company having arrived, got behind the vessels on shore, and waited for the tender; which, when within two hundred yards distance, fired a broadside. A hot fire from both sides ensued, which lasted near two hours; and the tender was finally obliged to sheer off, without having effected her purpose; but, on the contrary, with the loss of several men, as many were seen to fall. The cargo was safely landed from the schooner, and secured, without the loss of a man, either killed or wounded. The Militia officers at Lewes behaved with that courage and magnanimity which does honour to their country.

As I heard the letter read but once, I cannot undertake to repeat expressions with exactness; but I think I have preserved the sentiments, and have not exaggerated in anything; and, on the whole, I esteem it a vile, injurious calumny, calculated, like his conversation with General Lee, to spread suspicion and distrust of the only Executive in our Province.

If I am not mistaken, the letter mentions, further, that some gentlemen were sent from Baltimore, or were, by him, proposed to be sent to Annapolis, who should engage the officer commanding the troops there to secrecy, under oath, and then endeavour to get his assistance to execute what you are requested to do by the resolution. This, I suppose, may be easily traced.

As soon as the letter was read, a motion was made to send the original, or a copy of it, to you; which was warmly supported. But it was put off till to-day, to make way for the consideration of the subject of the express; and in the mean time, all was ordered to be secret. Messrs. Stone and Alexander, who had been delayed in writing letters by the post, came into the Congress in this stage of the affair, and are, as well as myself, privy to the after transactions.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

Philadelphia, April 17, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 9th of March, with the enclosure, was duly received, and laid before Congress, in whose name I beg leave to congratulate you on the success of your expedition.

Your account of the spirit and bravery shown by the men affords them the greatest satisfaction, and encourages them to expect similar exertions of courage on every future occasion. Though it is to be regretted that the Glasgow man-of-war made her escape, yet, as it was not through any misconduct, the praise due to you and the other officers is undoubtedly the same.

I have it in charge from Congress to direct that you send a complete list and state of the stores taken and brought from Providence, with the sizes, &c.; and that the cannon, and such other of the stores as are not necessary for the fleet, be landed and left at New-London.

Wishing you the greatest success and happiness, I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Commodore Hopkins, at New-London.

The following extract of a letter from Antigua, I hope, will be of service to you. With that view I send it.

"Antigua, March 26, 1776.

"The third division of transports will leave Antigua in a few days—it is said for New-York, under convoy of an old East-India ship, mounting sixteen guns. There will be six in number."

MEMORIAL OF COLONEL FORD.

To His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Forces in AMERICA.

The Memorial of Col. JACOB FORD, Jun., humbly sheweth:

That whereas, in consequence of a letter received from the Earl of Stirling, then commander of the Continental forces in this city, directed to the Committee of the County of Morris, requesting an immediate detachment of three hundred men from the Militia of that County, to assist in fortifying and defending this place against the enemies of American liberty, your Memorialist, then and as yet Colonel of the First Regiment of Militia in said County, warm in the cause of his country, and anxiously forward to do his duty as Colonel of said Regiment, did immediately despatch to this place, under the command of Major Doughty, one hundred and fifty men, being his proportion of the three hundred men demanded from said County, firmly relying on the promise made by his Lordship in the above recited letter, of the men's receiving the same provision and pay with the Continental Troops in the Middle Department.

Your Memorialist would beg leave to represent to your Excellency, that the above men, under Major Doughty, did join the Continental Army in New-York, and there did faithfully serve (as by a certificate from Lord Stirling fully appears) for the space of eighteen days; for which services, and also for the subsistence of the men whilst on their march, there is now due to them the sum of two hundred and eighty-nine pounds, which sum still remains unpaid.

Your Memorialist would further beg leave to represent to your Excellency, that much jealousy subsisted in the minds of the above men, upon marching, as to the propriety of the application from his Lordship to the County Committee, and thence many hastily concluded that the application being improper, the pay and subsistence might be uncertain. Your Memorialist, fearful of any delay, and anxious to remove every doubt in the minds of his men, became surety, and pledged his faith that the men should be paid at some short day after being discharged from the service, or become Paymaster himself.

Your Memorialist would therefore further beg leave to represent to your Excellency, that, as much depends upon the Militia being regularly paid, your Excellency would be pleased to point out some ways and means for the speedy payment of the above debt of two hundred and eighty-nine pounds, that all jealousy may be removed from the minds of the good people of the County of Morris, when called forth to any future service.

And your Memorialist, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JACOB FORD, JUN.

New-York, April 17, 1776.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, April 17, 1776.

SIR: I have it in charge from Congress to direct that two companies of Colonel Dayton's Battalion of New-Jersey Troops be stationed at Cape-May, for the protection of the property and navigation in that quarter. You will please to issue the necessary orders accordingly.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington, at New-York.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Head-Quarters, April 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: There is nothing that could add more to my happiness than to go hand in hand with the civil authority of this, or any other Government to which it may be my lot to be ordered; and if, in the prosecution of such measures as shall appear to me to have a manifest tendency to promote the interest of the great American cause, I shall encounter the local convenience of individuals, or even of a whole Colony, I beg it may be believed that I shall do it with reluctance and pain; but in the present important contest the least of two evils must be preferred.

That a continuance of the intercourse which has hitherto subsisted, between the inhabitants of this Colony and the enemy on board the ships-of-war, is injurious to the common cause, requires no extraordinary abilities to prove. A moment's reflection not only evinces this truth, but points out the glaring absurdity of such procedure. We are to consider ourselves either in a state of peace or war with Great Britain. If the former, why are our ports shut up, our trade destroyed, our property seized, our towns burnt, and our worthy and valuable citizens led into captivity, and suffering the most cruel hardships? If the latter, my imagination is not fertile enough to suggest a reason in support of the intercourse.

In the weak and defenceless state in which this city was, some time ago, political prudence might justify the correspondence which subsisted between the country and the enemy's ships-of-war; but as the largest part of the Continental troops is now here, and as many strong works are erected and erecting for the defence of the city and harbour, these motives no longer exist, but are absorbed in others of a more important nature.

To tell you, gentlemen, that the advantages of an intercourse of this kind are altogether on the side of the enemy, whilst we derive not the smallest benefit from it, would be obvious to every one. It is, indeed, so glaring, that even the enemy themselves must despise us for suffering it to be continued; for, besides their obtaining supplies of every kind, by which they are enabled to continue in your harbours, it also opens a regular channel of intelligence, by which they are, from time to time, made acquainted with the number and strength of our works, our strength, and all our movements, by which they are enabled to regulate their own plans, to our great disadvantage and injury. For the truth of this I could produce instances; but as it may be the subject of future discussion, I shall decline it at present.

It would, gentlemen, be taking up too much of your time to use further arguments in proof of the necessity of putting an immediate and total stop to all future correspondence with the enemy. It is my incumbent duty to effect this, convinced as I am of the disadvantages resulting from it; and it cannot be thought strange or hard that, under such conviction, I should be anxious to remove an evil which may contribute not a little to the ruin of the great cause we are engaged in, and may, in its effects, prove highly detrimental to this Colony in particular.

In effecting the salutary purposes above-mentioned, I could wish for the concurrence and support of your honourable body. It will certainly add great weight to the measures adopted, when the civil authority co-operates with the military, to carry them into execution. It will also redound much to the honour of the Government, and of your Committee in particular; for the world is apt to judge from appearances; and while such correspondence exists, the reputation of the whole Colony will suffer in the eyes of their American brethren.

It is therefore, gentlemen, that I have taken the liberty to address you on this important subject, relying upon your zeal and attachment to the cause of American liberty for your assistance, in putting a stop to this evil, and that you will co-operate with me in such measures as shall be effectual, either to prevent any future correspondence with the enemy, or in bringing to condign punishment such persons as may be hardy and wicked enough to carry it on otherwise than by a prescribed mode, if any case can possibly arise to require it.

I have the honour to be, with the utmost respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To William Paulding, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety of the Colony of New-York.

DUTCHESS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Dutchess County Committee, April 17, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to your requisition, we now return you a state of the four Companies of Continental forces raising in this County for the defence of the Colony.

Captain Rosekrans is already, with his company, stationed at the fortifications in the Highlands. As we had no opportunity of seeing Captain Rosekrans, we could not procure an exact return; but from information, the company must be almost, if not entirely, complete.

Captain Swartwout has sent off his men from time to time, as they enlisted, to the Highlands; and having his officers recruiting in different parts of the County, it was impossible, upon so short notice, to furnish us with a proper return, though make no doubt but that, by this time, he must have upwards of fifty men.

Captain Child, who succeeds Captain Barker, (the latter having resigned,) received a warrant from the Committee of Safety only last week; and we find, by the tenour of it, he is indulged with three weeks to make his return. However, the firm activity of this gentleman, and being generally well liked, we imagine he will speedily raise a company.

Captain Pearse, before this comes to hand, will have waited on the Committee of Safety, to make his return and receive their directions in person.

We remain, most respectfully, your very humble servants. By order of the Committee:

EGBERT BENSON, Chairman.

To William Paulding, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

ADMIRAL HOPKINS TO GENERAL BABCOCK.

New-London, April 17, 1776.

SIR: I this moment received an express from General Washington—the contents are enclosed. Have sent the Cabot with ten pieces of cannon, with orders to deliver them to you as soon as possible. Have given the Captain orders to land them in Newport, if possible, if not, at Howland's Ferry. Your own prudence will suggest what steps may be necessary for the publick safety.

I am, with great respect, your humble servant,

ESECK HOPKINS.

To Henry Babcock, Esq., Brigadier-General and Commander of the Troops on Rhode-Island.

ADMIRAL HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-London, April 17, 1776.

HONoured SIR: Enclosed you have a copy of General Washington's letter of the 14th, received by express. Your own prudence will suggest what steps will be necessary for the publick safety.

I am, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

ESECK HOPKINS.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the Colony of Connecticut.

COLONEL SMALLWOOD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

April 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Adams yesterday morning took Alexander Ross, at Chestertown, and immediately afterwards fell in with Ensign Chambers. They have conducted him to this place; and Captain Adams now waits upon you for further orders respecting the prisoner.

I am, your very obedient servant,

W. SMALLWOOD.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

ANDREW BEALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Bladensburgh, April 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: It is with reluctance I take up my pen to address you on a matter I would wish to be silent on, were I not urged to do it by the strongest entreaties of a company inferior to none in the Province, which I respect, and which I have the highest satisfaction in obliging. My resigning has thrown the company into great confusion and concern, for fear Mr. William Hamilton, my First Lieutenant, should take place as Captain, who they look upon not to be worthy, or in any respect proper for that office; but perhaps may be recommended by the Colonel, through prejudice to me, as I would not condescend to serve under him. If it so happens that he should be appointed Captain, it will be the utter destruction of the company, as they are determined not to serve under him.

I would not willingly interfere with the gentleman's private character, therefore shall only relate the matter to your Honours how he came to be appointed Lieutenant; which was, as he had been a soldier several years in the last war, I imagined he must have been better qualified than any other person I had the opportunity of getting at that time; however, found myself much deceived, for he was as ignorant as those who had never seen a musket thrown in their lives, and surprisingly awkward in every respect, and still continues so.

There are many young men in the company who are much better qualified, in every respect, and I believe as many so as in any company in the Province. Mr. Hamilton is a poor man, and has a wife and several children, and no person to work for them but himself, therefore cannot make the appearance that an officer ought to make; is a person of no education, neither is he qualified in any respect whatever to keep company with the other gentlemen officers, which is a material objection by the company, as they would not choose to serve under an officer who could not keep company with, and be looked upon by other officers, but more particularly, as he is esteemed a very improper person in other respects. And, of more consequence to those under him, there are other objections, which I do not choose to meddle with; yet I hope have said enough to evince to you how very displeasing he is to the company, and the ill consequences that might arise in case of his appointment; and what I can with much truth and certainty assure would come to pass, i. e. the breaking up of a company of much consequence.

Relying on your Honours' wisdom in not appointing a person so disagreeable, (as nothing but my particular desire to have the company kept together, and to be satisfied, could have induced me to write in this manner,) I remain, with the utmost respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

ANDREW BEALL.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

[No. 122.]

Annapolis, April 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer, Captain Walter Hanson, of Port-Tobacco, has been recommended to us by Mr. Hooe, as a genius in the mechanical way, and as a person that may be of service to this Province in gaining a proper knowledge of erecting and working powder-mills, or some other useful and necessary manufacture. The errand he comes on will, no doubt, recommend him to your notice; and, also, entitle him to every aid and assistance in your power, to attain such a laudable end.

We are, &amp;c.

To the Deputies for Maryland, in Congress.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read April 22, 1776.]

Annapolis, April 18, 1776.

SIR: Your letter, enclosing the resolves of Congress, was this day delivered to us. We were furnished with the intercepted letters some time before the receipt of yours, and had taken such measures as, in our judgment, were competent to the occasion. To dissolve the Government, and subvert the Constitution, by the seizure and imprisonment of the Governour, we conceive to be a measure of too much delicacy and magnitude to be adopted without calling and consulting the Convention of this Province. We saw no necessity urging us to such an extreme; and were determined, therefore, not to expose the Province to immediate anarchy and convulsion, if an assurance could be obtained from the Governour that he would not depart before our Convention met, to decide upon this important business. He cheerfully gave this assurance, and voluntarily put into our hands all the letters he had received from the Secretary of State since September last, and offered us the inspection of the papers in his possession; assuring us his letters, antecedent to that time, had been transmitted to Great Britain, on prospect of his private affairs requiring his presence there; and explained and vindicated his conduct in such a manner, that we feel no apprehension of danger from him. Under these circumstances we cannot comply with the request of Congress, in any other manner than we have done, and flatter ourselves they will rest satisfied, and consider us excusable.

Mr. Ross was apprehended by our order, on Monday evening last; we shall have him in custody, and examine him fully.

Permit us, sir, to assure you that we are determined to maintain the rights and liberties of this country, at every hazard of life and property, and will vigorously pursue every measure which the defence of America shall require.

We have the honour to be, your most obedient, humble servants.

By order and on behalf of the Council of Safety of the Province of Maryland.

To the Honourable the President of Congress.

MARYLAND DELEGATES TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, Thursday, April 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We moved yesterday in Congress, that the letter referred to by Mr. Johnson should be immediately transmitted to you, that you might have an opportunity of vindicating your honour against the malicious charges made by the writer. This produced a warm debate, which lasted for several hours. We insisted (and were supported by several gentlemen) that the letter, containing the most severe reflections upon you, as a publick body, ought not to be concealed; that it was absolutely necessary, in the present state of our affairs, that the dignity of the Executives of every Province should be supported, if properly conducted; and if there rested a suspicion that any publick body, either from weakness or want of integrity, omitted or refused to execute the trust committed to them, it ought to be made known to their constituents, that the power might be placed in more safe hands; that the exertions of the letter-writer had already produced, in part of the Council of Virginia, distrust and suspicion of you; that we had the most convincing proofs, upon all occasions, of your integrity, vigilance, and activity in the common cause; and, therefore, esteemed it our duty to insist that justice might be done to your injured characters. It was argued against the motion, that the letter was confidential; that it had raised no suspicions in the Congress of your zeal or integrity, because they had reposed the highest confidence in you immediately afterwards, by the recommendation sent by the return of the express; that the mischief, which would be produced by communicating the letter would be greater than any benefit which could be expected from it; and that the President was not obliged to produce the letter before the Congress, to take order thereon, although it had been read in the House. Upon the question whether the President should be requested to lay the letter before Congress, five Colonies voted in the negative, three in the affirmative, and one divided.

We conceived this treatment to you, and our Province, to be cruel and ungenerous to the last degree. The obligation to secrecy expired yesterday; and we immediately determined to give you such a state of this transaction as our memories supply us with; and Mr. Johnson committed to writing what passed on the first day. We this morning waited on Mr. Hancock to demand the letter, but he refused to see us.

Thus the affair rests at present; and we cannot delay communicating it to you longer. We have ordered an express immediately to set out for Annapolis, and have not the least doubt but what you will take the proper steps to vindicate your honour against the foul calumny of Mr. Purviance, who has dared to detract from your patriotism and spirit. We are determined at all hazards to support you; and, though very sorry for the occasion, hope you have complied with the recommendation of Congress, by securing Mr. Eden and his papers. If he has conducted himself fairly, an examination will do him credit; if otherwise, we ought to know it, and guard against his unfriendly endeavours. We shall write you by the post; and are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN.,
T. STONE,
R. ALEXANDER.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

REMARKS ON A PLAN OF THE AMERICAN COMPACT, PROPOSED BY AN ENGLISH AMERICAN.

New-York, April 18, 1776.

No reasonable objection can be offered to the first and second articles of this plan. The third proposes that the Crown shall appoint officers "during good behaviour." Who is to judge of their behaviour, and remove them upon misbehaviour? Doubtless the King in Council. If he should judge that good behaviour in his officers which America knows and feels to be abominably bad behaviour, what remedy has she by this plan? And that this will frequently be the case, past experience convinces. The Earl of Dummore's infamous behaviour has been justified by the King; so was Bernard's, Hutchinson's, and all the rest of the King's wicked Ministers; and so it will be, so long as an arbitrary and inequitable, partial spirit reigns in the British Court, which, to all appearance, will not soon be expelled. America can have no security against the greatest and perpetuated vexation from the King's officers, unless she has a voice in their appointment, and the power of renovating them upon misbehaviour.

The fourth article is admissible. The fifth proposes a General Congress to manage the general affairs of all the Colonies. This has a plausible appearance, but it is a felo de se; for it is added at the close of the article, "but as absolute power might in time be assumed by this Congress, were it without any check, its acts therefore should go home for the Royal assent. The Crown to have no power to reject them, or the Provincial acts, unless done within three years after their passing here." That is, to prevent the Congress from assuming absolute power, let them have no power at all to do any one thing, except what the King, from time to time, wills to have done, and let him have three years to consider upon every act before he either affirms or annuls it. And this restriction, this planner would have laid upon all the Provincial Assemblies too. A fine Constitution, indeed; an excellent device to screen the rights and liberties of America against all future attempts of the Crown and British Ministry! That she may henceforth be effectually secured from the encroachments of the Crown, let the Crown be invested with absolute power to restrain her from passing any one act for her own security or benefit, either in Congress or Provincial Assemblies, but what the King, in his sovereign pleasure, allows her to do, from time to time. This entirely undermines the security seemingly given her in the second article: "Parliament shall not intermeddle with the internal police of the Colonies." No! But the King and his Ministry shall, as far as they please. Let the Colonies provide for their own internal government. Yes, as far as the King pleases, and in such manner as he, with the British Council, approves, and no further. Suppose the Provinces give a bounty to encourage any kind of manufactures, or lay a duty on any luxuries imported from Britain, or make acts to prohibit the importation of African Slaves into the Colonies, &c., &c., will the British Council advise the King to confirm them?

The sixth article proposes that America should agree that the King shall have a right to keep up a Standing Army of ten or twelve thousand men in America in times of peace. Yes, give him a constitutional right to drive in a small wedge, and he will be able after that to get in a bigger. No, the article says, "more than this stipulated number the Crown should not send without the consent of the General Congress." By such an article, America would invite the British Ministry to use all their interest to corrupt the members of her Congress, and make it their interest to do so; and they would probably succeed by degrees. At first, draw them in to consent to fifteen thousand, then to twenty. When by this their constituents are alarmed, and themselves brought into danger, they will readily consent to the introduction of thirty or forty thousand, and we shall soon have all our Tories in the Army, prepared to cut us off. This article opens a door to the tyranny of Britain and a military Government, under the pretence of shutting the door against it. If America agrees to this, she is lost.

The eighth article proposes, "that America should agree to pay the King a perpetual duty of eight per cent. upon all merchandises imported from foreign countries." For what? To pay Britain for protecting her by a Standing Army, kept up within her in times of peace, when she neither wants nor desires it, and would be much safer without it; and because she is to receive the duties arising from the regulation of trade? Her trade is regulated and restrained by the Parliament, to Britain's great advantage, and to America's great prejudice, and this without any charge to Britain; so America owes her nothing for this. The duties America pays upon the regulations of her trade, to her own disadvantage, she ought in all reason and equity to pay to herself. And this plan proposes to give them to her; but then it artfully takes them back double from her by other duties payable to Britain. This plan is a betrayer of America's liberty and safety; whether designedly so or not, no ways concerns the publick to inquire.

REMARKS ON THE PROPOSED AMERICAN COMPACT.

New-York, April 18, 1776.

A gentleman, who styles himself An English American, in his plan of compact, proposes, thirdly: "The Crown shall appoint the officers of Government during good behaviour, &c." But whence have all our troubles sprung? Have not our Governours, appointed by the Crown, been the principal source of all our calamities, by their ambition and covetousness, their misrepresentation and calumny? They want larger salaries, and Regulars to keep the people in awe; and instead of being the fathers of their people, have been their betrayers, oppressors, and murderers. The Continent would have been in peace, had it not been for these appointed Governours. It never was worth while to take up arms at all, unless these can be expelled. They are like the roots of a cancer, which, if not entirely eradicated, soon spread as bad as ever. These men, if reconciliation was immediately to take place, would never rest until they had embroiled us again. They have had their reign already, and have been banished for their oppression and tyranny. Let us never receive them, nor any of their order again, who have proved such vipers. We should be fools, indeed, if, after all their schemes to subdue the several Colonies to arbitrary power, and even to spirit up the Indians and Negroes to murder us in our peaceable habitations, we should ever suffer them to remain among us.

But they shall continue only during good behaviour. But who is to judge of their good behaviour? The good people of the Massachusetts-Bay judged that Bernard and Hutchinson did not behave well, and preferred a complaint against them to his Majesty. But what did it avail? The Governours were acquitted, and the complaint dismissed as a false and scandalous libel. If Governours are diligent and resolute in enlarging the power of the Crown, and lessening the liberties of the subject, it is to no purpose at all to complain against them. Sundry noblemen in Scotland, in the reign of Charles II., accused Lauderdale of many horrid oppressions and unheard-of cruelties; but the King, after hearing the case, acquitted him, saying, though they had proved many damned things against him, yet they had not proved that he had intended to lessen his prerogative. Nay, the bloody Marquis of Antrim, who encouraged and headed the Irish Papists in the massacre, when they murdered almost all the Protestants of Ireland, was acquitted by the express order of his Majesty. Now, there cannot be worse men in this world than the Marquis of Antrim, Lauderdale, Hutchinson, and Bernard.

In article sixth: He thinks it would be useful for us, that the King should have a right to keep ten or twelve thousand troops to repel any sudden invasion, &c. But a Standing Army is one of the greatest grievances. The Praetorian Guards at Rome were, I believe, not a larger body, if so large; yet they kept the whole world in slavery for many ages, raised any one to be Emperor whom they pleased, and cut him off if he happened to disoblige them, and set up another in his room. Yet there were ten times as many soldiers in the Empire as are now in America and Great Britain together, whom this handful of Praetorian Guards thus insulted and abused for sundry centuries. A Standing Army have great power to do mischief and enslave countries, because they are already raised, and disposed to follow an ambitious leader, where there is no danger. They are greedy of large fees and plunder. As to their repelling a sudden invasion, they have no great inclination for that business. Living in idleness, they become effeminate and cowardly, and ready to flee at the approach of a brave enemy. Their chief business seems to be drunkenness and lewdness, to insult the inhabitants, promote riot, and debauch the women. Let Boston tell the great benefit she has derived from having two or three regiments quartered there.

Professor Duncan, speaking of the Armies of the several nations of Europe, says, "that the soldiers are the dregs of every nation." This was not suggested by passion and prejudice, but fact. (See his Cæsar's Commentaries.) What benefit, security, or defence, could we expect from those who are the dregs of mankind? They ought not to be named with the Provincials and Militia, who are freemen, sons of liberty, property, and bravery. Why should the riches of a country be expended to support a useless Army of debauchees.

There is no doubt but there are great deficiencies in the regulation of the Militia. The ancient Greeks served till they were seventy; the Romans till they were forty-five years of age. Perhaps a medium between these two extremities would be best. Many will often do as good service at fifty-five, as ever they could. But in many places, even in New-England, you will scarcely find a man that is forty years of age. This method tends to weaken the country. Suppose, after they had arrived at thirty-five or forty years of age, they were to be advanced into a more respectable body, or had some little privilege granted them, to raise their ambition, but still kept in the roll. Surely the Assemblies should take this affair into immediate consideration. The Militia do not train enough to make them expert at arms. Some writers propose that they should be trained steadily two years; others, that they should train fifty days every year. But such plans would be too burdensome and expensive. It would be sufficient for them to train an afternoon every week, including two days of a general review, one in the spring and another in the fall, of each regiment. This would amount in the whole but to twenty-seven days in a year, and would hinder but very little business. There would not, perhaps, be one acre of land less ploughed and improved, if such a plan were to take place, than there is now. And there would be no need of any other expenses more than if they were at home. It is not harder work to handle the musket than the flail, the axe, the plough, or the hoe. If the Colonies should adopt some such plan, they will always be able and ready to repel any sudden invasion. Indeed, the very report of such a plan of training Militia would prevent any nation from invading us, where there are no riches to plunder, and where they must be sure to be knocked on the head. No need at all then of ten thousand Regulars, debauchees and cowards, to protect the Colonies against the whole world.

AN INDEPENDENT WHIG.

REPLY TO REMARKS OF RATIONALIS, ON "COMMON SENSE."

New-York, April 18, 1776.

This writer censures Common Sense as unjust in representing Monarchical Government as disapproved by Heaven, and endeavours to show, on the contrary, that it is equally approved with any other form that men may devise. A little attention to the Scriptures will clear this matter. God foresaw that his nation would in time insist upon having a King, like the other nations, and, therefore, in his laws, gave rules for him to govern himself by. Deuteronomy xvii, 14-20: "He shall not multiply horses to himself, neither shall he multiply wives to himself, that his heart turn not away; neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold. He shall write himself a copy of the law, and he shall read therein all the days of his life, that he may learn to fear the Lord his God—to keep all the words of this law, and these statutes to do them; that his heart may not be lifted up above his brethren, and that he turn not aside from the commandment to the right hand or to the left." Kings thus governing themselves and their people, in the fear of the Lord, are accepted with him, and loved and honoured by their subjects. Had Britain's King done so, America would have been in peace this day. Where will you find such a King? They are all turned aside and apostatized. How are they lifted above their brethren? When Israel, weary of the moderate and gracious government God had hitherto exercised over them by their Judges and Elders, and, stimulated by worldly ambition, insisted on having Kings over them, like the rest of the nations; God, foreseeing that so great, perpetuated power, in the hands of one man and one family, would prove very intoxicating and corrupting, too heavy for the weakness of the human mind to support with honour; and that Government, thrown into this form, would, in fact, soon degenerate into an oppressing tyranny, and so prove a curse instead of a blessing,—directed Samuel to lay this before the people, as an argument to dissuade them from insisting upon having their demand of a Kingly Government granted. He did so, and has painted a covetous, greedy, proud, and oppressive tyrant, lifting himself up above his brethren, to the life. See 1 Samuel viii, 10–18. The people still persisting in their demand, God condescended to it, and in granting their request, they found their punishment. “I gave them a King in mine anger.”—Hosea xiii, 11.

Thus, as a fool, they prepared a rod for their own backs. This, then, is the result; if a people, in forming a plan of Government, will consult the Supreme Ruler of the nations, his advice to them is not to establish Monarchical Government, because it easily and naturally degenerates into tyranny; but if they choose it, he suffers it to be so, and uses their Kings as an iron rod in chastening the apostate rebel nations, and by the heavy strokes of these iron rods, he dashes the earthen vessels one after another. The Kingdoms both of Israel and Judah were ruined by their Kings; so have numberless nations been; so will Britain probably be; so will America soon be, unless God, in great mercy, now saves her, as he did David from the paw of the bear and the mouth of the lion. The plain truth is, the nations, by presumptuously trusting too great power in the hands of one man and one family, have caught a Tartar. All history confirms this. Considering the weak and disordered state of human nature, no other can be expected.

Common Sense objects against the hereditary Kings, that this is a frequent occasion of great and destructive contentions. To this, Rationalis opposes the strifes and contentions that arise about the choice of Kings in elective Monarchies, and instances Poland. The Polish Kings are elective, but by whom? Not by the body of the people, nor by men deputed by the people to choose a King for them; but by a set of great men in the nation, who are independent on the people, have usurped a tyranny over them, and are generally pensioners to neighbouring Kings, who interfere by these their creatures, and frequently by their armies too, in the choice of a new King for Poland. No wonder, then, that that Kingdom is thrown into great commotions on these occasions. The manifest truth is, that, when the Crowns of Kingdoms are invested with exorbitant powers, and decorated with great riches and high prerogatives, dangerous to the rights and liberties of the subjects, they become objects of greedy, coveting desire, and a bone of frequent furious contention amongst great ones, whether they are hereditary or elective; and the people are sure to suffer and bleed, whoever bears away the prize.

Rationalis complains that Common Sense argues from the abuse of the British Constitution, to its insufficiency to secure its grand aim—the liberty and happiness of the people; and says, if the several branches of the Legislature would be faithful, the British Constitution would be the best in the world. In this he does not do Common Sense common justice. He points out the errors and defects inherent in the Constitution itself, (some of them, but not all,) the chief of which is, the exorbitant powers and dangerous prerogatives given to the Crown, and shows that the great abuses of the Government naturally arise out of the errors and defects in the Constitution itself.

The Bill of Rights has limited the Crown a little, but not enough to secure the interest and liberty of the subjects. Had the limitations proposed by the long Parliament to Charles I. taken place, it would have been happy for the nation. That is a bad Constitution indeed, under which the rulers, though ever so faithful, cannot serve the interest of the nation. That is a good and wisely constructed Constitution, by virtue of which the governing powers have full liberty and authority to do all the good to the people they wish them to do, and at the same time are made liable to be restrained and controlled by them, whenever they attempt to sacrifice the publick interest to their private passions, and whereby the subjects have reserved in their own hands full power to remove corrupt and dangerous rulers, from year to year, and put worthier in their places. Such is the Constitution proposed to America. The British Constitution furnishes no such effectual security against a corrupt Parliament and Administration. The liberty of making a new choice of members for a House of Commons once in seven years, as things are managed, is of no advantage, is no real security to the people. The nation might as well leave the nomination of their Representatives in Parliament to the King, as they do the nomination of their Bishops; for he does in effect nominate and secure a large majority as his creatures.

But Rationalis endeavours to frighten the people, and prejudice them against the proposed plan of American Government, by telling many frightful stories of the violent factions, confusions, and tyranny of Commonwealths, and instances Athens, Rome, and Carthage. These cities were once Commonwealths, in an imperfect, defective form. But many other cities, Provinces, and people, were conquered by them; especially the two last, stripped of their liberties, and subdued under their Government. These were not generally incorporated as members of the Commonwealth, invested with equal rights and liberties; but the ruling cities exercised an arbitrary government over them, like what Britain is now attempting over America; reserving to themselves the power of the purse and the sword, and the disposal of the great offices. No wonder, then, these ruling cities were rent with factious strifes among their members, and tyrants to their conquered subjects. If the City of Philadelphia, or New-York, should form itself into a Commonwealth, and then conquer the whole Province, and bow it under her Government, doubtless she would rule as a tyrant, and be agitated and torn by great strifes among her own members, contending among themselves for offices and the spoils of a Province.

Rationalis also mentions the Commonwealth formed in England after Charles I. was cut off, as another instance to his purpose. He might as well have mentioned the conquest and tyranny of William I. over England. They that had the Government after Charles's death, proudly styled themselves the Commonwealth of England, but were not so; but only a party of mad enthusiasts and violent Independents, with a few Deists, formed in the Long Parliament, who have artfully got the Army into their power, usurped the Government of the nation, and ruled by the sword and arbitrary power. Their Government was a real tyranny. And when Cromwell usurped it from them, it was only an exchange of many joint tyrants for one.

Suppose, as the issue of the present war, the British Government in America is overthrown, and some little party among us, as for instance the Baptists, aided by the Army, should form themselves as a kind of Commonwealth, and violently assume and exercise sovereign dominion over all America, and arrogantly style themselves the Commonwealth of America, would this make them really so? Would not America, in this case, be really a conquered people, under the tyrant rule of the Baptists? To what purpose are such instances of the few, formed among themselves as a kind of Commonwealth, and exercising tyrant rule over the many, introduced to discredit such a genuine Commonwealth as is recommended to America, wherein all who are subject to its Government are constituent members of it, and have all equal rights, liberties, and privileges, and equal interest in its Government? They have no analogy or likeness to this plan.

Rationalis thinks the right time to declare for an independent Government is not yet come; that we ought yet to seek reconciliation; that if we cannot obtain safe terms, we should still fight on for them, till every brave man in America is slain. We shall do so before Britain will grant such terms; then, after that, if we cannot obtain them, and the aggressors call in foreign aid in this last extremity, we may do so too, and then declare. This brings to mind the old proverb, “After death call the Doctor.” Fight for an accommodation till all your brave men, who have courage to fight, are slain, then set up Independency. He knows it will then be too late. Yes, yes, fight down and slaughter all the sons of liberty, then the sons of slavery will have free liberty to subject their country to the conqueror’s iron yoke, and may, perhaps, share a very small part of her spoils as the reward of their villany. Will not America erect a superb monument in honour of this great master of reason, this wise counsellor?

When the people first came to Samuel, demanding a King, God said to him, Harken to their voice, yet protest solemnly unto them, (that in this they sin against the Lord to their own hurt,) and show them the manner of the King that shall reign over them; that is, what will in fact be the spirit and oppressive burden of Kingly Government. This is called the manner of the Kingdom. 2 Samuel x, 25. As Samuel had before told them how it would be if they put themselves under Kingly Government, so now, they persisting in their demand, and, in a spirit of unbelief, presumptuously despising all the consequences God had forewarned them of, and having received the Kingly Government which God gave them in his anger, as an instrument of chastising, with presumptuous shouting, Samuel repeats to them what he had foretold them before, and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the Lord, that it might remain a witness for God, that he had faithfully forewarned them of the oppressions and miseries they were bringing on themselves and their posterity, and a witness against them in the day when they should find this prediction verified upon them, and cry unto the Lord by reason of their grievous oppressions by the hand of their King, and not be heard.

As all Scripture is given for our instruction and warning, so this in particular is a speaking admonition to America now, when Heaven is opening a door of deliverance from such sore oppression, and the British Government, by their cruel and brutish treatment of her, has released her from all obligations of conscience, gratitude, or interest, to remain any longer subject to it, or dependant on it; and if now, (after all the cruel injuries we have suffered, and the greater we cannot but foresee,) we say nay, we will not be made free, but we will have a King, even Britain's King, to reign over us and over our children, we shall soon cry out, by reason of infinite oppressions, with a great and a bitter cry, and the Lord will not hear us in that day. How justly might he answer us, saying, I would have set you free, but you would not accept it; go cry to your King and tyrant rulers, whom you have chosen; let them deliver you.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, April 18, 1776.

SIR: Permit me, through you, to convey to the honourable Congress the sentiments of gratitude I feel for the high honour they have done me in the publick mark of approbation contained in your favour of the 2d instant, which came to hand last night. I beg you to assure them that it will ever be my highest ambition to approve myself a faithful servant of the publick, and that, to be in any degree instrumental in procuring to my American brethren a restitution of their just rights and privileges, will constitute my chief happiness.

Agreeable to your request, I have communicated, in general orders, to the officers and soldiers under my command, the thanks of Congress for their good behaviour in the service; and am happy in having such an opportunity of doing justice to their merit. They were, indeed, at first "a band of undisciplined husbandmen;" but it is (under God) to their bravery and attention to their duty that I am indebted for that success which has procured me the only reward I wish to receive—the affection and esteem of my countrymen. The medal intended to be presented to me by your honourable body, I shall carefully preserve as a memorial of their regard.

I beg leave to return you, sir, my warmest thanks for the polite manner in which you have been pleased to express their sentiments of my conduct; and am, with sincere esteem and respect, sir, yours and their most obedient and most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the President of Congress.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WARD.

New-York, April 18, 1776.

I received your favour of the 17th instant, in answer to Colonel Glover's application to you. I am of opinion that all accounts respecting the armed vessels should be paid by the Agents only; and as the trial of the prizes cannot be much longer deferred, they will have cash for the goods which may be condemned, in their hands, much more than sufficient to answer the demands upon them; if there is not a probability of this, you will be pleased to give a warrant for as much as will pay the wages due. The ship Jenny and the brigantine, both taken by Commodore Manly, (the former from London, the latter from Antigua, bound to Boston.) are, by what I can learn, proper vessels to be fitted out as cruisers. You will therefore, sir, have a person of knowledge and trust sent on board to examine them. If the report of them is such as they have been represented to me, you must have them purchased for account of the United Colonies. If Commodore Manly is in your neighbourhood his opinion of them must have weight; and if they are fit for the purpose, he will, of course, have his choice of them, and attend the fixing one of them out. His First Lieutenant can command the Hancock in the mean time. The sooner this is put in execution the better. Nothing material to inform you of from hence.

I am, &amp;c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Ward.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Committee of Safety, New-York, April 18, 1776.

SIR: Your recommendation of yesterday we took into consideration immediately on receipt of it; and, thereupon, framed the enclosed resolves and orders.

We cannot sufficiently thank your Excellency for your most delicate attention to the civil Government of this Colony, and beg leave to give you the strongest assurances that we most eagerly embrace this, as we shall every other, opportunity of co-operating with you in every measure which shall come recommended to us with the argument of public utility.

We are, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM PAULDING, Chairman.

To General Washington.

LORD STIRLING TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, April 18, 1776.

SIR: Thomas Vernon was some time since made prisoner on the evidence of one Craig, a copy of which I now enclose you, and I think was then examined by the Committee of Safety. The General desires me to transmit to you the enclosed letter from Vernon, and request that the Committee would make such further inquiry into the matter as will enable them to determine whether it be worth while to keep him any longer prisoner or not.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety of New-York.

CRAIG'S Examination relative to THOMAS VERNON, a prisoner.

Craig, lately a soldier in the First Regiment of Yorkers, declares that he was employed by one Vernon, a hatter of this city, to rig out a sloop the said Vernon had lately purchased by order of Governour Tryon, to be employed by the Governour as a tender or cutter, and occasionally to cruise in the North and East Rivers; that the said Vernon was to be supplied by the said Governour with swivels for the said sloop; that the said Craig went on board, with the said Vernon, of the Dutchess of Gordon, and there conversed with the Governour and the Attorneys General Kemp and Skinner, who urged him to be active in procuring as many men as possible, not only for the said sloop, but for the Asia and other men-of-war soon expected here; that above fifty or sixty soldiers, now in town, in the Continental service, were engaged by the said Vernon for the service of the Ministry.

March 12, 1776.

ELIHU MARVIN TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Orange County, April 18, 1776.

This Committee being informed that the four regiments ordered to be raised in this Province are not yet full, and it is the opinion of this Committee that there may be another company raised on the north side of the mountains, if warrants may be had; we therefore recommend Seth Marvin for a Captain, and Joshua Brown for First Lieutenant, as proper persons; and as the other two officers are not pitched upon yet, we promise, if blank warrants are sent here, to fill up the same for those we think to be proper persons.

I am, with respect, gentlemen, your humble servant.

By order of the Committee:

ELIHU MARVIN, Chairman.

To the Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York.

ELIHU MARVIN TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Orange County, April 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Committee of this County being met, and having considered several places for erecting a Powder-Mill, agreeable to the resolve of Congress, do approve of a place at or near John Carpenter's saw-mill, in the Precinct of Cornwall, in the County of Orange, near Graycourt, to be a convenient place; and Henry Wisner, Esq., and John Carpenter, do apply for recommendation; and this Committee do recommend the said Henry Wisner, Esq., and John Carpenter, both of Orange County, to be proper persons to build the same.

We are, gentlemen, your very humble servants.

Per order:

ELIHU MARVIN, Chairman.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-York.

ELIHU MARVIN TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Orange County, Oxford, April 18, 1776.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety for the Colony of NEW-YORK during the recess of Congress:

GENTLEMEN: The Committee of this County have been informed by Colonel William Allison, that the sum of two hundred pounds is allowed towards paying their Deputies for attendance in Congress during the course of their service; and as the money is wanting, I would, therefore, in the name of this Committee, desire that it might be sent up by the bearer, (Seth Marvin), together with your instructions for disbursing the same, if necessary.

I am, with respect, gentlemen, your humble servant,

ELIHU MARVIN, Chairman.

JEREMIAH CLARK TO TEUNIS CUYPER.

New-Cornwall, April 18, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I take this opportunity, per Lieutenant Roe, to inform you that we held our election to choose a Deputy for the next Convention, day before yesterday, and chose Archibald Little, Esq., for Cornwall Precinct. Who is chosen in Goshen I know not.

Sir, you may remember that, not long since, I wrote a line to the Committee in behalf of Lieutenant Roe. He is down now on the same business, and he wants to know what he may depend upon, as the season of the year is far advanced. I think if there is a vacancy he is as suitable a man for a Captain as I could recommend in the County. If it should be agreeable to you, I hope you will give him both your advice and assistance. If he should succeed, he will inform as to under officers.

Sir, pardon my boldness, and permit me, with great esteem, to subscribe myself your most humble servant,

JEREMIAH CLARK.

To Teunis Cooper, Esq., in Committee of Safety, New-York.

To the Honourable the Continental Congress.

The Petition of the Committee of Safety, and Officers of the Militia of KING's District, in ALBANY County, and Province of NEW-YORK, together with part of the Committee and Militia Officers of the east part of CLAVE-RACK District, in said County, also the east part on MA-NOR RENNELAERWICK District, in said County, humbly sheweth:

That your Petitioners live in that part of Albany County that adjoins to the Province of Massachusetts-Bay, and is peopled from the New-England Colonies.

That your Petitioners have, from the commencing of hostilities by the British Troops at Lexington and Concord, been attentive to the preservation of the rights and liberties of America, and particularly attended the rules of Congress therein.

That your Petitioners did, on the earliest notice of the country's want of men to withstand the violence of the British Troops, array themselves in military order for that purpose; particularly at the time when Colonel (now Brigadier-General) Arnold was on his way to surprise and take possession of the important posts of Ticonderoga and Crown-Point, (on intelligence obtained,) Colonel Arnold did, by his letter, send back for men to come immediately to his assistance, a copy of said letter being sent to that part of the County before described, your Petitioners, in Militia Companies, met for the purpose of gathering a number of men that were willing to go to the assistance of said Colonel Arnold, on which there did voluntarily appear to the number of one hundred men or more, to go to his assistance. Part of which did immediately march to Albany, there expecting to be furnished with some guns and ammunition, (as they were not all furnished,) and at Albany did make application to the Committee of Safety for the County, who were then sitting; but said Committee not having the sentiments of the Government or country in regard to taking possession of said forts, did not at that time think proper to furnish said men, on which said men did return, and thereon the others did not at that time go forward, yet held themselves in readiness for the purpose if wanted.

That the said volunteers, with a number of others joining, did, a short time after, at the desire of the Committee of the County, (on the resolves of Congress,) proceed to Albany, and from thence to Ticonderoga, in three Captains' companies, under the direction of the Committee aforesaid, and did continue in the country's service until the last winter, when they were dismissed; after which, under the direction of the General in Canada, out of the three companies, one was formed to continue in service through the winter and part of the spring.

Besides the aforesaid companies, there went one Captain's company, and part of two or more to join the Army before Boston, from the parts before mentioned. And your Petitioners think they are warranted, from the conduct of the aforesaid companies through that campaign, to say that it was to the honour of their country.

In addition to what is now mentioned, of the readiness and service, &c., on the news of General Montgomery's repulse and death before Quebeck, the last winter, and want of troops in that department, there immediately turned out and went part of a company from the aforesaid King's District, (joining with Captain Goodrich's Company, of Massachusetts-Bay;) and many more would have engaged, but distance from home, the season of the year, and shortness of the preparation for leaving home, prevented them.

Your Petitioners would now inform that, since the aforesaid dismissal, the greater part of said men remain at home, and the others expected soon, as their time is now expired; and that, in the raising the battalion in this Province this spring, there has been no appointment of officers in these parts, (as a quota of men with the County were in service,) and the people desire if it could be, they may be formed into a battalion, with officers in the parts before-mentioned; to accomplish which, the good people before-mentioned did request the Committee first mentioned, and the officers of the Militia, to meet and inquire into the practicability of forming a battalion, or part of a battalion, as aforesaid; and if they found there were men who might be spared, and who were willing to enter into their country's necessary service, sufficient for that purpose, to pursue such ways and means as to accomplish the same.

On which desire the Committee and militia aforesaid did meet, and, on inquiry, found, according to the readiness manifested among the people, there might be a battalion, or part of a battalion raised, of good and proper men that are heartily engaged for their country's good, accordingly petitioned the General Committee of the County aforesaid, desiring their assistance in procuring the same, (as the battalion to be raised in the County and Government were officered;) but said Committee was pleased to give your Petitioners a negative answer. Since which, your Petitioners have resolved to lay before your honourable body their readiness to enter into the Continental service; and therefore have laid before you this their Petition, and herewith send one of the members of the Committee of the aforesaid King's District, and desire that the subject-matter of this Petition may be heard, and the privilege of a battalion, or part of a battalion, with officers thereto, from the parts before mentioned, be directed to be raised for the Continental service, if wanted, under the direction of such person or persons as your honourable body shall appoint.

And your Petitioners in duty are bound to pray.

Signed by order of the aforesaid Committee and officers, in behalf of themselves and the people aforesaid.

Dated King's District, Albany County, Province of New-York, the 18th day of April, 1776.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM FORT GEORGE, DATED APRIL 18, 1776.

I arrived at this place last Tuesday afternoon, and expected to find the lakes open, but am disappointed. General Thomas left this place yesterday morning, and intended to break his way through; and this day about forty batteaus went off with the same intention, and carried about five hundred men; the residue of the troops here, (about three hundred,) and the cannon, (four thirty-two-pounders, four twenty-four-pounders, four eighteen, and some nine, with eight tons of powder,) go off in the morning. The batteaus which went away this day, we just hear, have got above twelve miles. Colonel St. Clair's Regiment is at Fort Edward, fourteen miles below this, and are ordered here to-morrow.

This day arrived, with their interpreter, (Mr. Deane,) the Indian Delegates of the seven tribes in Canada, from the Congress of the Six Nations, at Onondaga. I was introduced to, and had the honour to take them by the hand. Deane says they have resolved to observe a strict neutrality, and have appointed deputies to attend our Indian Commissioners at Albany, and may be daily expected there.

I write this from the spot where the battle was fought and Dieskau taken prisoner, by Sir William Johnson, and within a quarter of a mile of Fort William Henry, which Montcalm took.
